U.S. LOANS BRING COTTON FAMINE DESPITE PLENTY

MillsTurn to Imports for Needed Supply.

New York, May 13.—[Special.]—The federal government is holding more than 11 million bales of cotton [500 pounds to a bale] in warehouses as security for loans to planters, but--

1. Cotton is being purchased in Brazil by American textile mills and shipped to the United States.

2. Textile mill owners in Lancashire, England, have cabled to the United States department of agriculture calling attention to the difficulty the English mills are having in getting American cotton.

Two weeks ago several American textile mills, figuring there would be a shortage of cotton if the government holdings remain intact, contracted for 5,000 bales of the Brazilian production. Experts hold their fears were well grounded—that all the "free," or purchaseable cotton, in the country may be used up before the 1939 crop is available.

The first 500 bales under this contract arrived in New York a few days ago. Government customs inspectors examined it. They discovered it was of a higher grade than the buyers expected and subject to an added 2 cents a pound duty. The buyers refused to pay this excise and the 500 bales were sent on to Liverpool.

Relief Only Temporary.

For the time being the American cotton market was spared the competition of Brazilians. But there are 4,500 bales still to come and much of it may be of grades on which the American buyers will pay the duties.

How the government and the planters created the great hoard of bales and stimulated competition from abroad in a product usually exported in huge quantities is a long story.

It began with the government deciding what the minimum price for cotton should be. Then loans at that figure were offered farmers.

Big Yield for Growers.

Last year was a big one in the cotton fields. The government took in seven or eight million bales, lending growers something over 8 cents a pound on it.

This was more than they could get on the open market. Interest and warehousing charges have increased the investment in this cotton, and now it is estimated that producers will have to get a net of 8.8 cents a pound to cover all charges. Naturally they want a little profit, too, and it is figured they must have from 9 to 9.25 cents in the south to sell. This figure is so near current market quotations that some cotton came out of government stocks this week, but not enough to obviate the shortage fear.

This fear is based on cold figures.

Figures, Not Fancy.

The total amount of cotton in the United States on April 1 was 15,774,267 bales. The government warehouses held 11,316,267 bales. That left something like 4,500,000 "free" bales to carry the trade over into the new crop.

Normally, exports from now until Aug. 1 would be 1,500,000 bales. Domestic consumption and mill stocks—mills can't get down to their last bale if they are to operate steadily—would require at least 3,000,000 bales before the new cotton crop comes in. At best the "free" cotton supply is a standoff with the demand--assuming the government cotton is not liquidated.

Processors Fear Future.

Mill owners are uncomfortable. The president of a mill chain in North Carolina said today that unless some way is found to get cotton at a reasonable price, the Brazilian experiment may reach huge proportions. Another operator asserted he had purchased 6,000 bales for delivery in July. "I'm afraid to wait any longer," he said.

The British spinners voiced their fears of a shortage of American cotton in a communication last week to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. In the communication the Master Cotton Spinners' federation said the Lancashire spinners were having increasing difficulty in getting American supplies.

The New Deal cotton loan program has resulted in a tremendous loss of export trade. Exports in the last year dropped 2,000,000 bales. The loss in recent months is even greater. Importation is only the last of a series of blows struck at the harassed cotton producer.

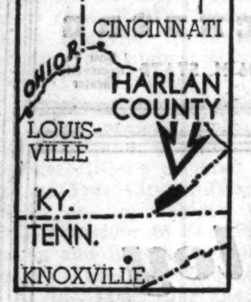
GUARD MINERS WHO RETURN TO KENTUCKY JOBS

Czar Lewis Warned Against Invasion.

Frankfort, Ky., May 13.—[Special.]—Kentucky National Guardsmen were moving into the coal mining areas along the state's eastern border tonight. They were under orders to prevent rioting or violence against miners and mine owners who want to operate in opposition to John L. Lewis' dictatorial command that "these mines must be kept closed."



Map locates Harlan county mine area protected by Kentucky troops.

Six operators' associations in eastern Kentucky and other southern Appalachian regions today refused to sign an agreement with the United Mine Workers of America, backbone of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and severed their connections with fifteen northern and western mine owners who bowed under the government's bludgeon and made union shop agreements [which they previously had rejected] with Lewis.

About 300,000 miners are covered by the agreements signed today, while 45,000 to 70,000 are employed normally by the mines rejecting the pact.

Warns Trouble Makers.

Gov. A. B. Chandler, who issued the mobilization order for the troops, made it plain that he will not permit outsiders to come into Kentucky and foment civil war. There had been threats, it was reported, that U. M. W. members and other sympathizers planned to cross the Virginia and West Virginia lines and prevent the mines, particularly in Harlan county, from reopening.

Gov. A. B. Chandler.

"No one from the outside," said the governor, "can tell our people when to work and when not to work. No one can come into this state and make trouble. The troops are on a peaceful mission. Adjutant General Lee W. McClain understands there is to be no restraint of men who want to work and nothing done to force men to work. The miners' union may carry on peaceful picketing if it wishes."

Resume Work Tomorrow.

Indications were that the mines, shut down for six weeks while the owners were trying to reach a settlement with the U. M W., will be operating on a large scale at Harlan on Monday.

The governor's action was a direct answer to Lewis. With his czardom saved in his New York negotiations by the action of New Deal leaders who cracked down on the operators with threats to support the miners with all the vast relief machinery of the government, Lewis took a high tone today when fifteen of the twenty-one operators' associations in the country's bituminous fields signed up.

"Sound policy requires that those [other] mines be kept closed," he said, referring to pits owned by members of the six dissenting associations. Learning of Gov. Chandler's action in protecting the Kentucky miners, Lewis declared: "Soldiers will not operate those mines."

1,000 More Await Call.

The first troopers will reach Harlan tomorrow morning. By Monday, it is expected, the full contingent of 550 enlisted men and thirty-seven officers will be on hand. They will be commanded by Brig. Gen. Ellerbe Carter. The governor is ready to call out another 1,000 men if necessary.

During the day the governor held a telephone conversation with Gov. Homer Holt of West Virginia. The West Virginia miners are of the Lewis forces and their employers

THAT BOY UP ON ROOF IS GIRL'S ADMIRER ON HIS WAY TO CALL

Waltham, Mass., May 13.—(AP)—The girl insisted "He's my boy friend and he can come into my home any way he wants to," but Paul Leach, 20, was fined $10 for disturbing the peace. Neighbors summoned police after seeing Leach walking on the roof of the girl's house, en route to a second story window through which, he told the court, she had given him permission to enter.

JUDGE TO TEST ROAD IN CHARGE AGAINST CHIEF

The outcome of a charge of reckless driving against Police Chief Henry Domianus of Hinsdale will depend upon a personal investigation by Justice of the Peace Richard Blakey of Downers Grove.

The charge was preferred recently against Chief Domianus by James Kavana, 414 North Washington street, Hinsdale, a real estate dealer. He obtained a warrant before Justice Blakey. A preliminary hearing was held yesterday.

Kavana testified that he saw Chief Domianus drive from one side of County Line road to the other. The chief admitted this, but explained he was trying to dodge numerous holes in the pavement. Justice Blakey said he would drive over the road himself to see if the condition justified zigzag driving. He will give his ruling tomorrow.

BarsEncounter a Prohibition That Prohibits

BY JAMES DOHERTY.

It was conceded rather sadly by the drinking gentry yesterday that the city ordinance requiring taverns to close at 1 a. m. weekdays and 2 a. m. Sundays is at last being enforced. Ward committeemen, police captains, and drink dispensers, who have a direct interest in the situation, reached this conclusion. How long the enforcement would continue was a subject of debate.

The 18th amendment to prevent drinking never was regarded as seriously here as was our city ordinance yesterday. National prohibition didn't prohibit; Police Commissioner Allman does.

Barrooms Buzz with Talk.

The question of what Mayor Kelly has in mind was the talk in all barrooms. Allman indicated his sincerity, the barroom debaters said, when he suspended Sergt. James Coleman of the first district. Coleman has been rated higher than any four precinct captains by Ald. Michael [Hinky Dink] Kenna, who has ruled the 1st ward for fifty years and just last month returned to his old seat in the city council. Suspension of Coleman was regarded as a slap at Ald. Kenna.

Coleman lost a day's work and a day's pay along with other policemen of the 1st district who enforce the laws and ordinances in the 1st ward. Presumably—Allman never explains—Coleman had overlooked a barroom or two that had lights on when lights should have been out.

Mayor Kelly has not explained, either. The closing ordinance has been on the books since 1933, when the 21st amendment nullified the 18th. Occasionally it has been enforced. Some districts have been closed, while others have remained open.

The Question Is: Why?

So, in all sections of the city yesterday the drinking folks were asking: Why?

The answer that satisfied some was that Mayor Kelly and Commissioner Allman had found taverns were growing more lawless daily. Too many misdeeds have been reported recently as incidents of tavern night life.

Some police argue that there are too many drink dispensaries in the city. The number of licenses issued is 9,290, which includes various sorts of places. In the East Chicago avenue police district alone there are 305 licensed taverns. Nearly every tavern has a radio, piano, or mechanical playing device and a girl to shake dice with the customers.

Complaints to police about singing and shouting in the early morning hours have been increasing. Roistering in residential districts has become too common. The season when bedroom windows are open nights is at hand. Maybe these factors are back of the closing order.

Night Club Lights Bright.

The night clubs, which buy amusement licenses—they cost $375 to $1,200 a year—as well as restaurant licenses, keep open, but they are not shown any special consideration. On Chicago's near north side the cafe lights shine brightly for the table trade. Their bars are no different from tavern bars, which buy city licenses costing $600. But police were not snooping around the cafe tables to see what the folks were drinking—and it is not known if they intend doing so.

The one clear fact in the drive remains Kelly and Allman can close the town at 1 a. m. if they want to, and for the time being, at least, they do.

RING FROM CLOUDS HITS WOMAN'S HEAD; SHE'S $325 RICHER

Sacramento, Cal., May 13.—(AP)—Two weeks ago Mrs. Anna Briggs, 54 years old, felt a sharp thump on the head while working in her garden. At her feet fell a signet ring bearing the initials W. S. An airplane droned overhead.

Today Dr. W. Stanley of Chicago advised her the ring was his, that it was a present to him from former President Theodore Roosevelt, and that as a reward he would give her either $325 or a trip to the New York fair. Mrs. Briggs, who supports an invalid husband, said she would accept the cash.

Dr. Stanley said he had removed the ring, placed it on a ledge of the plane, and forgotten it.

Kennedy Drives to Country for Visit with Chamberlain

LONDON, May 13.—(AP)—Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy of the United States drove to Chequers today to spend the week-end with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain in his country home. It was understood they would review the international situation and discuss Britain's policy for the future of Palestine, which was expected to be announced probably next Wednesday.

Icebergs Delay Royal Couple's Arrival a Day

ABOARD EMPRESS OF AUSTRALIA, May 13.—[Canadian Press.]—Dense fog still held the liner Empress of Australia in the iceberg region of the North Atlantic late today, making certain that King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain would be a day late arriving at Quebec for their tour of Canada and the United States. Under the revised schedule they will not reach Quebec until Tuesday morning.

Capt. A. R. Meikle.
[Acme Photo.]

The Empress was held by fog all day and late tonight still was motionless. Cold penetrating mists floated across the ship from the ice field. The sea was absolutely calm. The ship at 9 p. m. [Chicago time] was about 230 miles east of Cape Race, and the fog was so dense one could hardly see for the length of the ship. Between daybreak and noon she made only thirty-five miles.

King and Queen See Bergs.

Once, when the specially assigned lookout men sighted an iceberg directly in the path of the liner, the ship's engines were quickly reversed by orders of Capt. A. R. Meikle.

The king and queen were on the promenade deck at the time and were able to see a whole floe of bergs through the fog. With deck blankets wrapped around them because of the sudden change in temperature, their majesties stood by the rail and watched the scene.

Most of the time, however, the icebergs and even the nearby escort cruisers Glasgow and Southampton were invisible from the fog-shrouded decks of the Empress. At times it was too thick even to see the water from the decks.

1,000 Miles from Quebec.

The Empress now has more than consumed the two days' leeway allowed her because of British naval precautions in the iceberg zone during this season of fog. She still is about 1,000 miles out from Quebec.

The king's surgeon, Capt. H. White, and another surgeon, Dr. Joseph Maxwell, today operated on a man aboard the convoying cruiser Glasgow, who was stricken with acute appendicitis. A boat manned by bluejackets came alongside after luncheon and the two physicians climbed down a rope ladder and into the boat as the king and queen watched. When the physicians returned they said the operation had been successful.

Upsets Program Plans.

QUEBEC, May 13.—(AP)—The forced 24 hour delay in the arrival of King George and Queen Elizabeth at Quebec upset today intricate arrangements of the ceremonial program in eastern Canada and threatened Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King with a political problem which he solved quickly.

Originally due to reach Quebec at 9:30 a. m. Monday [Chicago time], the vessel carrying the royal couple now is not due until Tuesday morning.

An Unusual Problem.

At Ottawa Prime Minister King faced one of the most unusual problems in his long political career in handling the delay in the epochal royal tour, for which all Canada has been preparing for months.

The first suggestion, involving elimination of the night their majesties were to spend at the ancient citadel at Quebec, roused the feelings of French-Canadians, who take pride in being the first to welcome the king and queen to Canada.

Keep Quebec Program Intact.

Rather than face the ire of Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec province over major changes in the arrangements, the Canadian government quickly decided, and Prime Minister King made the announcement to parliament, that the welcoming ceremonies at Quebec would be carried out in every detail despite the delay of the arrival of the king and queen. After the Quebec celebration their majesties will proceed to Montreal for a day.

The royal visit to Ottawa, the Canadian capital, will be cut from four days to three, to make up for the late arrival in Quebec. Their majesties will be in Ottawa May 18, 19, and 20.

FRANCE BOOED AS DUCE TALKS TO TURIN CROWD

Paris Shifts Fleet to Tunis Waters.

TURIN, Italy, May 14 [Sunday].—(AP)—Premier Mussolini today accused the "great democracies" of having launched "war—war on the economic ground" against Italy and Germany.

Il Duce declared that Italy and Germany did not believe war was necessary to solve Europe's problems but warned that the axis powers with their bloc of 150,000,000 people would not "remain inactive" in face of attacks upon them.

He said Italy and Germany would "march together to give Europe the peace with justice which is the profound desire of all peoples."

Charges Democracies Not Sincere.

Mussolini said the democracies were not sincere in working for peace and that they thought they were weakening Italy by their "white war," or economic drive.

"But wars are not won by gold alone," he declared.

Il Duce spoke before a cheering crowd of a quarter million in an address in Turin's main square, opening a week's tour of the front regions which border on France.

There are means of solving Europe's problems "without recourse to the sword," he declared.

"Millions of men, perhaps hundreds of millions all over the world," Mussolini said, "were asking, 'will there be war or peace?'"

Germany Agrees, He Says.

Then he gave his answer to that question. He said that the point of view he expressed was also that of Germany.

He said the Italian-German military alliance, which was concluded at Milan a week ago, would be signed this month in Berlin.

Speaking of "strategists of the near frontier [France]," the duce was interrupted by a terrific booing during which were heard shouts of "Tunisia."

Mussolini said these strategists were talking of an easy advance through Piedmont and called on history to confound this "ridiculous" idea.

"Neither Germany nor Italy have subtracted one square foot of land or one citizen from the great democracies," he said.

FRANCE MOVES WARSHIPS

PARIS, May 13.—(AP)—France tonight held its military forces ready on land and sea in preparation for what diplomatic circles considered likely to be a week-end of heightened international tension.

The army was on the alert in the Maginot zone along the eastern frontier across from German fortifications which Reichsfuehrer Hitler and high Nazi officers were reported to have decided suddenly to inspect early next week.

A strong detachment of the Mediterranean fleet moved late today into Tunisian waters on the eve of the speech Premier Mussolini of Italy is to deliver at Turin tomorrow. The fleet movement coincided with reports that Il Duce would speak violently on strained Italian-French relations.

Premier Sees Naval Chiefs.

During the two hours which it took French warships to take up positions in the Bay of Sebra at France's great naval base at Bizerte, Tunisia, Premier Edouard Daladier was conferring with Navy Minister Cesar Campinchi and Vice Admiral Jean Darlan, commander in chief of the navy.

Darlan had just returned to Paris from an inspection of the French Atlantic fleet, which was being held to its base at Brest.

The German fleet, returning from its maneuvers in Spanish waters near Gibraltar, at the entrance to the Mediterranean, was believed to be steaming up the Atlantic coast.

The French squadron, which was shifted to Tunisia, one of the French ruled territories in which Mussolini has asked increased Italian rights, had been on a quiet patrol mission in the western Mediterranean during the visit of the German fleet.

The squadron was led by four of France's newest cruisers, sister ships built specifically to offset new German warships. They are La Salissonnière, the Jean de Vienne, the Marsellaise, and the Emile Bertin. There also were eight destroyers, which ordinarily are based at Toulon.

As the warships steamed to Tunisia and Il Duce prepared to speak, French observers recalled that it was just a year ago today that Premier Mussolini abruptly interrupted friendship negotiations with France. Since that time tension between France and Italy has increased steadily, with the Fascists demanding a share of France's colonial empire.

French diplomatic circles were cheered by reports from Tokio of new evidences that Japan was reluctant to pledge close military coöperation with Germany and Italy.

Dispatches said that while the Japanese army was ready to coöperate with the axis powers, the navy, which would bear the brunt of any conflict with powers outside Asia, was opposed to any closer ties with European nations than the anti-comintern pact.

Rome and Berlin Dissatisfied.

Premier Daladier's declaration of French policy before the French chamber of deputies Thursday, in which he said France would mobilize more men if the international tension did not ease, was said by these sources to have strengthened Japanese opponents of European involvement.

Both Rome and Berlin, according to information received by the French foreign ministry, are far from satisfied with the Japanese attitude. Germany and Italy feel, French observers said, that Japan's success in the far east would not have been possible if they had not kept France and Britain occupied by a series of European crises.

RENEW CLAIMS

ROME, May 13.—(AP)—France again became the target of Fascist press attacks today as Premier Mussolini left for Turin to make an address tomorrow which some sources expected might decide future relations between France and Italy.

In some diplomatic quarters it was thought that Mussolini, in his speech before a Turin massmeeting, might give France a last chance to settle Italy's claims against it peaceably.

In recent days the Italian press has been calling upon both France and Britain to take steps toward settling Europe's open problems—in which it includes Italian colonial aspirations—before it is too late.

Makes Demands on Tunisia.

Newspapers have mentioned Fascist demands on Djibouti, on the French owned railroad from that Gulf of Aden port to Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia, and on Tunisia, and for part control of the Suez canal.

After the Turin address Il Duce is scheduled to start on a week's tour of the Piedmont region, which borders on France, inspecting military establishments, troop concentrations and public works. Reichsfuehrer Hitler also may be making a tour of Germany's western fortifications at the same time.

Diplomats here attached importance to the apparent summons of Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering to Germany from a Mediterranean cruise that had been expected to include Spain. He left Leghorn by special train for Germany today after debarking from the motor ship Huascaran.

Speculate on Possible Events.

Goering, who has spent the greater part of the past two months in San Remo, on the Italian Riviera, was called back to Germany just before the dissolution of Czecho-Slovakia and the entry of German troops into Bohemia-Moravia two months ago. He was called back a second time several weeks later when the Polish-German situation became acute.

In view of the close coöperation between the Rome-Berlin axis partners, diplomats wondered whether the German air chief's return this time might be connected with events which may follow Mussolini's address.

The newspaper Corriere Padano of Ferrara, commenting on the recent speeches of Premier Daladier of France and Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain, said British-French policy, while nourishing Polish chauvenism, has placed the peace of Europe and of the world in peril. It called Daladier's speech Thursday to the French chamber of deputies uselessly provocative and devoid of any realistic sense.

FRENCH FOREIGN CHIEF INSISTS ALLIES WILL KEEP THEIR PROMISES

SOUTHAMPTON, England, May 13.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet of France declared today that Great Britain and France would keep their word and honor their signature to pledges of security to the smaller nations of Europe.

Bonnet flew from Paris to address a luncheon here of the British federation of the alliance francaise. He emphasized British-French unity and said Premier Edouard Daladier of France had stated their common policy perfectly in declaring they refused to submit to domination but did not bar coöperation with any one.

Bonnet dealt at length with what he called France's speedy awakening to the responsibilities of rearmament after the Munich conference last September. He referred to the lengthened work week in French factories and to the willing response of those called to the colors and asserted that among all France's millions of workers only 27 were on strike.

CHARGES NAZIS WITH CANADIAN TERROR REIGN

KITCHENER, Ont., May 13.—[Canadian Press.]—Max Strauss of Winnipeg told the German-Canadian People's league convention here today there was evidence that the Nazi Gestapo [secret police] was at work in Canada intimidating and beating Germans who did not conform to the Nazi pattern.

He said most German organizations in Canada were affiliated with and controled by the league for Germans in foreign countries. He said this league had headquarters in Stuttgart, Germany.

Strauss charged that spies for foreign countries are threatening retribution for any Germans who do not fall in line with their beliefs. When unable to coerce Canadian Germans, he said, the spy groups have taken vengeance on relatives still in Germany.

POLES PROTEST BAN BY NAZIS ON PILSUDSKI RITES

Newspapers Raise Outcry Against Insult.

(An analysis of Poland's air strength is to be found in today's Graphic Section.)

WARSAW, May 13.—(AP)—An authoritative source tonight said a Polish protest to the senate of the free city of Danzig, together with protests in the Polish press, could be regarded as a serious warning to Germany that Poland intended to protect its full rights in the free city.

The protests were made against the action of the Danzig senate, which is controled by Nazis, in refusing permission to Poles in the free city to hold a public observance yesterday of the fourth anniversary of the death of Marshal Josef Pilsudski.

Charge Poland Was Insulted.

A Danzig dispatch said the government's protest was delivered to Arthur Greiser, president of the senate, by Marion Chodacki, the Polish commissioner. He received the reply that no written request had been made for a Pilsudski memorial observance and it seemed unwise to hold an open air meeting in view of the strained situation.

The Polish press also condemned as an insult to Poland the breaking of a Danzig book store window behind which rested a black draped photograph of Pilsudski.

"Poland intends to protect its rights in Danzig," an authoritative source said. "These rights include free and unhampered development of the Polish minority there. Incidents such as occurred Friday are not consistent with the freedom and rights of the Polish minority."

Seen as Policy Statement.

This statement was interpreted as more a declaration of general policy than as an indication that Poland was contemplating some direct action concerning the free city, which Reichsfuehrer Hitler demands be returned to Germany.

The officially inspired newspaper Kurjer Poranny interpreted the action of the Danzig senate as an admission of inability to exercise government. It said the question had been raised whether the senate deliberately was denying the rights of Poles or whether it was unable to maintain discipline.

"In either case," the newspaper said, "the present situation cannot be maintained."

ROTHSCHILD, SET FREE BY HITLER, RESTS IN FRANCE

PARIS, May 13.—[U. P.]—Baron Louis Rothschild, Austrian financier released yesterday by Nazi secret police at Vienna, left today for an undisclosed destination in the country. It was said that he wanted a long period of rest.

Baron Rothschild, who came from Austria to the home of his brother, Eugene, and the latter's American wife—the former Catherine Wolff of Philadelphia—refused to discuss reports that the family had been bankrupted by his detention.

Reporters who met the baron when he arrived in Paris on the Vienna train heard only his remark that he would have to learn how to live all over again.

HITLER TO VISIT FRONTIER FORTS; SEEN AS ILL OMEN

Diplomats Call Tour 'Demonstrative.'

BERLIN, May 13.—(AP)—Reichsfuehrer Hitler tonight was reported to be planning to go to Godesberg early next week and make that little Rhineland city the starting point of a "demonstrative" inspection of fortifications on Germany's western frontier.

Informed sources said the Fuehrer also would inspect eastern frontier fortifications to remind Poland as well as the western powers of Germany's defensive strength.

Hitler left Munich for Nuremberg shortly after noon today to inspect the building being erected there for the use of Nazi party conferences. Accompanying him was his personal architect, Prof. Albert Speer.

Recall Parley over Czechs.

From Nuremberg, it was reported here and at Godesberg, he will start for the Rhineland. Godesberg was the center of world-wide attention last September when Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain flew there to discuss with the Fuehrer the fate of Czecho-Slovakia, which Germany subsequently took over.

Developments after the Hitler-Chamberlain talks at Godesberg were entirely satisfactory to Germany. Consequently, it was being said in diplomatic quarters tonight that the Fuehrer's projected visit there was just as "demonstrative" as the decision to take another look at the formidable line of forts which face France and Belgium.

Many Leaders to Participate.

Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering returned to Berlin tonight after a vacation in Italy and a cruise in the Mediterranean. Earlier Hitler received a lengthy report from Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, his chief of army staff, on his talks with Italian military chiefs. Von Brauchitsch will accompany Hitler on his inspection of the fortifications.

The demonstrative character of the forthcoming tour was shown by the fact that all reichsleiter, meaning top Nazis in charge of main subdivisions of the Nazi movement, and all gau, or district leaders, will accompany the party.

Expect Hitler to Speak.

Although there was no official confirmation, invited guests were expecting Hitler to join them somewhere along the route, if not throughout the trip. They said they expected him to speak at Saarbruecken. The extension of the western fortifications to include the districts of Saarbruecken and Aachen now is practically completed.

Persons in the know said Hitler might decide to use the Saarbruecken platform to answer Prime Minister Chamberlain and Premier Daladier. They admitted, however, that nothing definite had been told them yet on this point.

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop returned to his desk in Berlin from Milan.

REPORT BRITAIN READY TO YIELD TO SOVIET PLAN

Believe Red Adhesion to Pact Is Certain.

LONDON, May 13.—(AP)—Great Britain was believed today to be ready to offer important concessions to soviet Russia in an effort to add her to the British-French lineup. The front's gain yesterday of strategic Turkey left Russia as the most vital link still missing.

It was taken for granted in virtually all British political quarters that an agreement would be reached with Russia even in the face of caustic Russian criticism of Britain's counter proposals to the soviet proposal of a mutual assistance pact among Britain, France, the soviet union, and possibly Poland.

As the British government awaited an official reply to its counter-proposals, political demands that nothing be spared to get an agreement gained such strength that Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain was reported ready to offer further concessions.

Necessary to Chamberlain.

So vital was Russia regarded in the efforts to extend the British-French front that most informed observers believed failure to gain her coöperation would jeopardize Chamberlain's political position seriously.

Because of Turkey's close relations with Russia yesterday's announcement of a British-Turkish mutual defense agreement was taken generally as a sign that Russia's ultimate cooperation definitly was counted on.

What price Britain eventually might have to pay was uncertain, but some of the most outspoken advocates of a British-Russian arrangement said they were in favor of meeting the highest terms thus far indicated by Russia.

Italian, Japanese Attitudes.

In the present tension between Germany and Poland over Reichsfuehrer Hitler's demands for return of the Free City of Danzig to Germany and a corridor across the Polish corridor to East Prussia both Japan and Italy have indicated they were on the side of moderation.

At the same time the belief was growing in diplomatic quarters that Nationalist Spain would make an effort to stay neutral in event of any clash between the great powers. The attitudes of Japan and Spain toward the Danzig questions, therefore, were considered important factors influencing Britain's talks with Russia.

Chamberlain was represented in some quarters as feeling that a sweeping pact with Russia now might drive Japan and Spain into closer ties with Germany and Italy, in view of their association in the anti-comintern pact.

Russia Preferred in Showdown.

He would prefer a more limited Russian coöperation, it was said, in the hope of avoiding any such reaction. But in a final showdown, observers believed, he would choose certain Russian assistance in preference to an uncertain neutrality by Japan and Spain.

The fact that the British-Turkish agreement was only temporary, pending completion of a long term pact, was taken as an indication that the permanent one was held in abeyance for a British-Russian agreement to determine its final form.

Conversations at Geneva May 22 among Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, French Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet and Vladimir P. Potemkin, first assistant foreign commissar of Russia, were expected in British quarters to advance the negotiations by smoothing out some differences.

Tulip Festival Is Opened at Holland, Mich.

[TRIBUNE Photos.]

The Wiersma twins, Mary (left) and Myria, 5 years old, accompanied by their brother, Norman, 3, wear costumes of the land of their forefathers on their way to view the parade opening the tulip festival at Holland, Mich. The fete will be continued through next Sunday.

Smoking his Dutch pipe, Robert Kouw pauses before a windmill to chat with Vera Kirtchner. With them is Sandra Dekker, 3 years old.

Vast Crowd Attends

Holland, Mich., May 13.—[Special.]—The biggest crowd in this city's history jammed the streets today for the opening events of the Tulip festival, including the traditional scrubbing of streets by Hollanders in Dutch costume and a colorful parade. Estimates of the crowd ranged as high as 100,000.

Hundreds of cars from Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, and other more distant states poured into the city. Toledo sent a bus load of visitors.

The day was cool and clear and some 2,000,000 tulips were in bloom. A million more will be in bloom before the week is out. Eight miles of streets are lined with tulip beds on either side.

The festival will continue through Sunday, May 21, with special events on each day's program.

BRAZIL TO GIVE GEN. MARSHALL WARM WELCOME

[Copyright: 1939: By the New York Times.]

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, May 13.—When Gen. George Marshall, who is soon to become chief of staff of the United States army, arrives here May 25 aboard the U. S. S. Nashville, he will face a program including official visits of inspection to army establishments, military ceremonials, and other entertainments until June 6. He will return then to the United States, accompanied by Gen. Aurelio Goes Monteiro, chief of staff of the Brazilian army. Gen. Marshall's visit is called here a great Pan-American gesture. Army circles see in it a distinguished compliment to the Brazilian armed forces because of Gen. Marshall's high rank and the fact that he comes aboard a warship especially to invite the head of the Brazilian army to the United States.

Hurricane Knocks the Sap Out of Maple Sugar Crop

Boston, Mass., May 13.—[Special.]—A 41 per cent reduction in the 1939 maple sugar crop in New England, as compared with 1938, was blamed today on the hurricane of last September. Hurricane losses reduced the number of maple trees available for tapping in New Hampshire and Vermont, according to the New England crop reporting service. New England's 1939 crop amounted to 8,339,000 pounds, compared with 14,073,000 pounds in 1938.

14 REPORTED DEAD IN GREEK-BULGAR FRONTIER CLASH

ATHENS, Greece, May 13.—[U. P.]—Dispatches from the frontier today reported a clash between Bulgarian border guards and Greek soldiers in which fourteen persons were killed and fourteen wounded.

The reports said that the Bulgarian guards attacked two Greek frontier posts, killing a Greek major and three soldiers and wounding five other soldiers. The Greeks were said to have counterattacked, killing ten Bulgarians and wounding nine.

Rumania Accused of Massacre.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, May 13.—[U. P.]—The government press department tonight charged that Rumanian troops and police had massacred twenty-two Bulgarians in a frontier incident at Belicza, near Dobrudja, last Tuesday. The department denied dispatches from Bucharest, the Rumanian capital, which described the victims as Macedonian guerrillas. The statement charged that Rumanian troops and police had raped the wives and daughters of the Bulgarians, some of whom later were killed in a woods by machine gunners. The press department denied reports of a Bulgarian-Greek frontier incident.

CZECHS ORDERED TO SHAPE LIVES TO NAZI PATTERN

Sharp Restrictions on Freedom Decreed.

PRAGUE, May 13.—(AP)—Premier General Alois Elias of the German protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia announced to its Czech people today that measures would be promulgated requiring them to conform to German ways of living and working.

The premier said far reaching restrictions on personal liberty had become necessary and that he would announce government decrees regulating prices, wages, hours of work, and the status of Jews.

"We Czechs must in our new situation develop greater speed in our work and must perfect the quality and precision of our output," he said, adding that "Export is the main artery of our economic life."

Hints at Labor Conscription.

Announcing that the government was thinking of introducing compulsory labor service, the premier said civil service officials and officers and men of the army of the Czecho-Slovak republic, which vanished when Germany absorbed Bohemia and Moravia two months ago, must first be supplied with jobs.

The premier did not divulge specific measures to be adopted concerning Jews. He said only that "A solution will be found for the Jewish problem which will correspond to the interests of public life and to the demands of unhampered economic development of the protectorate."

The German element in Bohemia and Moravia wants the government to take over the Nazi anti-Jewish legislation.

Tell of Official Headches.

Die Zeit, Nazi organ for neighboring Sudetenland, however, said Bohemia and Moravia authorities were having a headache over their attempts to find a compromise in the Jewish question between the German position and the protectorate's needs.

At present the cabinet is reported as inclined to treat as a non-Jew any Jew who was baptized before Nov. 1, 1918, or who can give proof of non-Jewish ancestors on either his mother's or his father's side for the last three generations.

Jews who have lived in the protectorate for fifty years and who have proved to be patriots, moreover, would be exempted from any anti-Semitic legislation, it was said.

Putnam Returns

(Story in Adjoining Column.)

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

George Palmer Putnam is shown yesterday where he said he was seized in the garage of his home in North Hollywood, Cal., by two kidnapers. Picture was made after his return from Bakersfield, where he was found bound and gagged.

SEARCH PRESSED FOR 2 KIDNAPERS OF G. P. PUTNAM

Book Publisher Denies It's Publicity Stunt.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 13.—(AP)—A wide search was pressed tonight for two German-speaking men accused by George Palmer Putnam, book publisher, of kidnaping him in an attempt to learn the author of the anonymous novel, "The Man Who Killed Hitler."

Putnam, who is 52 years old, was found early today bound and gagged in an unfinished Bakersfield house, asserted emphatically the experience "was not a publicity stunt.

"If any one wishes to claim this is a publicity stunt for the book, 'The Man Who Killed Hitler,' let him say it to my face and I'll give him a forceful demonstration that it is not," said the former husband of the late Amelia Earhart, flyer.

A Painful Experience.

"The whole experience was much too painful and too realistic and too elaborate to be a publicity stunt. After all, I scarcely would have ruined my trousers and driven myself all the way to Bakersfield, there to lie in the cold, trussed in painfully cramped position, just for the sake of a publicity story."

Putnam said his kidnapers did not hurt him but suggested it would be "healthier" if he withdrew the book from circulation.

"They were just two shadows to me," Putnam said. "One was short and one was tall. One spoke English fluently. The other did not address me but spoke only to his companion. They talked with each other in German."

Questioned by G-Men.

Returned to his North Hollywood home today, the publisher said he would seek an investigation by federal officers. Two department of justice agents hurried to Bakersfield to question Putnam, but declined comment.

Putnam told officers the two men seized him and pushed him into his car when he went to his garage shortly before 7:30 o'clock last night.

The men "blindfolded me and tied my hands," the publisher said. "We drove for about an hour. They said they wanted to know the man who had contributed to the Hitler book from the German end. I told them I didn't know and stuck to that story."

Twice last month Putnam reported to authorities that he had received anonymous threats demanding suppression of the Hitler book. One was accompanied by a bullet pierced copy of the publication.

TWO POSTOFFICE OFFICIALS SLAIN IN GUN MYSTERY

Corpus Christi, Tex., May 13.—[U.P.]—Gilbert McGloin, Corpus Christi postmaster, and A. E. Ditmer, his assistant, were killed today in a mysterious shooting in McGloin's office in the federal building.

When other employés who heard the shots ran into the room they found Ditmer dead and McGloin fatally wounded. McGloin died thirty minutes later. One pistol was found in the room.

Both victims were veterans of the postal service. McGloin was serving his third term as postmaster and Ditmer had been assistant postmaster for several years.

FIREMEN PUSH BLAZE INTO TOWN AND PUT IT OUT AT A FIRE PLUG

HARRISONBURG, Va., May 13.—[U.P.]—Harrisonburg firemen exhausted their chemical supply trying to put out a blazing charcoal car on a sidetrack at a fertilizer plant outside the city limits. Then they pushed the boxcar a half mile into Harrisonburg to a fire plug, where the blaze was extinguished permanently.

JAPS HAVE MONEY BUT FIND NATION SHORT OF GOODS

Public Doesn't Complain, but Fears Future.

BY KIMPEI SHEBA.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, May 13.—A cartoon in the newspaper Miyako gives an insight into two important aspects of conditions in Japan. By caricaturing the difficulty of the people to convert their money into things they want, the paper stresses the shortage of various products. It also reveals that censorship has not reached the stage where it is not possible to make fun of the plight of the nation.

The cartoon shows munitions workers shopping with plenty of money in their pockets. A sign on a tobacco store reads, "Sold out," and a notice on a house for rent warns that it has no gas or water.

There are scores of other things the cartoonist might have added. It is possible to buy tennis rackets but not balls; automobiles, but not more than a gallon of gasoline a day; chickens, but not wire netting, with which to make coops, and cameras, but frequently not film.

Public Doesn't Complain.

The public is taking the situation rather good humoredly and very few complaints are heard. This is due partly to the patriotic fervor, partly to fear of the consequences of open criticism, and partly to the fact that the things they cannot buy are not absolutely essential. What the public reaction will be if and when the country runs out of absolute necessities must be left to conjecture.

The majority of the people expect inflation to set in before long and are striving frantically to convert their money into something more tangible. The government, on the other hand, is doing its best to discourage this attitude. The people took to investing their money in houses, which sprang up like mushrooms wherever there were vacant lots. The government has banned the construction of houses costing more than $2,500 and rarely issues permits now for gas and water pipes.

Recently there was a tobacco "famine." Tobacco is a government monopoly. There are about twenty popular brands but in many sections of Tokio there was none to be had for days. Throughout the country the limited supplies issued from time to time were gobbled up as soon as they were put on sale.

Fear Price Increases.

The government attributes the brisk sales to public fear that prices may be raised. The finance minister, commenting on the situation, said that although the consumption of various commodities is being curtailed, the government will not discourage smoking.

"If people buy tobacco with money which they formerly spent on other commodities, state revenues will be increased," he said. "It is therefore advisable to increase the output of cigarets as we have on hand enough tobacco to last until 1941."

Japan is depending more and more on substitutes to replace raw materials it has to import, but even the use of substitutes now is being restricted. This is the case with staple fiber. To check imports of cotton and wool, Japan turned to staple fiber. The demand for pulp is so great that the government is faced with the necessity of restricting pulp imports.

Use Fish for Pulp.

It is now studying means of converting sharks, tuna, bonito, whales, and other denizens of the deep into raw materials to take the place of pulp. Artificial woolen products are already being made from soya beans, seaweed, and milk. While the cost of fiber manufactured from such substitutes is often considerably higher and the quality much poorer than the genuine product, what the government seeks above all else is to check the outflow of gold, so it is satisfied with the results.

The government also is adopting aggressive measures "to increase the productive capacity of industries and to push the export business in order to augment imports and thus insure an adequate supply of materials for defense facilities and constructive works."

To facilitate exports the government is considering establishment of a department of foreign trade to be headed by a cabinet minister, or if this is not feasible the creation of a board of foreign trade.

At the same time the government will revise the guarantee system to cover losses incurred by exporters. Hereafter, when losses are caused by unavoidable circumstances, the government is required to make good such losses as in the case of insurance.

Domestic exchange banks will be required to advance funds to exporters within the limit of the value of goods for which they have obtained orders. The government will compensate for any losses."

ROBBER SUSPECT WHO THREATENED JUDGE BICEK HELD

Police said last night a robbery suspect who gave his name as Thomas Feely was really Harry Tenney, 19 years old, who has been in trouble with the authorities since he was 15. Several years ago, they said, he threatened to kill Judge Frank Bicek of the Juvenile court. Tenney was arrested Thursday night with John McNally, 32, of 727 West 60th street, and Donald Norton, 31, of 5627 Emerald avenue, in connection with the holdup of Ernest Kellner, owner of a stationery store at 443 West 63d street. Police said Tenney and McNally denied the robbery, but Norton had confessed.

SNITE TO LEAVE TOMORROW FOR TRIP TO SHRINE

Miami Beach, Fla., May 13.—[U. P.]—A long pilgrimage begins tomorrow for Fred B. Snite Jr., the smiling infantile paralysis victim who already has traveled more than 15,000 miles in an iron lung. He will sail Monday night on the Normandie.

The journey will take young Snite to the Pyrenees mountains of France, where the famous Shrine of Miracles at Lourdes attracts thousands who hope for divine intervention to rid them of afflictions or who go to worship at the tall-spired church of Our Lady of Lourdes.

Snite, 28 years old, was stricken three years ago in China while on a world tour. He was kept alive only by constant medical attention and the best of equipment. He is thrilled at the prospect of the journey to France, according to his father, Fred B. Snite Sr., Chicago financier. He will leave here by train tomorrow and will arrive in New York late Monday, where he will board the Normandie.

BIG PRIZE CONTEST

Here's how you can win a fine new Kimball Piano for your child!

Or Valuable Cash Award. As a practical way to enable you and your children to participate in our Eighty-Second Anniversary, we want to help you parents win one of the fine Kimball Pianos offered as prizes in the national Child Culture Contest—or one of scores of valuable Cash Prizes. This contest is our contribution to the cause of music the country over—and your family can very easily win one of the many prizes!

Here's All You Have To Do: Write a Letter You Have Written Already in Your Mind. Like all parents who want their children to have every educational and cultural advantage, you, too, have surely longed for a piano; perhaps you felt you could not "afford" one just yet; and time after time you have thought of the many reasons why you would like to have a piano for your child.

So just sit down and write us a letter—one that you have already written "in your mind"—on this subject—"Why I Want a Piano For My Child." Don't bother about its style; don't try to do any "fine writing." Just put down your own reasons for wanting a piano in your home—a piano that will mean new training, new poise, new self-improvement, new happiness for your child—and enjoyment for all the family. Write this letter in 50 words or less, on the official contest entry blank which we will be glad to mail to you, or that is available at Kimballs—Chicago. Simple—direct—interesting—and dozens upon dozens of valuable prizes.

THE BIG PRIZES
and the easy rules

The writer of the letter we judge to be the best will receive as First Prize a De Luxe, artist's, Kimball Grand Piano—built for the finest homes, the most exacting musicians, a triumph of the piano maker's artistry in tone, design, permanent musical value. The next best letter receives a Kimball Consolette that fits into the modern scheme of living—an exceptional piano because of its exclusive tone chamber, a development of Kimball Pipe Organ Engineers. The Third Prize is a modern Kimball Studio Piano—the same fine instrument that is in daily use in hundreds of colleges, churches, teachers' studios, and the best homes. Plus scores of valuable Cash Prizes—5 of $50 each; 10 of $25 each; 20 of $10 each; and 100 of $5 each. And here are the easily followed rules of the Child Culture Contest:

(1) The subject of your letter is "Why I Want A Piano For My Child." (2) Your letter must be written in 50 words or less. (3) The Reuben H. Donnelley Corporation, Chicago, an old, well-known and reliable organization that specializes in expert and impartial judging of national contest entries, is the sole judge of all contributions; and you agree to abide by their decision as final. (4) In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded to tying contestants. (5) Neatness does not count. Just write plainly on one side of the paper. (6) Because of the necessity for uniformity, all contestants must use the same form of entry blank, on which your letter is to be written. (7) Final closing date is Monday, June 12th, 1939. Your letter must reach us on or before midnight of that day.

No employees of the W. W. Kimball Co. or its dealers or their employees are eligible to enter the contest.

You can write a letter on such an easy subject as your child's welfare. You know how much you want a piano in your home. So act today—send in your letter. You have a real chance to win.

Call today at the W. W. Kimball Company, 306 South Wabash Ave., Chicago—and we will gladly give you a true Entry Blank. Or we will mail you one if you prefer to use the coupon in corner of this ad.

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE

RULING IS SOUGHT ON RESIDENCE OF SCHOOL TRUSTEE

Mayor Wants to Know if Outsiders Can Serve.

Mayor Kelly has asked Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes for an opinion on whether non-residents of Chicago can serve on the board of education.

The question is said to have been raised by the citizens' advisory school committee which has been considering candidates for the two school board vacancies.

Mayor Kelly is expected to fill the vacancies before the next council meeting, May 24. Observers doubt whether a new trustee from outside the city could get the necessary council confirmation.

One Is Nonresident.

Only one of the nine sitting members is a non-resident. He is William D. McJunkin, an executive of an advertising firm at 228 North La Salle street. He was appointed by a former Republican mayor.

The telephone directory lists his home at 151 Sheridan road, Winnetka. Reached there last evening, he asserted that he maintains his legal voting address at the Chicago Athletic club.

"It is only during the last nine years that I have lived outside the city," he said. "I have my business in Chicago and I own property and pay taxes in the city. That should be enough."

Employés at the athletic club said McJunkin is not registered there as a guest.

Never Questioned, He Says.

Asked how he can vote from the club without living there, he replied:

"I never inquired. I use the clubrooms and I stay there from time to time. No one has ever questioned me."

A possibility was seen that a ruling by Hodes against nonresidents might force McJunkin's resignation. This would add another vacancy to those created when the terms of Harry W. Solomon and Karl V. Janovsky-Johns expired.

Members of the advisory committee who have been carrying on secret negotiations in selecting new school trustees refused to comment last night.

British Princesses Thrilled by Mail from King, Queen

LONDON, May 13.—(AP)—Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose danced a jig around the court postmaster at Buckingham palace as he opened a big red mailbag from the Empress of Australia today. Long letters from Queen Elizabeth and a score of snapshots father King George took during the early stages of their voyage to Canada where in packets handed to the children. The battle cruiser Repulse, which accompanied the Empress of Australia part way, brought back the mail.

Louis L. Singer, 65 years old, 67 West Madison street, died of heart disease yesterday in a restaurant at 222 Adams street.

SEATS TURNED AROUND IN AUTOS FOR KING'S TOUR SO ALL FACE HIM

QUEBEC, May 13. — [Special.] — Four motor cars of a kind never before built or seen in Canada have been provided for the use of King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth by the Canadian branches of General Motors, Chrysler and Ford.

The four automobiles have been built with an eye to the fact that royal etiquet decrees that no one may sit with his back to the king and queen. And so reversed seats were installed facing the rear seats in order that supporting dignitaries or other members of the royal entourage who drive with their majesties will be able to keep their faces turned toward them.

The steel work of the car and the circle of glass which will protect their majesties when the collapsible tops have been lowered have been made bulletproof. Because King George will have to wear a plumed hat during many of his public appearances, extra head room had to be provided in the rear compartment.

Newspaper Men Instructed.

QUEBEC, Que., May 13.—[U. P.]—Newspaper correspondents and photographers covering the royal visit to Canada today were notified that they must under no circumstances approach closer than twenty feet to King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth and never speak to them unless first addressed by royalty.

When working in close proximity to the king, cameramen should wear coats, but hats should not be worn except in inclement weather. These were among the instructions issued to correspondents and cameramen by the committee in charge of press arrangements.

GIRL'S ESCORT BATTLES, ROUTS WOULD-BE RAPIST

In a desperate battle Ralph Pote, 17 years old, 624 East 92d place, routed a would-be rapist last night and saved a young high school girl, 14 years old, from attack.

Pote was visiting the girl at her home near 62d street and University avenue. Shortly before midnight they took her dog out. Pote returned to the apartment for a moment. Suddenly he heard her scream.

He ran out and found the girl being dragged into an alley by a husky man about 35 years old. Pote went after him. The two fought for five minutes before the man wrenched free and fled. Pote tore a lapel from his coat. Police hope to use it as a clew.

Monkey Bites Boy Aged 13; Order Rabies Examination

Robert Wilcox, 13 years old, 4 West Ontario street, was bitten by a monkey yesterday in a parking lot at 59 West Erie street. Robert was taken to the Henrotin hospital for treatment and the monkey was ordered to the dog pound for rabies examination. It is the pet of J. P. Snyder, 635 North Clark street.

The day will begin with the king's sitting in the historic high council room and will end with a banquet given by Premier Maurice Duplessis of the province of Quebec and his ministers.

Vandalia, Ill., May 13.—[Special.]—Alleging that her former husband, J. P. Apperson, owes her $77,900 back alimony, Mrs. Lucille L. HUSBAND SHOT IN BATTLE WITH WIFE OVER PISTOL

Edward Dunant, 50 years old, owner of a tavern at 332 South Western avenue, was shot twice and critically wounded last night in a fight with his wife, Claire, 36, in their flat above the tavern. He was shot once in the right arm and once in the liver. He was taken to the County hospital.

Mrs. Dunant told Warren avenue police that the shooting occurred while she and her husband were struggling for possession of a revolver during a domestic dispute. She denied shooting him.

Another casualty resulted from the shooting. According to police Mrs. Dunant for twenty minutes refused to leave her apartment with police. Then as she went down the stairs, they said, she kicked Sergt. John Racek. He fell down a flight of stairs, suffering possible shoulder and rib injuries. He was taken to the Presbyterian hospital.

OUSTED SCHOOL TREASURER SUED TO REGAIN $5,996

Trustees of the four schools of Township 44 in Lake county brought suit in Waukegan yesterday to recover $5,996 from the ousted school treasurer, Howard J. Davis of 806 Argonne drive, North Chicago.

The suit charged that Davis failed to account for cash and securities in that amount when he turned over the balance of $29,841 in school funds to Alfred B. Bowman, who supplanted him May 5 after an audit. Co-defendants with Davis are three North Chicago business men who signed his $80,000 surety bond—his father, Leslie H. Davis; Jacob Kaplan, and Joseph Kraus.

Funds of North Chicago's three schools and one in Lake Bluff are involved. The suit was drawn by Attorney Charles Hummer for Trustees Roy Steele, Russell Miller, and Dale Monroe.

MEXICO SEIZES BIG ESTATE; THEN LEAVES IT IN RUIN

Thieves Loot Hacienda, Destroy Buildings.

BY CAPT. M. M. CORPENING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY.—[By Mail.]—The place is what remains of a typical Mexican hacienda [estate]. The location is near the geographical center of the country. Many months have elapsed since the nearly 50,000 acres of ground were confiscated by the government under Mexico's expropriation law.

The original owner was allowed to keep the central group of buildings of wood, concrete, and stone—the headquarters, granary, living quarters, workmen's houses and corral—surrounded by a strip of land five yards wide. The whole area covers about six acres.

Vandals Destroy Buildings.

The place is vacant now, except for a former workman who remained, because naturally no one can live in such an establishment without any land. Vandals and thieves rapidly are destroying the buildings to get the wood and stone that was used in them. Because he fears further reprisals, the owner dared not permit the use of his name or the exact location of his hacienda.

Official records disclose that after the expropriation, a mob looted the hacienda. Doors, windows, and roofs were destroyed. Farm implements and furniture were carried away. Some of the furniture was distributed among residents of a neighboring village. The public land department sold the coal that was in the haciende's bins.

The land stretching away from the hacienda, to hills and mountains, is a typical example of Mexican farming country. It is six miles over an unimproved lane to the nearest highway. Along the lane one sees alfalfa, corn, oats, and wheat.

But the cultivation is confined to the choice morsels of land, the level spots of fertile soil. A broken irrigation dam has been left unrepaired and the reservoir is empty.

In the fields were several men working with steers and crude, one handle plows. A man with two scrawny steers yoked to a plow came out of a field. A city cigaret drew him into conversation.

The farmer was angry because, he said, four of his rows of corn had been confiscated by a competitor. How could that be when he owns the land, he was asked. He replied that he does not own the land, but that the state owns it and the state's representatives are the political leaders in the nearby village. Any one with a few extra pesos could get his choice of land at any time, no matter how much work had been done upon it, the farmer said.

Says Times Are Hard.

How are times now compared with those of the old hacienda, he was asked.

The farmer took a big pull on the cigaret and went into a reflective mood. He pointed to the yoke of oxen, rubbed his back and shook his head.

"Times are hard now," he said, "but the yoke has been lifted from my neck and the whip from my back. Now we work when we want to and the minimum wage is 50 centavos [about 10 cents] a day. In the old days we worked from sun up to sun down and the maximum wage was 18 centavos a day."

Farmers either can work for the government by the day for wages or work the land and have what they make. The native peons do little of either. They are an indolent lot and require little to live on.

Honor to Mother

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Mrs. Otelia Compton, chosen American Mother for 1939, with Wilson M. Compton, one of her three distinguished sons.

New York, May 13.—(AP)—A gray haired woman who lives in the college town of Wooster, O., was in the limelight here today as the nation prepared to pay tribute tomorrow to its mothers.

Mrs. Otelia Compton, 80 years old, smiled over a shoulder sheaf of orchids as she heard read the citation naming her "the American mother of 1939," chosen by a committee of the Golden Rule foundation as exemplifying motherhood at its best.

Two of her distinguished sons, Dr. Karl T. Compton of Boston, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Prof. Wilson M. Compton of George Washington university, were beside her at a luncheon in her honor on the eve of mother's day.

Tomorrow the third son, Dr. Arthur H. Compton of the University of Chicago, a winner of the Nobel prize for physics, arrives to see her receive the "American mother" medal from Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President.

"As a mother you joyfully accepted the responsibilities of motherhood as mere precursors to your hopes for your children and the welfare of your family," said the citation, "and you now enjoy the harvest of happiness which falls to those who have wrought best."

Mrs. Compton said in an interview she thought three to six children were an ideal family and that motherhood should be a full time job.

PRICE OF MILK KEPT AT 8½C BY INDEPENDENTS

The cut rate price of 8½ cents a quart for milk in stores served by independent dairies was maintained yesterday despite a reduction made by big Chicago dairies to 9 cents in stores and 11 cents for home delivered milk.

Walter Schaub, vice president and treasurer of the Meadowmoor Dairy company, a large independent, charged that the 1 cent price cut is another attempt of big dairies to run the independents out of business. The company's milk price will continue at 8½ cents, where it has been since a 2 cent reduction in April, 1938, he said. Officials of the Wagner Dairy company said they had not decided on any price change.

EX-MAYOR AND 5 GUILTY OF WPA PLOT IN KOKOMO

Jurors Reject Charges Against Two.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 13.—[Special.]—A federal jury here this afternoon convicted Olin R. Holt, former Democratic mayor of Kokomo, and five others of conspiracy to defraud the United States through diversion of WPA labor to private work. The jury was out an hour and twenty-five minutes.

Olin R. Holt.

Convicted with Holt were four men who were members of his Democratic administration of Kokomo. They are Carl J. Broo, former city attorney; George H. Morrow, former city engineer; George L. Mix, former assistant city engineer, and William [Mel] Good, former city clerk. Lincoln F. Record, former WPA project superintendent at Kokomo, also was found guilty.

Two others, Thomas C. Heady, president of the Sumption-Heady-Hunt company, a fuel and supplies firm, and Joe Tarkington, former employé of the governor's commission on unemployment relief, were acquitted.

Holt's Second Federal Trial.

The eight men and three others went on trial on Monday before a jury and Judge J. LeRoy Adair of the Southern Illinois District court. Adair was chosen special judge when Judge Robert Baltzell of Indianapolis disqualified himself. He presided at a trial nine years ago in which Holt was convicted of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law. It was charged then that Holt, an attorney, organized a liquor syndicate and profited by representing any of its members who collided with the law.

Judge Adair sustained defense motions yesterday directing acquittal of Lester E. Ratcliff of Indianapolis, former WPA supervisor for Howard and Tipton counties; Charles W. Harley of Buffton, who succeeded Ratcliff as supervisor, and James A. Harmon of Kokomo, a WPA foreman.

WPA Labor Used on Bricks.

The government charged WPA employés were used to clean brick and crush stone bought by Mix for sale to Kokomo. It was alleged the scheme originated in the city engineer's office and that Holt, Broo, and Morrow, as members of the board of works, approved claims filed by Mix for the materials. Record was charged with having had WPA workers clean his street machinery.

The fraud alleged by the government occured during Holt's term as mayor from 1935 to Jan. 1, 1939.

All Freed on Bond.

Judge Adair set June 5 to hear motions for a new trial and to pass sentence. The six convicted men, each of whom faces a maximum penalty of two years in prison and a $10,000 fine, were released on $5,000 bond each.

The Kokomo case has opened the way for five more investigations of WPA activities in Indiana counties, Val Nolan, United States attorney, said.

Schulte will succeed Horace M. Newell of Springfield, who resigned. Henry H. Anderson of Dundas, Richland county, was named to succeed Schulte as chief inspector in the division of markets. Lloyd said the changes would be effective June 15.

FINDS U. S. FACES LABOR SHORTAGE FOR WARPLANES

Committee Says 400,000 Men Would Be Needed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—The United States faces a serious shortage of skilled factory workers to make airplanes in the event of war, the interdepartmental committee on mechanics training reported to President Roosevelt today.

The committee estimated that a war time expansion program would require between 400,000 and 600,000 skilled workers. Only 100,000 are needed today for the country's 300 million dollar air expansion program.

The report recommended adoption at once of a broad program for training persons adapted to skilled work. It was particularly suggested that youths in the Civilian Conservation corps camps and the National Youth administration who show aptitude be encourage to take up mechanical trades.

40,000 Now on Jobs.

"It is estimated," said the report, "that there are 40,000 factory workers now employed in the aircraft industry. The maximum requirement for factory labor to meet the expansion program already voted by congress will necessitate 60,000 additional factory workers.

"These requirements are divided approximately as follows: 10,000 supervisory and skilled, 20,000 semiskilled, and 30,000 workers requiring no particular skill. There also will be a substantial requirement for technical personnel."

An incompleted survey shows that labor needs for the program publicity can be met from unemployment ranks, the report states.

War Program Outlined.

The need for aircraft workers in time of war will be at least four to six times greater than the present need, the report continued. It recommended the following program:

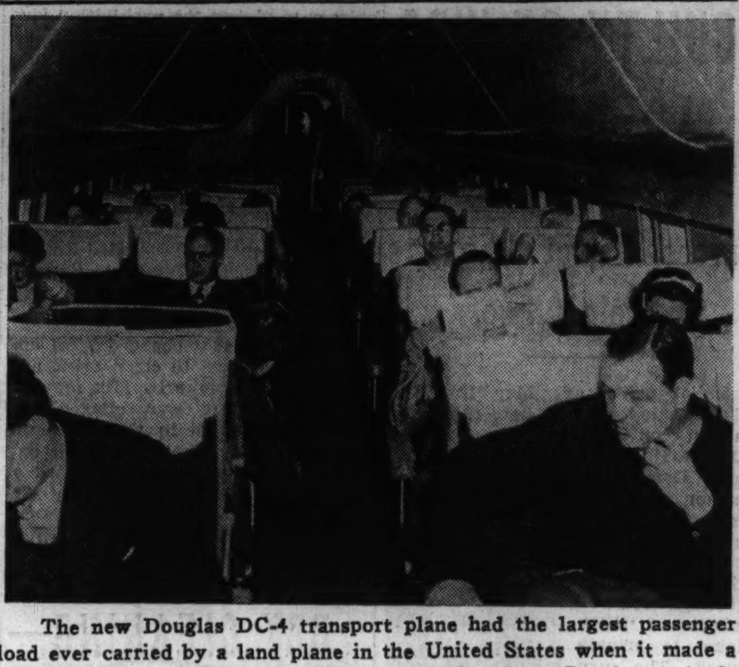
1. Establish apprenticeship systems in all aircraft manufacturing plants.
2. Encourage aircraft companies in job training through public and vocational trade schools.
3. Aid youths showing aptitude in the NYA to obtain employment in aircraft plants.
4. Continue vocational training for such work in the CCC.

The same program, according to the report, should be followed to a lesser degree to meet peace needs.

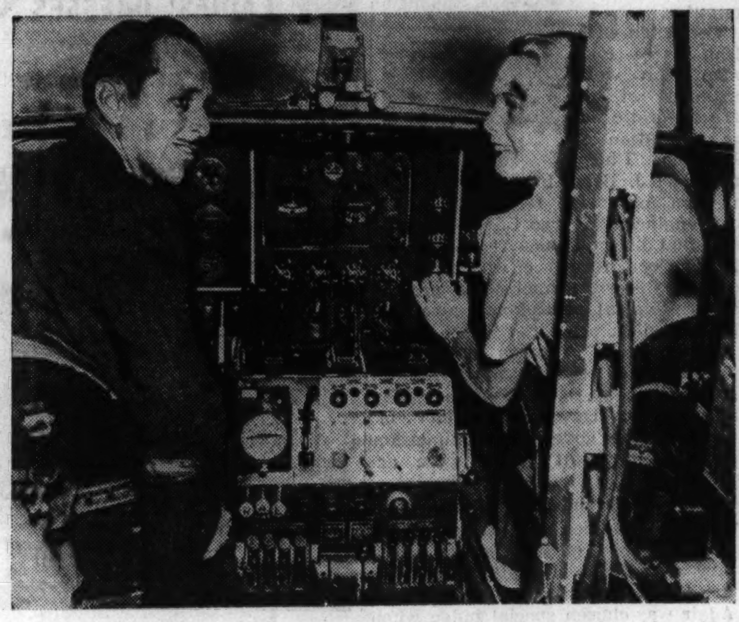
FALLS 25 FEET; BREAKS ARM.

John Rasmussen, 72 years old, 3718 Concord place, a painter, broke an arm yesterday when he fell twenty-five feet to the ground from a ladder while painting a building at 3727 Wabansia avenue.

Test Transport Plane with 50 Aboard



The new Douglas DC-4 transport plane had the largest passenger load ever carried by a land plane in the United States when it made a test flight from Burbank, Cal., to Santa Monica, Long Beach, and back. There were 44 passengers and a crew of six.



Benny Howard at the controls of the big plane, with his wife, Maxine, beside him. Howard earlier had put the plane through the tests required for issuance of federal certificates. [Acme Photos.]

Los Angeles, Cal., May 13.—[Special.]—Twenty-four hours after the mighty Douglas DC-4 transport received its air line certificates from federal government inspectors, it took off from Union Air terminal, Burbank, with the largest passenger load ever carried by a land plane in the United States. Forty-four passengers and a six man crew made the first flight.

Benny Howard, United Air Lines test pilot, who has been running the mammoth ship through its paces for the government, took the controls, with Al Reed, Douglas flight engineer, as co-pilot. Stewardesses staffed the transport for the first time. They were United's Ruby Reykelin and Lucille Eby.

EX-HIGHWAY BOSS OF MINNESOTA IS GUILTY OF GRAFT

Faces from 2 to 5 Years' Imprisonment.

St. Paul, Minn., May 13.—(AP)—A District court jury late today convicted Nels W. Elsberg of Minneapolis, former state highway commissioner, of a charge of conspiracy in connection with payment of $71,000 in false claims against the department.

The maximum penalty is from two to five years imprisonment or $5,000 fine, or both. Sentence was deferred until Monday.

Jury Deliberates 46 Hours.

The jury deliberated forty-six hours and fifty minutes, having received the case at 6 p. m. Thursday.

Elsberg was accused of permitting false claims of $71,000 against the department to be paid to the S. J. Reader Construction company, whose president, Samuel J. Reader of St. Paul, recently was convicted under the same indictment naming Elsberg, and who is waiting sentence.

Allen Awaits Sentence.

L. L. Allen, former highway maintenance engineer, also had been convicted under the indictment, and waits sentence.

James Lynch, assistant county attorney, announced that similar charges against John Flanagan, former assistant administrative highway engineer, and William Fitzgerald, vice president of the S. J. Reader company, will be dismissed. Lynch said he would make the motions for dismissal when sentence is pronounced on Elsberg Monday.

PARIS, May 13.—Using an American Lockheed Electra 14, Rene Lefevre, trans-Atlantic flyer, has established a record for commercial flight on a French air line from Paris to Brazzaville, Equatorial Africa.

The distance of 7,690 kilometers [4,781 miles] was covered in 36 hours 50 minutes, with a ter hour stop at Niamey on the Niger river. The flight included a nonstop hop of 3,000 kilometers [1,864 miles]. A crew of three and several company officials accompanied Lefevre.

France has purchased three similar airliners in the United States. They will be used in the Brazzaville service.

U. S. MAKES NEW PROTEST TO JAPS ON AIR BOMBINGS

Acts After 2,000 Deaths in Unfortified City.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—The United States lodged a vigorous protest with Japan today against civilian bombings by Japanese airmen. Secretary of State Cordell Hull said he had instructed Ambassador Joseph C. Grew to make representations to the Japanese foreign office.

The representations were made on humanitarian grounds, Hull said. The text of the protest against the bombing of Chungking and other Chinese cities was not made public by the state department, because it was delivered orally by the ambassador.

At his press conference Hull said that in making the protest the United States was carrying out its traditional abhorrence of the practice of bombing defenseless men, women, and children.

Cities Are Unfortified.

It was pointed out that the Chinese cities concerned in the protest were unfortified. Hull noted that the bombings were carried out against populations which were not direct participants in the Sino-Japanese hostilities.

The protest was general against the practice of bombing civilian populations from the air and included specific references to the repeated air raids on Chungking, as well as Swatow, Ningpo, and Foochow, in all of which places numerous persons were killed. Newspaper dispatches reported more than 2,000 dead in Chungking alone as a result of the air raids.

Japanese Occupy Settlement.

The state department made public an official report by Consul Karl D. MacVitty at Amoy on the Japanese occupation of the international settlement of that South China port.

The consul said the Japanese landed 150 troops in the settlement on Thursday night, blockaded the treaty protected area by placing guards at all jetties, and made numerous arrests within the settlement. The consul reported the occupation followed the killing of a member of the Amoy peace maintenance committee.

U. S. PROBES JAP GRAB

SHANGHAI, May 13.—(AP)—Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander-in-chief of the United States Asiatic fleet, today dispatched a destroyer to obtain information of the situation at Amoy, where the international settlement of Kulangsu was occupied yesterday by Japanese naval forces.

The Bulmer, carrying Capt. J. T. G. Stapler, commander of the South China patrol, was steaming to Amoy from Foochow, where the ship has been looking after American interests.

Americans share in the administration of Kulangsu. Seven live there and one is a member of its international council. In Shanghai authoritative quarters interpreted the Kulangsu occupation as a Japanese trial balloon to test the reaction of foreign governments.

Jap Bombs Kill 800.

CHUNGKING, China, May 13.—(AP)—Japanese bombers were estimated today to have caused 800 casualties in last night's raid on Chungking suburbs.

Flames razed warehouses of William Hunt & Co., American shipping firm, which operates a large fleet of coastal and river steamers.

Bombs fell within 100 yards of the French naval barracks, damaging a private French house but causing no casualties among foreigners.

Hundreds Homeless.

Hundreds of Chinese were homeless and rescue workers labored throughout the night in fighting fires started by Japanese incendiary missiles and searching the debris of shattered buildings for dead and injured.

French and Belgian embassy officials had a narrow escape after the raid when, with two French newspapermen, they started to cross the Yangtze in a sampan. Their craft was overturned in the darkness by a steamer but all were able to swim to shore.

Three wrecked Japanese bombers were found in the hills near Chungking, indicating improvement in the Chinese anti-aircraft fire.

SUES COURTNEY; CHARGES FALSE IMPRISONMENT

Charging that he was wrongfully imprisoned and subjected to beatings while he was held, Forrest Shaw brought suit yesterday against State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney. Named defendants with Courtney were William J. Lynch, assistant state's attorney; Steve Leedy and Joseph Sponder, the arresting officers; Eugene O'Connor, head of the state's attorney's blue sky division, and Jerome Crowley, attorney. The suit, drawn by Attorney Charles Liebman, asks $15,000 on each of two counts.

Shaw, a securities salesman, was arrested two years ago on a charge of embezzling $31,000 from Miss Mayme McKenney, an invalid spinster in her 70s. The jury disagreed, and the case was later dismissed after the court was informed that Shaw had returned the securities involved. Crowley represented Miss McKenney.

TWO SENTENCED AS BURGLARS.

Ionia, Mich., May 13.—[Special.]—Henry Miller, 25 years old, former Ionia lineman found guilty of a series of burglaries in company with Harley Blake, 24, of Stanton, was sentenced to five to fifteen years in Jackson prison today. Blake, a former Michigan reformatory guard who pleaded guilty and was a state's witness against Miller, received three to fifteen years.

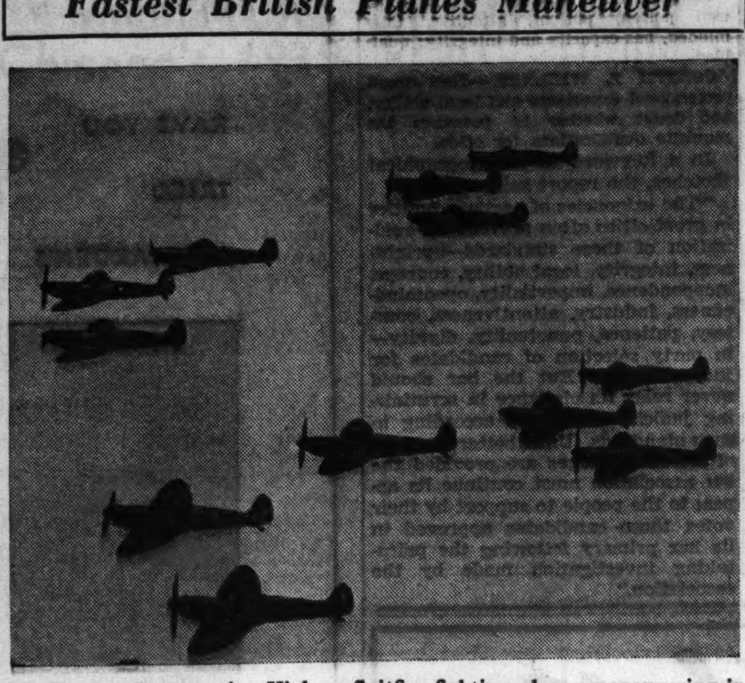
Fastest British Planes Maneuver



Twelve Supermarine Vickers Spitfire fighting planes maneuvering in display of British aerial strength. [Acme Photo.]

DUXFORD, England, May 13.—[Special.]—A formation of twelve Supermarine Vickers Spitfire fighters has been maneuvering here in a demonstration of British defensive strength. The fighters are the newest and fastest military planes in the royal air force, and are said to be capable of flying at 362 miles an hour at 15,000 feet.

These machines were designed from the Supermarine seaplanes with which England won the Snyder trophy in 1932. They have 1,200 horse power Rolls-Royce V-12 motors, carry one pilot and eight machine guns. They climb from the ground to 20,000 feet in seven minutes and are intended to overtake and shoot down the fastest bombing planes that can be sent against British cities.

PALS OF CONVICT SOUGHT IN RAZOR ATTACK ON NURSE

Victim Blames Her Action in Prosecuting Bandit.

Police last night were searching for former associates of a convict in an attempt to find the man who attacked Miss Marcella Miles, a nurse at the North Chicago Community hospital, with a razor Thursday morning.

Miss Miles, who was slashed three times by a colored man near the hospital at 2551 North Clark street, two years ago prosecuted a Negro bandit and later opposed his parole.

Attacked Two Years Ago.

The victim is a senior surgical nurse. She told Capt. Thomas Duffy of the Sheffield avenue station that two years ago she was assaulted by Edward Perkins, colored, while she was a nurse at the Chicago hospital, 811 East 49th street. Perkins cut her with a razor when she refused his demand for narcotics.

Perkins was later arrested and sentenced to one to fourteen years in Joliet prison. A year later when he was being considered for a parole she was notified. She went to Judge Samuel B. Epstein, who sentenced Perkins, and told him that she feared for her life if the Negro were released. Judge Epstein wrote to parole authorities and Perkins was ordered held in prison until at least 1945.

New Address Revealed.

In the meantime Miss Miles changed her place of employment. Two months ago her picture appeared in a newspaper which gave her new address. She said that two weeks ago two colored men stopped her near the hospital and asked her whether she knew Perkins. She fled into the building.

Thursday morning she was returning to the hospital when a tall Negro seized her and dragged her into the ambulance driveway of the hospital. According to the nurse, he said:

"You'll never send another one of our boys to prison after this." He then made three savage swings at her with the weapon.

Miss Miles said a heavy uniform she was wearing saved her life. The wounds were not serious. Perkins had a police record before being sent to Joliet.

Police Told to Arrest Park Flower Pickers

George T. Donoghue, superintendent of the Chicago park district, yesterday ordered park police to arrest persons who pick flowers from park flower beds. Donoghue said vandals has stripped several Japanese cherry trees on the wooded island in Jackson park.

TENDER RECALL

By CALEB

BIOLOGIC law has cast the racial birth-drama in one pattern that never changes. Two actors, in two lead-roles: the bearer, and the borne. The generation that is—projecting the generation that is to be. The human present perpetuating its human future . . . one as mother, the other as child.

A timeless pattern, this — the oldest event in mortality's annals! But notwithstanding, for elements of sheer magic and mystery, of ardent expectancy and anxious speculation, no other event—not even death—is crowded with the same miraculousness. By the mother, all its fullness and beauty and hazard have already been discovered. By the child, perhaps none of these is truly realized until some shock of life, some crisis-hour of later years, suddenly and utterly reveals it.

Late or soon, however, the revelation is made. The child of today becomes the grown man, grown woman, of tomorrow—and the word mother assumes a sacredness it never bore before, as a symbol in the affections of all right-minded, right-living sons and daughters. It was one of these latter—Anna Jarvis, of Philadelphia—who originated the idea of setting aside the second Sunday in May as a time of tender recall for all mothers, living or dead; and her own city was the first to recognize it on May 10, 1908.

"Mother's Day" later was officially sanctioned by President Woodrow Wilson, on May 9, 1914, and the national flag is ceremonially displayed in tribute. Around the day has also grown up the thoughtful custom of wearing a red carnation for a mother who is living, and a white for one who is no longer of the family circle. . . .

Around the theme of Motherhood, songs and poems, tales and novels, sermons, paintings, dramas and editorials innumerable, have centered the world's homage and remembrance. But the tribute your mother would prize most is to tell her often, in so many words, that you love her—and prove it in considerately constant acts of devotion to her comfort and well-being. There is nothing, in the tender recall of later days—when Mother, perhaps, is no more among us—which remotely compares with the knowledge that our private riches of affection were more than mathematically shared by her who was once the bearer, when we were the borne.

BAR ASSOCIATION GIVES BACKING TO 41 SEEKING BENCH

11 Candidates Fail to Meet Group's Standards.

The committee on candidates and the board of managers of the Chicago Bar association yesterday made public their joint report on the fifty-two nominees for judges of the Circuit and Superior courts who are running for office in the June 5 elections. There are twenty places on the Circuit bench and six on the Superior to be filled.

The report withheld indorsement from eleven candidates. Of these, four are sitting judges seeking reëlection—John R. Caverly and Denis J. Normoyle, Democrats, and Stanley H. Klarkowski and George Fred Rush, Republicans running on the Democratic ticket. Seven nominees on the opposing Republican ticket were denied approval.

Forty-One Candidates Qualified.

The other forty-one candidates are listed as "qualified" in varying degrees. One of these, Judge Michael Feinberg, a Republican running on the Democratic ticket, was not qualified by the bar committee, but the board of managers found him qualified.

The Democratic ticket of twenty-six, a so-called coalition slate, includes twenty-one sitting judges, eight of them Republicans, who are seeking reëlection, and five nominees, two of them Republicans, for short term vacancies. The straight Republican ticket of twenty-six does not include any sitting judges.

The board of managers is headed by Henry P. Chandler, president of the Chicago Bar association. Francis X. Busch is chairman of the association's committee on candidates. Copies of the committee's report were sent to the 4,300 members of the association, and ballots were included so the lawyers may record their votes for or against the election of individual candidates. Results of the balloting will be announced next Saturday.

The report is in the form of a sketchbook, giving pictures and biographical data on each nominee with a few phrases of characterization by the committee and the board of managers. The reference to each candidate on the Democratic ticket is summarized as follows, the names appearing in alphabetical sequence, an "R" indicating that the candidate is a Republican:

Superior Court.

For Full Term.

JUDGE GROVER C. NIEMEYER—Ability, temperament, and excellent judicial work demonstrate he is exceptionally well qualified.

For Judge Ross C. Hall Vacancy [One Year].

JOHN F. BOLTON—Straightforward, independent, fearless. He believes judges may properly participate in political campaigns. The committee does not agree with this, but otherwise he is qualified.

For Judge Walter Steffen Vacancy [One Year].

JOHN A. SBARBARO [R.]—Has judicial temperament, diligence, and fair legal ability; is qualified.

For Judge James J. Kelly Vacancy [Two and a Half Years].

MUNICIPAL JUDGE JOSEPH A. GRABER—Attentive, fair minded, high ideals, judicial poise; well qualified.

For Judge Joseph David vacancy. [Two years.]

ULYSSES S. SCHWARTZ — Marked legal ability; uniformly courteous, patient, and considerate; possesses exceptional qualifications.

For Judge Harry Miller vacancy. [Two and a half years.]

JOHN F. HAAS [R.]—Judicial service in Municipal court was courteous, courageous, independent, impartial, industrious, diligent, conscientious; well qualified.

Circuit Court.

JUDGE FRANK H. BICEK—Work in Juvenile court of high quality; well qualified.

JUDGE WILLIAM V. BROTHERS [R.]—Diligent, courteous, even tempered; well qualified.

JUDGE JOSEPH BURKE—Very satisfactory judicial service; well qualified.

JUDGE JOHN R. CAVERLY—Services not satisfactory; entitled to pension, and should retire on it.

JUDGE ROBERT JEROME DUNNE—Painstaking, conscientious; qualified.

JUDGE BENJAMIN P. EPSTEIN—Integrity and ability; qualified.

JUDGE MICHAEL FEINBERG [R.]—The committee on candidates finds he has capacity for good judicial work, but on his whole record for last twelve years does not find him qualified. The board of managers says he has rendered good service in the last four years and is qualified.

JUDGE PHILIP J. FINNEGAN—Conscientious and free from personal or partisan influences; qualified.

JUDGE HARRY M. FISHER—The committee in the past has believed him not qualified, but feels he has since improved and is now qualified; the board of managers concurs in finding him qualified.

JUDGE HUGO M. FRIEND [R.]—Service of the highest quality and merits highest commendation; exceptionally well qualified.

JUDGE CORNELIUS J. HARRINGTON—Courteous, diligent, able, upright; well qualified.

JUDGE STANLEY H. KLARKOWSKI [R.]—Bar has not changed opinion expressed six years ago that he has demonstrated unfitness; should not be re-

JUDGE WALTER J. LA BUY—Diligent, courteous, fair minded, efficient; well qualified.

JUDGE THOMAS J. LYNCH—Alert, courteous, fair minded, has judicial temperament; qualified.

JUDGE DAVID F. MATCHETT [R.]—Service held in highest esteem; exceptionally well qualified.

"The exigencies of partisan politics in great cities often prevent the realization of these standards—uprightness, integrity, legal ability, courage, independence, impartiality, openmindedness, industry, attentiveness, courtesy, patience, punctuality, dignity—in party selection of candidates for judicial office. But the bar should never relax its vigilance in scrutinizing judicial candidates according to such standards. Until better methods of selecting judges are provided the bar association must continue its appeal to the people to support by their votes those candidates approved in its bar primary following the painstaking investigation made by the association."

CLINIC DISCOVERS MENTAL HAZARDS OF WILD DRIVERS

Court Branch Finds 10 Per Cent Feeble Minded.

Only a small percentage of drivers arrested for trafic violations are sent to the safety clinic of the Municipal court's Psychiatric institute. But of 125 examined there during the last two years:

Ten per cent were feeble-minded, nearly 9 per cent had organic brain disorders such as senility, tumors, or lesions from old fractures, and between 3 and 4 per cent were psychotic [mentally diseased] and were sent to the Psychopathic hospital.

Average Dull Witted.

Nineteen per cent had border-line intelligence [that is, they were on the wrong side of dull-witted but many of these were capable drivers nevertheless]. Ten per cent were emotionally unstable, almost 25 per cent had eye defects, and more than 6 per cent had faulty hearing. The average intelligence for the entire group was "dull."

Between 20 and 25 per cent of those examined were found to be a menace behind a wheel, according to Dr. Agnes A. Sharp, psychologist attached to the institute. These included several drivers with general paresis. The remaining 75 to 80 per cent were either competent or in need of further driving instruction. Competent ones, however, were only 10 per cent of the total.

Institute Has 6 on Staff.

The Psychiatric institute is under the supervision of Dr. David Rotman, Municipal court psychiatrist. He is assisted by Dr. Joseph Luhan, also a psychiatrist; Dr. Sharp, two other psychologists, and a psychiatric case worker. The institute is in the central police building at 1121 South State street. It serves 36 Municipal courts, although trafic cases usually come from Boys' court and the Safety and Trafic courts.

"We started examining trafic violators in 1933," Dr. Sharp said yesterday, "because we seriously believe that better selection of drivers will cut down the number of accidents and deaths. Eventually I should like to have every tenth trafic case, in addition to those already sent, referred to us."

The examination given trafic violators by the clinic includes interviews with the arresting officer, others involved in the case, and with the erring motorist's relatives. There are mental tests of various kinds, interviews with the driver, to learn his attitude toward other motorists, and written and oral tests of his personality and mentality. There also is a 20 minute road test, conducted by the Chicago Motor club and the National Safety council.

WARNS ILLINOIS DRIVERS OF STOP SIGN VIOLATIONS

Springfield, Ill., May 13.—[U. P.]—Chief Walter Williams of the state police today warned Illinois motorists that a drive against stop-sign violators is in progress throughout the state.

He said all offenders would be arrested and brought to trial.

200 OF EVANSTON CITY WORKERS TO TAKE TRAFIC TEST

Evanston wants to remain a safe city. Tomorrow night, Mayor Henry D. Penfield announced yesterday, 200 city employés who use automobiles in their work will submit to tests in a trafic clinic. Thirty drivers who have had three or more accidents or trafic violations in the last year also will submit voluntarily to the tests to learn why they are persistent offenders.

AUTO HITS BABY BUGGY; MOTHER, CHILD INJURED

Mrs. Mary Reicin was pushing a baby carriage across Sawyer avenue at Lawrence avenue last evening when it was struck by an automobile. Mrs. Reicin was knocked down. Her son, Edward, 4 years old, toppled out upon his head. Her daughter, Gloria, 22 months old, remained in the carriage, which was hurled into Lawrence avenue.

All three were taken to the Swedish Covenant hospital, where Mrs. Reicin and Edward were found to be slightly injured. They were treated and taken home to 3118 Ainslie street. Mrs. Reicin is 25. The car was driven by Louis Bogdan 53, of 5041 North Springfield avenue.

Sonne Lundgren, 728 North Wells street, was killed in Elkhart, Ind., when the automobile in which he was riding collided with a truck. His brother, Nils, of Fort Wayne, Ind., and two other persons in the car were injured.

Charles Stewart, 28 years old, died in the Columbus hospital last night of a skull fracture suffered early yesterday when he lost control of his automobile and crashed into a tree at Lake Shore drive and Deming place in Lincoln park. He was a salesman, and lived at the Y. M. C. A. hotel, 826 South Wabash avenue.

Gerald Dowell, 21, of McHenry, who was employed on farm properties near McHenry owned by William Skidmore, died in St. Therese hospital, Waukegan, of injuries suffered Friday when a truck backed into him. He was employed as a helper on the truck, which was said to be owned by Skidmore. The driver was Alfred Schuld of McHenry.

Oliver Jackson, colored, 32, of 1635 Washburne avenue, died in the County hospital of injuries suffered earlier in the day when he drove his automobile into the side of a freight car at Jefferson street near 15th street.

William Hamilton, 43 years old, 7224 South Bell avenue, was killed and two companions were injured early today when their automobile collided at 79th and Morgan streets with a car driven by Alex Levy, 67, 5465 Everett avenue. Those injured were Edward Laskey, 41, of 5011 South Paulina street, and Michael Heinen, 47, of 6342 South Bell avenue. Heinen was driver of the car in which Hamilton was a passenger.

Up to 4 p. m. yesterday 312 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these, 242 were killed in Chicago, where 7,013 were injured in the same period.

FINDS CONGRESS IS NO EXPLOITER OF CHILD LABOR

Restrictions Don't Affect Pages, Official Holds.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—The labor department ruled today that the employment of senate and house pages under 16 years of age does not violate the child labor law because congress does not produce goods for shipment in interstate commerce.

The official ruling is that the daily issue of the Congressional Record and the speeches of senators and representatives, which are franked throughout the United States, do not constitute goods within the contemplation of the fair labor standards act of 1938.

The ruling was delivered by Miss Beatrice McConnell, director of the industrial division of the children's bureau, which administers the child labor provisions of the act.

Rules Services Are Included.

"The production and distribution of the Congressional Record and the franking of speeches do not constitute shipment or delivery for shipment of goods in interstate commerce," said Miss McConnell.

She held that the application of the act is not limited to manufacturing establishments, but embraces transportation and service enterprises doing an interstate business. She was certain, however, that congress does not constitute a service organization nor any other type of organization within the scope of the law.

Technically the employment of senate and house pages under 16 years of age does violate the spirit of the law under the definition which congress itself wrote. The act proscribes oppressive child labor, which it defines as follows: "A condition of employment under which any employé under the age of 16 years is employed by an employer in any occupation."

Section 12 [a] prohibits the shipment or delivery for shipment in interstate commerce of any goods produced in any establishment about which any such child labor has been employed. Section 15 [a] makes it unlawful to violate any of the provisions of section 12, and section 16 [a] provides punishment by a fine of not more than $10,000 and imprisonment of not more than six months for any violation of section 15.

The minimum age for employment as a page in the senate or the house is 12 years, and the maximum is 16 years. Thus the maximum age of pages is the permissible minimum under the child labor law.

Form Valuable Associations.

Regardless of the spirit of the child labor law, however, neither the pages nor their parents are likely to complain. It is a position greatly coveted by parents and thoroughly enjoyed by the boys.

Moreover, the pages form associations that are valuable in later life. Many industrial magnates, professional men of eminent standing, and several members of the house of representatives are former pages. There have been senators who got their political start as pages.

The pages comply with the truancy laws by operating their own school in the capitol. Out of their salaries, $4 a day when congress is in session, they support three full time teachers, assessing themselves according to the number of subjects studied. A boy taking a full course pays $15 a month.

The jobs are distributed on a patronage basis, and there is a long waiting list at all times. There are forty-seven pages in the house and twenty-one in the senate.

America's First Families

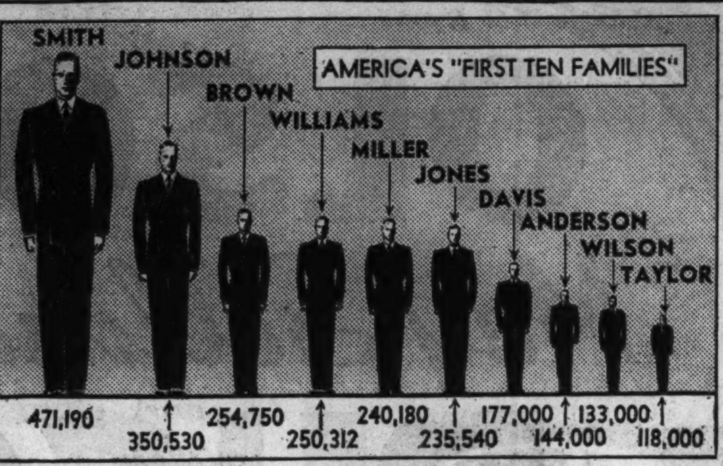

Diagram represents the proportion of persons with the ten most common family names on the rolls of workers who have applied for federal old age insurance.

It's official now. There are more Smiths in the United States than Johnsons. This is the finding of a social security board survey of family names of workers applying for federal old age insurance, as announced by John J. Corson, director of the bureau of old age insurance in Washington, D. C. The survey shows 471,190 Smiths as against 350,530 Johnsons. Next on the list are the Browns, totaling 254,750. The next seven, in order, and their totals, are: Williams, 250,312; Miller, 240-180; Jones, 225,540; Davis, 177,000; Anderson, 144,000; Wilson, 133,000, and Taylor, 118,000.

DANCER DIES OF KNIFE WOUND.

Rufus Arnold, colored, died in the Provident hospital yesterday from a stab wound which police say was inflicted at a dance held at 5037 Indiana avenue. Arnold lived at 4604 Langley avenue.

POLITICAL PULL CLAIM GETS A $60 COURT TEST

When Harvey Hunt, a hauling contractor, was arrested Wednesday by Berwyn police for not having a suburban vehicle license, he tore up the summons, boasted of political influence, threatened to "get" the policemen's jobs, and sped away.

That at least was the version of Policemen Ted Michaels and Charles Creisler who testified yesterday in Berwyn police court. They investigated further, said the policeman, and found that Hunt, who lives at 3709 Highland avenue, Berwyn, had not had a license for ten years.

Police Magistrate Frank J. Pavek expressed indignation at Hunt's conduct and fined him $50 and $10 costs.

NEW DEAL CHIEFS DODGE REVISION OF WAGNER ACT

Play for Time; Angle for June Adjournment.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—After four and one-half months of masterful procrastination, the Roosevelt administration is beginning to entertain hopes that the Wagner labor relations act may be saved from revision at this session of congress.

When congress convened last Jan. 3, a poll of both houses showed a strong majority in favor of amendments to the act. There seemed to be not the slightest reason for delay in adopting amendments in the first month or two of the session. Yet there appears a serious danger that amendatory legislation may not be approved if congress adjourns in June and the White House is pressing for June adjournment.

Story Revealing One.

The story of how revision of the act has been delayed is revealing not only of the manner in which legislation may be hampered in congress. It shows how readily senators and representatives fall in with a small minority's dilatory tactics even though an overwhelming majority of the citizenry [70 per cent by a popular nation-wide poll] are clamoring for action.

The Wagner act was signed by President Roosevelt on July 5, 1935. It had not been in effect more than a year when an uproar arose concerning its administration. Designed to promote industrial peace, it fostered industrial disorder. During the first year of the act's operation, according to the statistics of the United States department of labor, there were 2,172 strikes. In 1937 there were 4,740 strikes. Nearly 3 million workers were involved in strikes.

Examination of the situation disclosed that much of the trouble was due to the biased attitude of the three members of the administrative board, J. Warren Madden, Donald W. Smith, and Edwin S. Smith. Given the most extravagant powers of acting as investigator, prosecutor, judge, and jury at the same time, the board openly acknowledged its antagonism toward industry as a whole and also displayed marked prejudice for the the A. F. of L.

Chairmen Acquiescent.

The cry for amendments was led by the latter organization which was the original sponsor of the labor relations act. The A. F. of L. proposed a group of amendments which President William Green emphasized as strengthening the purposes of the act by preventing arbitrary abuses of power by the board.

In June, 1937, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [R., Mich.], introduced amendments to the act, but this threat was quickly stifled by the administration which has complete control of both senate and house labor committees. Senator Elbert D. Thomas [D., Utah], chairman of the senate committee, and Mrs. Mary T. Norton [D., N. J.], chairman of the house committee, are among the most acquiescent of the Roosevelt rubber stamp statesmen in congress.

In the election year of 1938, sentiment against the act crystalized to such an extent that the administration wavered in its stand. Green visited President Roosevelt at Hyde Park on Aug. 20 and for the first time the President admitted that changes in the act might be advisable.

Senator Wagner Hedges.

As the November election approached, Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York, the act's author, who had steadfastly insisted that no changes were necessary, became fearful that this stand might endanger his reëlection. He pledged himself in behalf of amendments, but was not specific.

When agitation for revision of the act began after congress met last January, Senator Wagner, safely back in office for a six year term, hedged. Members of the house labor committee called upon him to fulfill his pledge. He answered evasively. Representative C. Arthur Anderson [D., Mo.], then introduced a resolution calling upon the house to investigate the administration of the act. This was referred to the rules committee.

There was urgent need about this time for a plausible excuse which the senate and house labor committees could use to excuse their stalling. President Roosevelt furnished it with a call to the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. to settle their differences.

The C. I. O.-A. F. of L. conferences failed and finally on March 29, the senate labor committee agreed to begin hearings on April 11. But the committee adjourned until April 17. On May 1 the committee began to hold desultory hearings.

Jobless, He Leaps 15 Floors to Death; Body Hits Auto

A man identified as Roy S. Bartlett, an unemployed waiter, leaped to his death yesterday from a fifteenth floor window of the Mather tower, 75 East Wacker drive. The body crushed the hood of an automobile parked in an adjoining parking lot. Mrs. Harry Neal, Bartlett's aunt, with whom he had lived for the last six months at 121 Collander avenue, La Grange, said Bartlett was despondent because he was out of work and had no money with which to return to New York, where he formerly lived. Bartlett was 31 years old.

GAMBLER HUNTED IN HOTEL SLAYING OF BAND MANAGER

Hoodlum's Ex-Convict Pal Also Sought.

Jack Eisen.

Jack Eisen, regarded by police as a gun toting hoodlum, is being sought for questioning in the murder of Joseph du Brook, business manager of the King Lear orchestra. This was disclosed yesterday by Capt. Thomas Harrison of the Chicago avenue station.

Capt. Harrison has assigned several squads to seek Eisen in honky tonks on the north side and in dives on the northwest side, where he is said to have operated a handbook. Also sought is another gambler, Frank Mask, alias Maxie, an ex-convict. Mask is known to be a pal of Eisen.

Du Brook, 39 years old, whose real name was Du Brucque, was killed early Wednesday in the lobby of the Devonshire hotel, 19 East Ohio street. The shooting occurred after a quarrel with two men in the hotel coffee shop.

Shot Twice in Back.

Roy Lear, leader of the orchestra, who was with Du Brook, told police that two fiery tempered men at an adjoining table took offense at a remark they believed Du Brook had made after some one had thrown water on him.

The men followed Du Brook into the lobby. Lear walked toward the elevator. He turned in time to see one of the men beat Du Brook with a pistol and then shoot him twice in the back. The men fled outside to an automobile.

Police said a passerby jotted down the license of the automobile in which the two fled. This license had been issued to Jack E. Eisen, 1257 North Honoré street. A watch has been maintained at this address.

Similar Incident Recalled.

In linking Eisen with the shooting police recalled that he was involved in a similar water throwing incident in July, 1930. Eisen and two others were arrested for sloshing water from a large pail on passersby at Division street and Damen avenue. The three said they did it just for amusement.

Eisen is a brother of Maxie Eisen, hoodlum and former czar of the Wholesale Fish Dealers' association. In 1929 Jack Eisen and two agents of the union were accused of shooting two butchers who had refused to join the association. They never were brought to trial.

On Nov. 15, 1930, Eisen was found shot in the head in his automobile at Hoyne avenue and Thomas street. He refused to discuss the affair. Two years later police arrested him as a burglar and announced they had recovered $4,000 in stolen property in his home.

Acquitted of Theft Charge.

Eisen was held to the grand jury in bond of $3,500. On May 20, 1932, Judge Walter T. Stanton of the Criminal court found him not guilty.

Since then Eisen has been arrested many times, but never has been identified in serious crimes. His last arrest was Dec. 26, 1937, in a grill at 1560 North Dearborn parkway. Police found him with two guns after a shooting in which no one was injured. Eisen said he had routed two bandits who tried to rob the café.

Eisen is 37 years old, with bushy black hair, streaked with gray. He is of medium size.

GIVEN $300,000; TAKES IT RIGHT BACK TO BANK

Minneapolis, Minn., May 13.—[U. P.]—A $300,000 mistake had one Minneapolis bank's personnel in a daze today.

S. S. Sutherland of Minneapolis walked into the bank late yesterday and paid for a cashier's check for $141.66. Back at his office he examined the check. It was made out for $300,141.66. Today he complained to the bank about the error. It cheerfully gave him a check for $300,000 less.

CHARGES ICKES' TINKERS INVADE BONNEVILLE DAM

Dismissed Chief Engineer Fears New Policies.

Portland, Ore., May 13.—[Special.]—Fears that radical New Dealers plan to try out some of their pet theories in economic planning on the $75,000,000 Bonneville dam were expressed today as a result of the recent summary discharge of Robert W. Beck, chief engineer of the huge Columbia river power project.

The development already has suffered about all it can stand of Washington tinkering, critics asserted. They listed a gross overproduction of power, the failure to provide, until after the dam was built, for facilities to enable salmon to go upstream for spawning, and various ineffectual substitutions for mother nature as instances of the inefficiency of the Roosevelt planners.

Fear Wholesale Purge.

The firing of Beck by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes is regarded as the opening gun in a wholesale purge of conservatives in the Bonneville dam administration and a general reversal of the sane policies of its late head, J. D. Ross.

"Secretary Ickes is challenging the power policies of Mr. Ross, a thing he did not dare to do, nor was he big enough to do, while Mr. Ross was alive," Beck declared.

"The real issue involved in this controversy is whether or not Mr. Ickes and the new Bonneville chief engineer are going to carry forward the power policies of the late administrator as Ickes promised to do upon the death of Mr. Ross."

Ross was generally regarded here as a level headed and experienced administrator. However, many of his ideas on power distribution and on the best methods of taking over private power utilities clashed directly with those of Ickes and his New Deal supporters. But Ickes did not dare press his pet theories too insistently while Ross lived, for the late administrator was known to be a friend of President Roosevelt.

Wonder Who'll Be Next.

With Ross' death, however, Ickes at once stepped in and began what appears to be a purge of Ross' friends in the dam administration. Observers here believe Beck is only the first of many scheduled for the official ax. Every one in the Bonneville administration is wondering who will be the next to go.

Beck said Ickes ousted him after accusing him, in an interchange of telegrams, with insubordination for giving a newspaper interview in which a previously unpublished letter from Ross was included.

The letter outlined Ross' determination to use full negotiations before resorting to condemnation proceedings to place certain private utility companies, now operating in the Pacific northwest, in the government's public utility districts.

Beck supported Ross' program and defended the name of his dead superior when that program was attacked.

Ickes Denies Ross Issue.

Ickes denied that the Ross program was at issue and charged Beck with "insubordination in the first instance, to which you have now added defiance and threats." He added: "In these circumstances you leave me no alternative but to effect your separation."

A few days ago the breach which Ross had tried to avert made its definite appearance. The twelve public utility districts in territory served by the Puget Sound Power and Light company became deadlocked over the program to follow.

Six of the districts favored filing condemnation suits in an effort to break up and acquire the Puget Sound company properties in their counties. The other six districts favored continued negotiations which had been undertaken by Beck and by Guy C. Meyers, New York fiscal agent for Washington state's public utility districts.

Successor Is Selected.

Beck, in trying to head off the filing of condemnation suits, appeared before the public utility district representatives and defended the Ross program. He asserted that condemnation suits would cause long, costly delays and rob Bonneville of its power market to the public utility districts.

The successor selected for Beck is Frank A. Banks, reclamation bureau engineer who has been in charge of construction at the Grand Coulee dam in eastern Washington.

INTENSIFY SEARCH FOR ASSASSIN OF WIEBOLDT DRIVER

Settlement of Strike Spurs Police.

Chief of Detectives John L. Sullivan and Capt. Martin Mullen of the Racine avenue station intensified the search yesterday for the labor terrorists who killed James Lawrence, an employé of the Wieboldt Stores, Inc., last April 12.

Lawrence was shot during a strike called by representatives of teamsters' unions.

Settlement of the strike and closing of the inquest into the Lawrence killing Friday did not end the search for the killers, police officials said.

Lawrence, who was 45 years old, lived at 1124 Wilson avenue. He was riding with three other employés in a Wieboldt truck near Walton and Paulina streets when a number of shots were fired into it. Lawrence was the only one hit by a bullet. He died within a short time.

Seek Owner of Suspect Car.

Witnesses said the shooting was done by one of four men in a maroon sedan. A car of this description had figured in several assaults upon other Wieboldt employés and the name of the owner of the car was obtained.

"We are starting on the second month of our search, but we haven't been able to arrest him yet," Chief Sullivan said yesterday. "The settlement of the strike should be helpful to us because other employés may talk now that they no longer need be afraid of sluggers."

The strike was settled by an arrangement through which Wieboldt's seventy-five trucks and trailers were taken over by a newly formed company with which the union is to negotiate a contract. The company is the Metropolitan Deliveries, Ltd., an expansion of the Templeton Trucking company, founded in 1908.

Negotiations Start Tomorrow.

Leslie Goudie, president of the Teamsters' Joint Council, who will handle details of the contract between the union and the Metropolitan Deliveries company, was in Washington, D. C., yesterday. At his office it was said the negotiations will begin tomorrow upon his return. The former Wieboldt drivers are to be employed by the new company and are to join the union.

MICHIGAN CITY SCHOOL TEACHER WOUNDS HIMSELF

Jesse Felper, Michigan City high school teacher and former Michigan City American Legion commander, was in a serious condition from a bullet wound last night.

At dawn yesterday he appeared at the farm home of August Gill, seven miles southeast of Michigan City. Gill took him home. There the school teacher told Chief of Police Julian Warner this story: He went to a woods 300 yards from the Gill home Friday night to practice with his rifle. In some way he fell upon the weapon, which was discharged. He was shot below the heart. To keep warm and attract help, he built a fire. It spread until it damaged his car. He finally dragged himself to the farm house. The weapon was found in the rear compartment of the car.

Felper is a bachelor, 45 years old. He teaches vocational subjects at the Central High school.

AFTER 40 WHAT?
YOU CAN FACE THE 40's, 50's, 60's—AND MORE WITH UTMOST CONFIDENCE IF YOU WILL SAFEGUARD YOUR HEALTH . . . BE EXAMINED

THERE are glorious years ahead for healthy men and women "after 40." Time for travel . . . time for vacations . . . time to really enjoy life. Don't let ill health cheat you out of these years. Let modern medicine protect you against the physical handicaps which so frequently . . . tragically prevent their realization. With increasing age comes increasing problems of health. Vital organs of the body begin to show the strain of years after forty, but it may happen much earlier . . . especially if they have been weakened by contagious diseases of childhood. These are degenerative diseases, best known to you as . . . heart trouble, high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, kidney trouble, arthritis, diabetes, et cetera. While they have increased over fifty per cent during the past thirty years and take a greater toll than all other diseases combined . . . they are not inevitable . . . if early precautions are taken. Protection is comparatively simple . . . be examined! A complete physical examination will disclose the beginning of these troubles long before any outward sign appears . . . it will discover the presence of other diseases, such as cancer, tuberculosis and syphilis, which also present serious barriers to life after 40. In either case early discovery and prompt medical attention is your greatest protection.
These examinations, if complete and fully protective, will require knowledge and training in all fields of medicine . . . they will require X-ray studies, X-ray pictures and various medical laboratory tests to provide an accurate record of your physical condition. Once this is recorded, periodic check-ups will safeguard your health. Before the organization of a UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE, these services were more expensive than the average person could afford . . . as a result only the well-to-do could receive this protection. Founded by one of the country's foremost pioneers in the fight to reduce the high cost of medical and surgical care . . . this institution has the knowledge and facilities for providing diagnoses and adequate treatment in all fields of medicine and surgery. A competent and experienced staff of specially trained physicians supported by one of the finest X-ray departments in the middle west . . . a complete medical laboratory, and other medical equipment help to make this possible. The costs for all services are as low as is consistent with responsible medical practice.

WPA PROJECTS ARRAIGNED FOR WASTING RELIEF

Dewey Short Lists Many Squandering Works.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—Representative Dewey Short [R., Mo.] tonight pointed to the record of the Works Progress administration and called upon his fellow Americans to reflect upon its "amusing and ridiculous, as well as disgusting and disheartening" squandering of tax money.

Nobody begrudges a dollar that has gone to some person actually in need or into needed public improvements, Short said, but much of the relief dollar never gets to the person for whom it is intended.

There have been commendable WPA activities, Short admitted, but he charged that much waste, extravagance, inefficiency, graft, and corruption have attended the spending of 21 billion dollars on relief by the Roosevelt administration.

Lists Unessential Spending.

Short declared the WPA had approved upwards of 175,000 different spending schemes, many of which could not be classed as essential or necessary to public welfare. He listed among such projects:

"The establishment of maids training schools to train young women for general domestic services. According to WPA reports, 517,945 families on relief were furnished with the services of hired girls without cost, and these domestics served on 3,473,473 occasions.

"The construction of a bear house at Highland Park zoo in Pittsburgh, Pa., at a cost of $294,848 that the bears might enjoy the more abundant life, while many unfortunate human beings were 'ill-fed, ill-clad, and ill-housed.' And remember the New Deal claims that 'we planned it that way.'

A Grandstand for $878,715.

"Construction of a grandstand at the state fair grounds in West Allis, Wis., at a cost of $873,715, so that visitors at this fair might enjoy the 'more aboundant life,' while the 'ill-fed, ill-clad, and ill-housed' could—well, get along as best they could under the 'we planned it that way.'

"Employment of 10,778 persons in December, 1936, on mosquito control projects in the states of New York, Illinois, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Jersey, and Delaware, when those states were under a cover of ice and snow. O, those poor mosquitos!

"Raking leaves across roads and streets, and then raking them back again. Anything to keep the leaves moving. New Deal efficiency!

Cockroaches Counted.

"Counting of trees, lamp posts, rats and cockroaches in various localities. This of course for the uplift and welfare of the taxpayers whose money was thus wantonly wasted and scandalously squandered.

"Assisting in building lakes where it will benefit and increase the value of property held by prominent politicians.

"Using WPA labor and materials for private construction of roads, bridges, etc., as evidenced by various press reports of arrests and indictments of WPA officials in many states. Of course, we do not presume that this was planned that way.

"The federal writers project has employed cynical columnists to portray the virtues of communism and to condemn not only the judiciary of the United States, but many of our long cherished American activities."

These, Short said, are but a few examples of wasteful spending under the guise of humanitarianism.

PANAMA CANAL AHEAD OF SUEZ IN SHIP TRAFIC

[Copyright: 1939: By the New York Times.]

BALBOA HEIGHTS, C. Z., May 7.—[By Mail.]—Trafic through the Panama canal exceeded that through the Suez canal for the five months from November, 1938, to April, 1939, the statistical bureau here reported today. This is the longest consecutive period exceeding Suez trafic since 1929, when trafic here was the heavier for six months.

Suez canal trafic exceeded that of the Panama canal for the first ten months of 1938, but for the twelve month period ending March 31, 1939, Suez trafic declined every month, compared with the previous year.

Engine Explodes

Engine room of the fireboat Joseph Medill, showing where front blew off steam turbine yesterday when safety valve clogged. The face of the turbine is about five feet across. At left, Engineer Robert Harnois; at right, Engineer Fred Delaney.

The fireboat Joseph Medill was disabled yesterday when its steam turbine exploded at the scene of Thursday's $4,000,000 grain elevator fire at 102d street and the Calumet river. The boat was being moved into position to play water on the smoldering ruins when the safety valve on the turbine became clogged by grain and steam under heavy pressure shattered the front of the engine. Four men aboard were struck by flying steel, but were not seriously injured. The fireboat was about to relieve the Fred Busse, which had been pumping water all night.

An inquest yesterday into the death of the ninth victim of the fire was continued to July 11. The victim was David Marvin, 28 years old, a grain shoveler, who died of burns Friday night in South Chicago hospital.

The bodies of the other eight victims, all elevator workers, are believed to be in the débris. It is expected that salvage excavations will start today.

HUNT M'LAUGHLIN ON NEW DRUNKEN DRIVING CHARGE

Frederic McLaughlin II. of Lake Forest was sought yesterday by Lake county deputy sherifs on a capias charging him with drunken and reckless driving. The capias was issued after State's Attorney Charles E. Mason filed an information in the Lake county court.

Prosecutor Mason acted after Police Chief Eugene Spaid of Lake Bluff asked that McLaughlin be tried in a court of record. McLaughlin was arrested Friday in Lake Bluff and obtained a change of venue to Justice of the Peace Samuel Sorenson of Lake Forest. This case is now superseded by the new charges.

McLaughlin, son of the late George D. McLaughlin, narrowly escaped injury early Friday in Lake Bluff when his automobile skidded sixty feet and part of the way down a bluff overlooking Lake Michigan. Chief Spaid accused McLaughlin of driving over several parkways, knocking down a street sign, and driving recklessly for several miles in the suburb.

DIES OF MOTORCYCLE INJURIES.

Coldwater, Mich., May 13.—[Special.]—Raymond Shaffer, 23 years old, a truck driver, died in a hospital here this morning of injuries incurred earlier in the day when his motorcycle left the highway and crashed into a tree.

Washington's Advice

An excerpt from the Farewell Address of George Washington to the American people on Sept. 17, 1796:

Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence, I conjure you to believe me, fellow citizens, the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of Republican Government. But that jealousy to be useful must be impartial; else it becomes the instrument of the very influence to be avoided, instead of a defence against it. Excessive partiality for one foreign nation and excessive dislike of another, cause those whom they actuate to see danger only on one side, and serve to veil and even second the arts of influence on the other. Real patriots, who may resist the intrigues of the favourite, are liable to become suspected and odious; while its tools and dupes usurp the applause and confidence of the people, to surrender their interests.

A PROPHECY FULFILLED.

Without even the formality of a record vote, the senate on Monday added 338 million dollars to the various farm subsidies for 1940. With these additions the senate on Friday, by a vote of 61 to 14, approved farm appropriations to the total of more than 1 billion 200 million dollars. Mr. Morgenthau, the secretary of the treasury, has again expressed concern about the budget. He thinks a 3 billion dollar deficit in 1940 is about as far as it is safe to go at this time in the direction of bankruptcy and he notes with some dismay that the deficit will probably be much larger than that. The farm bill now goes to the house for consideration of the senate amendments.

In the 1936 campaign the New Dealers told the country that permanent prosperity lay just ahead. They had planned it that way. The promised land would be reached in only a few months more and when it was reached large expenditures for various forms of relief would no longer be required. The budget would then be balanced. Long before 1940 the national debt would be declining.

The Republicans, including Mr. Landon, insisted that the New Dealers couldn't stop spending if they tried. Two reasons were cited. The first was that the politicians who had placed millions of Americans on the dole would not dare risk removing them for fear of the political consequences. That forecast has been proved correct. The other reason was that the huge deficits which were being incurred were so disturbing to the national economy that they were preventing recovery and therefore prolonging the excuse for the dole. That forecast has also been proved correct.

Mr. Roosevelt has already requested a billion and three-quarters for WPA and kindred activities in 1940. The agricultural appropriation is, as was noted above, now almost a billion and a quarter. How much more will be added to these stupendous sums in subsequent deficiency appropriations is anybody's guess, but experience of recent years can leave little doubt that the doles now under discussion are only the start. Even if there are no supplementary appropriations, the deficit in 1940, in spite of the heaviest taxation this country has ever known in time of peace, will approximate three and a half billions.

And in spite of all the huge past and prospective expenditure, in spite of the 20 billion dollars of deficits amassed in the depression, there are still 10 million men and women who can't or won't find jobs and the agricultural outlook is in many fundamental respects worse than it was when Mr. Roosevelt took office in 1933. The surpluses of cotton and grain are today more troublesome than ever, and this in spite of acreage controls, AAA, conservation checks, killing of pigs, plowing under of cotton and all the rest, including the drouth which Mr. Wallace welcomed as an ally. Most of the farmers who were busted when Mr. Roosevelt promised to rescue them are still busted. Hundreds of thousands of them have been driven into the cities to live on the dole. Huge, unsold stocks of farm products have been accumulated by the government at the taxpayers' expense. Prices cannot rise much while these surpluses exist. Worst of all, the farmers have been accustomed to expecting a dole which is contributing its substantial part to the eventual bankruptcy of the nation but is doing nothing to solve the fundamental problems of agriculture.

That is Mr. Roosevelt's record. Events have proved the accuracy of the Republican forecasts of 1936. There can be no change for the better until the New Dealers have been retired to private life and replaced by men of sounder principles and judgment.

WE CAN KEEP OUT OF WAR.

A false and pessimistic idea has gained dangerous influence. It is that the United States cannot keep out of a European war and should recognize the fact in advance. A nation which follows such a line of thought will probably, if not inevitably, get what it concedes it must. The assumption is as false as it is terrible.

Until the United States went into the world war Americans had the sound idea that they just naturally would not be involved in wars on other continents. They believed then what they had been taught, that America had no reason to be concerned when Europeans were quarreling and fighting. They thought their history proved to them that if they didn't take sides, if they had the respect of other nations and were hostile to none, they wouldn't be in other fellows' wars.

In colonial days Americans fought when Europeans fought simply because America itself was part of the stake. When there were battles in Europe decisions regarding American territory were being made, empires were growing or diminishing, and parts of America were changing hands. European wars then involved American campaigns and American colonial soldiers fought in them.

With independence and with the withdrawal of European powers from a large part of the American continent this situation was changed. From then on Europe could fight and America could remain at peace. The war of 1812 was less the result of the Napoleonic wars in Europe and on the seas and more the result of the unsatisfactory relations with Great Britain, here in America. A great deal was made of the injuries done American shipping and trade by the British, but the merchant shipping interests of New England were opposed to the war and the New England states actively resisted efforts of the government to enlist their men or borrow their money for it.

The war was favored, if it wasn't instigated, by the western frontier, where nobody cared about sea borne commerce but where every one was concerned with the Indian problem. The frontier territories and states wanted to dispose of the Indians and to shake off the danger of attacks, prompted and supported, as the frontiersmen thought they were, by British agents in Canada.

These frontiersmen had optimistic ideas of what they were going to do to Canada. They did succeed in ridding themselves of their greatest danger in the Northwest Territory by invading Ontario and defeating the British and Indians in that campaign. They also began the permanent settlement of the Spanish and Indian trouble in the southern states.

From the frontier point of view the war was successful, although it was fruitless elsewhere. Furthermore, the men who wanted that war waited until England was at peace and took on the mistress of the seas when she had a free hand and was able to use Wellington's veterans over here. America got the war because it wanted it and not because Europeans wanted the United States in it. They had stopped fighting.

The experiences in the world war should not impress Americans with what they must do but with what they must not. American participation was not inevitable. The United States took sides because the people who most influenced the government believed, and many of them, no doubt, in all sincerity, that America could not permit the central European powers to inflict a disastrous defeat upon France and Great Britain. Such an opinion never can be prophetically sound. It springs more from sympathy, tradition, and instinct than from reasoning and judgment. The Germans made it difficult for many Americans to remain neutral in thought and attachment to the other peoples did the rest.

The people who influenced the final decision wanted the war. If there had been a different feeling in the United States the specific causes could have been conciliated. It is not true that the United States must be involved in a European war. That is the story of people who want it to be.

SIMPLE ENGLISH.

We are indebted to Mr. Charles Davis, C. E., D. Eng., of Bass River, Cape Cod, Mass.; New York, Philadelphia, and Boston for a copy of an article by him entitled "Debabelize the World Thru Basic English." Basic English is recommended for use as an international language. The vocabulary consists of some 850 English words with which, we are told, almost any idea can readily be presented. The grammar is English grammar. A foreigner can master Basic English in a few months because English sentence construction is simple; moreover, the student will have to waste little time learning inflections and conjugations, for our language is exceptionally free of them. Our spelling is an obstacle, but this disadvantage can be minimized by simplification and is outweighed by numerous advantages.

English is already the most widely spoken tongue in the world and every one who speaks it can take Basic in his stride without even knowing it is Basic. A few years ago the American Mercury published an article in Basic. Few of the readers would have suspected any eccentricity of style if they had not been told about it.

The trouble will come not in making Basic understandable to English-speaking people but in making the communications of English-speaking people understandable to those who have learned Basic. English is at once the simplest and most difficult of languages. Perhaps it can be described as two languages. Basic is the one which resembles French in precision and orderliness and it was that part of our language to which the Frenchman referred when he said that English is only French badly pronounced. The other English is highly idiomatic, subtle, lawless, and bewildering. We who speak English speak these two tongues and we intermingle them in the same sentence without the slightest awareness of what we're up to.

Consider, for example, the word "take," which is in the Basic list. Its primary meaning is to gain possession. As a transitive verb it has twenty-five other more or less related meanings and as an intransitive verb ten more. Some of them are readily inferred from the original and others are not. The student of Basic may have no difficulty with "Napoleon took Warsaw," but what does he make of "Napoleon took offense?" "Napoleon took flight" is obviously an anachronism.

And that is only the beginning of the difficulty. When the thirty-five simple meanings of "take" have been memorized, the user of Basic will still have to discover what we mean when we use "take" in combination with prepositions or adverbs. For example, what do we mean when we combine "take" with "up?"

We shall now take that up, and illustrate our point with the phrase, "They took up the street." That can mean [1] that they stood still and blocked the street, and [2] that they attacked the pavement with picks and shovels. Similarly, "take down" can mean, among other things, to write, to loose, and to dismember. A woman, after or before taking down a letter, her hair, or her vacuum cleaner, may take in washing, a victim, a view, or [in England] a newspaper and none of these diverse acts of gaining a livelihood, betraying, gazing, and subscribing can readily be inferred from the primary meanings of "take" and "in." It should be noted, also, that "taking in washing" is wholly different from "taking the washing in."

We can and do use these combinations in a fashion bewildering to the foreigner. In our ears the language of combinations seems the simpler and therefore the more easily understood. To the foreigner we are much more likely to say "She took in washing" than "She obtained employment as a laundress." The student of Basic will need a lot of help from his tribal gods when it's our turn to talk.

THE SECRET TREATIES

Most wars have to be sugar coated, or they would gag the people that wage them. The sugar coating is propaganda. It covers a wide field, but it has two main objectives.

The first is to paint the enemy, or the prospective enemy, as the basest and most unprincipled nation that has ever afflicted the human race. The Belgian baby yarns of the world war and the screaming of the Hitler press against Czech "oppression" are examples.

The second objective is to convince a people that their own cause is just. This holy war propaganda commonly assumes a loftier plane than the hate propaganda. It usually takes the form of pronouncements by the political leaders of a nation.

When President Woodrow Wilson, addressing a joint session of congress on Jan. 8, 1918, announced the famous fourteen points as America's program for peace, there was little reason to doubt his sincerity. The fourteen points gained wide acceptance as the war aims of not only the United States but its allies also. Allied statesmen paid lip service to them. They did much to bolster the faltering morale of the allied people. Their idealistic tone was a great factor in weakening the will to resist of the people of the central powers. They were the most important and successful propaganda piece of the world war.

They were wrecked at the Versailles peace conference. The rocks that wrecked them were the secret treaties that the leaders of our European allies had negotiated among themselves. While their propaganda bureaus, with the invaluable aid of President Wilson, were successfully selling their own and the American people the crusade to save the world for democracy, they were busy behind the scenes dividing up the world's real estate in the event of their victory.

Of the spoils provisionally divided by these treaties, the old Ottoman empire was by far the richest. France, Britain, and Russia began staking secret claims there in 1915. The negotiations continued until the spring of 1917, with Italy an added claimant.

Russia was promised Constantinople, the prize she had sought for centuries, and 60,000 square miles in Asiatic Turkey bordering on the Black sea.

Britain got the right to exploit commercially the so-called neutral zone in Persia [Iran], which had been interposed between the British and Russian zones of influence when those two nations, without the consent of the Persians, partitioned the economic dominance of Persia in 1907. Eventually she was also awarded the rich oil lands of Mesopotamia and control of Palestine.

France staked an extensive claim in Syria, running far inland to meet the new Russian provinces. The desert interior, it was agreed, was to be set up as native Arab states, but France and Britain divided control over those states.

Independently of her allies, Great Britain used Col T. E. Lawrence and other agents to incite the Arabs to revolt against the Turks. They were promised an independent kingdom, but just how much land they were to receive is still a secret. However, a letter from Sir Henry MacMahon, British commander in Egypt in 1915, gives evidence that Hussein, the Arab leader, was encouraged to think that his boundaries would extend east to the Mediterranean and north to the 37th parallel.

If such a promise was made, the British were engaged in double dealing, for Hussein's territories would have taken in Syria, also promised to France. The conflict between the promises to the Arabs and the Balfour declaration of 1917, promising a Jewish homeland in Palestine, has been a constant source of trouble since.

The biggest secret deal that the allies put over was the treaty of London in 1915, which brought Italy into the war. The Italians were frankly mercenary. Their foreign minister, Salandro, aptly characterized their attitude as one of "consecrated selfishness."

In Europe Italy got not only the Italian inhabited provinces held by Austria but the southern Tyrol, with its 250,000 Germans, and the Dalmatian coast, largely inhabited by Jugo-Slavs. She was promised at London, but lost at Versailles, part of Albania around Valona. Albania was a maverick during the war, her German ruler having been driven from the country, and the allies promised, but failed to deliver, other portions of the little country to Serbia, Montenegro, and Greece.

In the near east Italy got clear title to the Greek Dodecanese Islands, and was promised the southern half of Asia Minor as far east as the territory staked out by France. Great Britain and France apparently had some deal for division of German colonies in Africa, for they promised to cut Italy in on this swag, a promise they did not keep.

Rumania was brought into the war by the promise of the Austrian and Hungarian provinces of Bukowina, Transylvania, and the Banat. In this deal the allies held out on little Serbia, whose claim to some of the same lands they had encouraged.

Germany likewise sought allies by secret treaties, promising territory held by her ally, Austria, in endeavors to bring Italy and Rumania in on her side. Her only success was in the case of Bulgaria. Here the usual case was reversed. Germany was promising lands held by enemy or unfriendly countries, and could go the limit, as the allies were able to do with Austrian and Turkish lands in dealing with each other, Italy, and Rumania.

Japan joined the war in 1914, but contented herself with grabbing the German concessions in the Chinese province of Shantung and German islands in the Pacific. In 1917 Great Britain made a secret treaty agreeing to recognize Japan as the successor of Germany in Shantung, and Japanese rights to all the German islands north of the equator. Japan, in turn, agreed that Germany's Pacific possessions south of the equator should go to the British dominions. The Japanese navy also joined the anti-submarine forces in the Mediterranean.

The diplomats kept on dividing the swag even as their own governments trembled behind them. In 1917 France and Russia reached an agreement for the partitioning of Germany. The French were to have not only Alsace and Lorraine but the rich Saar coal basin as well. The rest of Germany east of the Rhine was to be made into a politically and economically autonomous state, to be held under French military occupation for an indefinite number of years. In the east Russia was to have a free hand in taking German and Austrian territory. A week after the agreement was made the Russian imperial government was wiped out.

In a dozen vital respects the secret treaties ran counter to President Wilson's fourteen points. What happened when they collided at Versailles was well summarized by William Allen White, who said that Wilson reluctantly traded "the substance of European demands for the shadow of American ideals."

The French war department, through members of his staff, communicated details of the secret treaties to Gen. Pershing in July, 1917. Later that year the bolsheviks published the copies they had found in the Russian imperial archives. A few American newspapers carried accounts of this publication, but with expressed suspicion of forgery. Diaries of Col. House and Balfour give substantial evidence that Balfour told House, and probably the President also, something about the treaties in 1917. Nevertheless, partisans of President Wilson have hotly defended his denial, before the senate foreign relations committee in 1919, that he knew about the treaties before he went to Paris.

But whether the President knew about the treaties is of less moment, when the propaganda value of the fourteen points is considered, than the undoubted fact that not one American in a thousand had any suspicion of them until they were rudely brought to light at Versailles. To the day of the armistice Americans thought that they were fighting to make the world safe for democracy, not to advance the imperialistic schemes of European statesmen.

TO MOTHER—WITH LOVE.

EVERY day is mother's—not alone this particular Sunday in May. In the hurly-burly of our busy existence we need to be reminded occasionally of the sacrifices, the ambitions, the all too often unfulfilled longings of the one who gave us life. Motherhood more than any other attribute embodies generosity—the surrender of self. So universal is the acceptance of this meaning that we refer to Mother Nature and Mother Earth, signifying not only fruitfulness but protection—the ever watchful care that endures. Epics glorify her idealism.

But sometimes as youngsters we took her for granted. Of course, we bowed to her wishes and respected her authority. But the advent of illness or misfortune taught us far more of the depths of her affection. In retrospect we can still feel the touch of her hand, the comfort of her presence. No one could adjust the pillow quite so deftly, make it feel so cool; no battery of expert nurses could so calm a troubled spirit. When she was near, worries and apprehensions vanished.

In the building of this great nation—the wresting of the several states from the wilderness—we accord all honor to the pioneers. Strong, courageous men and women braved the dangers of the unknown. History has not failed to record the debt which we, their children and their children's children, owe to their fortitude. Filled with the spirit of independence, of gaining a living from the plains, the forests, and the mountains, they adventured and won.

In these days of modern hospitals and well trained physicians and nurses the primitive conditions surrounding childbirth in many a frontier family can scarcely be visualized. Thousands of infants were born in sod houses with no physician available and no messenger to summon the nearest neighbor—perhaps a score of miles away. But these women took the chance knowing full well the risk, even the tragedy, that might lie ahead. One of the chief obligations of medicine today lies in safeguarding the travail of the great-granddaughters of these daring souls.

One reads the same drama whether the scenes were laid in the colonies along the Atlantic seaboard, the hamlets near the Ohio, or scattered throughout the great northwest. Later the surge of immigration crossed the prairies, conquered the Rockies, and finally reached what later were to be the Pacific coast commonwealths. Homesteads were established along this trail fostering that indomitable spirit which is America.

Outstanding among the traits of these hardy settlers was ambition for their sons and daughters. Reared in a simple environment, they insisted that their young people develop into industrious, honest, God-fearing citizens. Then came education, tantamount to a second religion. Money from many a crock of butter and basket of eggs went into this fund. Fortunate were those who were selected to be the recipients of this bounty, for some had to stay at home to help conduct the farms. The schooling thus acquired was worked for—not accepted as a capsule to be swallowed. As a result it meant more; it took root more deeply; it helped to build strong minds, firm characters, and stalwart bodies. But the homemakers were responsible. For the most part the fathers were too engrossed in fighting drouths, grasshoppers, and prairie fires to guide the destinies of their offspring.

The romance of a lawless, womanless society has been preserved for all time in the tale of Bret Harte, "The Luck of Roaring Camp." He has depicted with great power the softening influence of a newborn babe upon the scamps, the battered and decayed men of a mining settlement. There is something elemental in each of us that reveres motherhood.

FEAR OF LIGHTNING.

E. A. writes: How can I overcome the fear of lightning? Every time there is an electrical storm I become panicky. I was stunned by a bolt in childhood. I have tried not to be afraid, but can't seem to help myself.

REPLY.

It is purely a question of training. Some persons are adversely affected by thunder, the howling of the wind, or looking down from high buildings. You will be free from the trouble as soon as you can banish your apprehensions. After all, the danger is slight. During a storm try to place yourself in the position of those who do not exhibit the slightest timidity and imitate the same attitude. You could reason yourself out of the whole matter with a little practice. Sometimes a psychiatrist is needed.

RICKETS.

A. A. writes: What symptoms would a patient present who has been deprived of vitamin D for months or years?

REPLY.

Chiefly those of rickets. This is a fairly common condition in growing youngsters. The symptoms are: Extreme restlessness at night, head sweating, constipation, delayed or irregular teething, small, flabby muscles, and protruding abdomen. Changes occur in the shape of the chest and the head which are quite characteristic. In many instances the disease may be detected by X-ray examinations.

SCABIES TREATMENTS.

P. H. writes: I have used a prescribed ointment of sulphur for scabies but I am still bothered. What is the next step?

REPLY.

Perhaps some other member of the family is afflicted also and may be reinfecting you. Do you sterilize your undergarments and any clothes that come in contact with the skin? The bedding must also be kept free from the mites. We have a sheet of instructions for the Danish itch ointment, which is stronger than sulphur. This may be secured by sending a stamped addressed envelope with request.

EXERCISE WON'T HELP.

R. S. writes: Because of nearsightedness I wear glasses. Can this defect be cured by eye exercises? Are contact lenses practical for everyday use?

REPLY.

Exercises are of no value in overcoming this handicap. Corrective spectacles will need to be employed. Contact lenses are practical, but expensive. In addition, one has to learn how to adjust and wear them.

MOLES.

T. M. writes: What is the best treatment for moles?

REPLY.

Depending upon the type, electrolysis, carbon dioxide snow, X-ray, radium, or surgery may be required. Any blemish of this sort which starts to grow should be called to the attention of a competent surgeon.

EARNING POWER THE MEASURE OF VALUE.

Chicago, May 7.—Let me express a thought which arises while reading your interesting editorial today on "Worn-out Buildings."

You say that the tax assessor recognizes that buildings wear out, not so much in their physical features as in their usefulness and convenience, and he accordingly assesses them on their cost of reproduction, less allowances for age. This process, carried through the years, puts the Capitol building and other old ones down on the books at one-fifth of the cost of reproducing them today. But, considering the prices for labor and material, is not one-fifth of the cost of reproducing the Capitol building today nearly if not quite as much as it actually cost when constructed, so that the owner gets but little consiseration from the taxing powers?

However, that is not the main point. The assessor has no right to ascertain value by the method you mention or by any other arbitrary practice. The constitution of Illinois and the statute enacted to give it effect direct that real estate shall be assessed at its fair cash value, estimated at the price it would bring at a fair, voluntary sale. The first information that a prospective purchaser of the Capitol building would call for, especially if there had been no recent sales, would be its earning power through a term of years. Long ago the Supreme court of the United States laid down what every man in business recognizes, that earning property has no value except that shown by its earning power. If the assessor were to follow the law in getting at the value for taxation the Capitol building might be profitable to its owner, for there are many who need lower rents than those offered by the more modern buildings.

Several years ago I tried, in a carefully prepared case, on an undisputed record, to get the Supreme court of Illinois to make a declaration on this duty of the assessor and on what is value, but the opinion [358 Ill., 272] consisted of a few stereotyped generalities on this and that without any disposition of the points raised for decision.

The tax tyranny now riding the American people is in consequence of an indisposition of the judiciary, from top to bottom, to protect the individual from his government precisely like that which gave rein to the rough-riders of prohibition. The time is ripening for the people to wipe away another line of judicial decisions deferential to power and disregardful of the constitutional and inherent rights of those whose servants government is supposed to be.

THOMAS JAMES NORTON.

IT SPOILED THE HOGS' EVENING.

Hampshire, Ill., May 8.—Chancing to be in the enchanting little town of Geneva [Ill.] last Tuesday evening, I stood on the bridge across the beautiful Fox river. The full moon hung suspended above the housetops and trees, reflecting silvery beams and lacy shadows upon the rippling, gently murmuring waters.

As I mused, my mind at peace, my heart in tune with the beauties of nature and the ways of man I was suddenly conscious of an unseemingly discordant sound that seemed to blast and rend the beauty and quiet the time and place merited, and I found myself attracted to a truckload of hogs, parked, no doubt, by a thoughtless driver with no appreciation for the fitness of things, directly in front of a local market where pork sausage, pork roasts, hams, and becon were featured in bold display and blatant advertisment.

We cannot know how much a hog understands, but it does seem, and their loud cries bear me out, that the unfortunate and the thoughtless parking before this meat market must have spoiled what would have otherwise been a delightful summer night's drive.

HIRAM THE FARMER.

NEW CLUB.

Winnetka, Ill., May 6.—The Seat Hog's Companion club is now making memberships available to qualified commuters. Membership is secret and there are no dues, countersigns, membership drives, luncheons, or other obligations except:

1. Each member is expected, once a week, to insist on sitting down and riding with a seat hog who, before leaving the station [a] sits in the middle of the seat or near the aisle, or [b] places newspaper or parcels on the seat, or [c] projects foot or arm into the unoccupied seat space.

2. Initiation may be performed any time by sitting down with a class [a] seat hog and eating a package of peanuts.

PHILIP DESEAT.

BRITISH PROPAGANDA.

Chicago, May 6.—I am sure the sentiment of 99 per cent of the American people is expressed in the address of Congressman Sweeney of Ohio. Propaganda pure and simple is seen behind the visit of the king and queen of England. Let us recall that an American queen would not have been tolerated by the English, hence the abdication of their king. Our American men and American money, however, are quite acceptable to the English now and were twenty years ago. Let the American people remember the debt England owes this country, a debt not only of money but of our men who fought their fight and won—though the English will not admit it. K. J. T.

MEXICAN RAILROADS.

Memphis, Tenn., May 5.—If Correspondent Nugent's definition of what the Mexicans did to the railroads, as published in THE TRIBUNE May 4, is valid, then the Affair Northfield was a mere "request" for an unsecured loan to the Brothers James and Younger. At least F. D. R. only "took over" 41 per cent of our bank and life insurance savings. Larceny is much a matter of who does it.

Item: A wreck recently occurred on what prior to the New Deal [Mex.] was known as the Mexican Central, between Chihuahua and Juarez. A 4-6-2 locomotive was involved. When the big hook had done its stuff and the wounded iron horse reposed in the back shop it was discovered that a pair of drivers were beyond the hope of repair. No substitutes were available and the employé management has been unable to persuade economic royalist Yankee equipment firms to provide new material on tick. Thus when the 4-6-2 again took to the road it wheeled on four drivers instead of six. When all the motive power south of the Rio Grande gets down to single pairs of drivers—O, well, we'll be in the same boat in a few years.

NED ALVORD.

THE ROYAL VISIT.

Chicago, May 5.—What's the matter with these people who warn us against being influenced by the visit of the king and queen of England? Can't they think there can be two good views toward living in this wee world—theirs and the other fellow's—without such tolerance meaning imitation must follow?

I am all American myself and glad of it. Yet I can see with pleasure that England and its government have done fair to middling well for a number of years and allowed a good enough bunch of humans to get along content to stay English.

These two coming to visit us soon look like nice people to me and I hope we'll have enough good manners to show them a proper hospitality and welcome. I like friendly relations with any one who is well behaved. I'm no hillbilly, to be wary when strangers come into these parts. I guess the king and queen are at liberty to tell us how they think if they want to and I can take or leave any part of the ideas as they fit my view or not.

BEULAH BARKER.

WHERE ARE THE ORPHANS?

Cicero, Ill., May 5.—In regard to Ora J. North's letter on "Children for Adoption," may I have the privilege of substantiating it? We, as would-be parents, have applications at four different institutions, but so far only one has had our home investigated and approved, by a case worker from the state. But, where are the children whose wistful faces appear every now and then in conjunction with a tag day or a charitable affair for their benefit?

MRS. EDWARD GARBE.

MISCELLANY.

Reedsburg, Wis., May 4.—It seems to me we should long ago have sent Finland a postcard shower as the one nation to pay her debt to us.

Incidentally, if bullet-proof vests are feasible, why not bullet-proof uniforms or underwear for soldiers?

And why is it, knowing what fortune is in store, that no one can invent a glareless headlight?

JOHN A. ZIMMERMAN.

The volume of Legal Friend mail necessitates printed statements on common questions. No copies or records of the letters or answers are kept. Hence follow-up letters should be complete in themselves. A self-addressed envelope will expedite handling.

LEGALITY OF WILL.

Chicago, April 28.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I had an uncle who died a month ago, aged 94. His sister got him to will a two story house to her.

1. My mother was also his sister and she has three daughters. Are these three daughters heirs to the property?

2. The administrator was out to see two of his [uncle's] deceased sister's daughters. He wanted them to sign a paper. He also said the heirs had to sign before it could be settled in court.

3. What I would like to know is, could we, the daughters, break the will?

4. Could we claim our mother's share? If not, why is the administrator so anxious for us to sign? E. M.

1. The will controls unless it can be set aside by proof of undue influence or lack of testamentary capacity. If the wording of the will is such that it does not dispose of the entire estate then the nieces would be heirs.

2. The advisability of signing would depend on the wording of the document.

3. See 1.

4. We cannot advise without knowing the wording.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

DEED TO PROPERTY.

Auburn, Ind., April 27.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Back in 1922 or 1923 my late husband made a quitclaim deed to his sister for a lot. I have never seen the deed.

1. The lot was sold about two years ago.

2. I made the discovery when I was on a deal to sell the same lot to pay my husband's funeral bill. He died four years ago.

3. Can anything be done about it now? I understand my signature was on it.

4. I knew nothing of it and don't recall signing it. J. B.

1. It is not clear whether you mean that you sold it or the sister sold it.

2. What discovery?

3. If you mean to ask whether you can set aside the old deed we would say no, unless you can prove facts additional to those stated in your present letter.

4. It is not clear whether you mean that your signature was a forgery or that you have forgotten.

FARMERS OF A BIG CITY TAKE PRIDE IN RURAL LABORS

Members of Unique Club Till 185,000 Acres.

One of the city's unique organizations is the rapidly growing Chicago Farmers club, composed of business and professional men who are also farm owners. Organized in 1935, the club has 425 members who own 185,000 acres in nineteen states and have some form of control over an additional half million acres of farm and ranch lands.

Most of the members of the club acquired their holdings in the last ten years as hedges against inflation. All insist they are not "hobby farmers," but real ones who are making earnest efforts to get a return on their investments.

Utilize Coöperative Methods.

At intervals they hold luncheon meetings in the Palmer House. Speakers with specialized knowledge discuss problems brought forward by others. The organization also publishes an exchange bulletin which outlines methods for coöperative enterprises.

Recently the club helped to start an artificial breeding circuit for dairy farmers, the first in Illinois. Under the plan adopted, it is possible to breed a large number of cows with a single sire by artificial insemination.

Formerly nearly 90 per cent of the club members engaged in dairying. This percentage has fallen to 60. Now nearly all types of farming are represented—cotton plantations in South Carolina and Mississippi, fruit farms in Michigan, cattle and sheep ranches in the west, rice lands in Arkansas and Louisiana and horse farms in Kentucky.

Bulk of Land in Illinois.

The bulk of the acreage owned outright by members, about 103,000 acres, is in Illinois. Indiana is represented by 28,000 acres and Wisconsin by 15,000. Most of the corn belt farmers who are members depend for financial returns on the cattle, hogs and lambs they feed with grains and forage crops grown on their places. The feeder cattle are brought from western ranges for fattening in the middle west. One member alone feeds 10,000 lambs each year.

A large percentage of the club members live on their lands during the summer. Three-fourths of the farms are operated by tenants on a share basis, and the others with hired help.

George W. Rossetter is president of the club. He owns five Illinois farms and resides on one of them, near Libertyville. Victor S. Rice is secretary. Other officers are Wayne Dinsmore, vice president; Randolph G. Owsley, treasurer, and Earl Butler, Charles S. Deneen and Max H. Hurd, directors.

A. H. BOWYER DIES IN BEMENT.

Bement, Ill., May 13.—[Special.]—Funeral services for Ames H. Bowyer, 89 years old, will be held Monday morning. Mr. Bowyer was a resident of this community for more than half a century. He died suddenly last night.

Egg Hatches Double

Crystal Mavis, 5 years old, plays with two goslings hatched from one egg on a farm near Algonquin, Ill.

Nancy, a Rhode Island Red hen, was surprised when a downy gosling stepped out of one of the eggs on which she had been sitting. She was amazed when another walked out of a second egg and astonished when that one's twin brother followed him out of the same egg. But Nancy quickly regained her aplomb. Yesterday she paraded her brood around the barnyard at Martin Wiekne's farm near Algonquin, in McHenry county, as if it were nothing unusual in the Rhode Island Red family to have some goslings, too. She clucked to herself as she wondered if twin goslings from double yolked eggs ought to have double breasted jackets.

STRANGLES WIFE, PHONES POLICE, SLASHES THROAT

Deranged by two years of unemployment, Gustave Phillips strangled his wife with a towel yesterday because he was unable to support her as well as he felt he should. Then he wrote a note of explanation and, after sitting beside the dead woman for eight hours, telephoned Grand Crossing police. Just before they reached his home at 7612 Coles avenue, Phillips, who was 60 years old, slashed his throat with a razor blade. He opened the door when the police knocked and then collapsed. Police took him to the Jackson Park hospital. His wife, Harriet, was 55.

SEPARATION LAW DANGEROUS RELIC, JUDGE DECLARES

Inadequate for Modern Life, Says O'Connell.

BY MARCIA WINN.

[This is the seventh in a series of articles on separate maintenance. Three bills to abolish this evil are before the Illinois legislature.]

Any legislation to correct abuses of the separate maintenance law would be a good thing, in the opinion of Judge Robert C. O'Connell in Superior court.

Judge O'Connell, now sitting on the divorce bench, agreed yesterday with other divorce court judges of Cook county that the present separate maintenance law is antiquated and misused. Instead of meeting the ends for which it was enacted in 1877, he believes, it now gives a powerful weapon to gold diggers and spiteful wives.

Limited to Two Years.

The three bills now before the Illinois legislature propose to limit separate maintenance to two years. Either husband or wife then might ask for a divorce, regardless of any question of fault or misconduct, and remarry.

"The sponsors of these bills," said Judge O'Connell, "have approached the problem in a progressive spirit and in an effort to eradicate evils that have accumulated in the changing status of the people.

"Any legislation that corrects these evils will be a good thing for the state."

Judge O'Connell's approval, however, is given with some reservations. He believes the changes beneficial so long as they do not too stringently restrict the court in its enforcement of the provisions.

Calls for Flexibility.

In other words, he says, the court should be able to say, when a couple, who have lived separate and apart and without co-habitation for two years, asks for divorce: "Now is there a reason why this condition should continue or should it be terminated?"

"If that question is open for the court to consider at that time," he said, "probably much good would be accomplished. The only thing I can see is to safeguard the situation so that there won't be an inflexible rule to temper the facts.

"Where the marriage is short and it's just a case of someone having acted tempestuously, the court certainly shouldn't lend assistance to women seeking to gain a continuing financial award."

In a recent decision, Judge O'Connell refused to countenance one of the so-called abuses of the separate maintenance law. This was in the case of a woman, a nurse actively employed, whose second marriage was to a Chicago policeman, now ready to retire on a pension.

He's Unable to Retire.

The policeman cannot retire, however, because his wife had his income tied up in temporary alimony, pending the outcome of her suit for separate maintenance. Their life together was brief, but she wished permanent support, without a divorce. The sum she asked was such that the policeman could not afford to retire.

Judge O'Connell curtly dismissed her suit.

Still another view of the separate maintenance racket is that expressed by Circuit Judge Michael Feinberg.

The subject of separate maintenance and its evils is not, he points out, a new one. It has been discussed—futilely—for years. The solution, he believes, lies not in making divorce possible, but in making permanent separate maintenance impossible.

"I believe that the law should not permit a final decree of separate maintenance," he said, "because it doesn't change the status of the parties any. They are still married.

"Once a final decree is entered, the court loses jurisdiction over the case and retains jurisdiction only over questions of alimony and the custody of children.

Asks Protective Power.

"Therefore, it would be better if there were no final decrees of separate maintenance and the court were free to determine at any time during the pendency of this separate maintenance relationship whether the suit is pending for protection or for persecution.

"Whenever it is made to appear to the court that the separate maintenance suit is no longer an instrument of protection, but one used for oppression, the court should dismiss the suit and intervene to prevent further oppression. It is not enough to say that you can stop oppression by stopping the alimony."

If there were no final decree, he pointed out, the suit could be dismissed at will and the parties then be free to sue for divorce.

"Why have a final decree anyway?" he asked. "What's the need of it as long as they remain married.

"After all the sacred duty devolves upon the judge to detect in these separate maintenance situations whether it is a gold digging case or one which has substantial merit in it and is not intended as an instrument of abuse.

"If separate maintenance has been abused, fix it so the court will have a supervisory power. Strip the woman of the privilege of using the suit for that purpose."

Admits to Drawbacks.

The drawback to this, he admitted, is the crowded docket of the divorce courts, in which, he says, "we have ground out divorces and separate maintenance almost like a factory." More time, he says, should be given to the consideration of each case, so that the modern interpretation of marriage as just a commodity on the market, bought and paid for, can be ended.

"I think we're encouraging divorce and separate maintenance in this county beyond all reason," Judge Feinberg said in conclusion. "If we were more severe, more disposed to be strict, and more time were taken to scrutinize each case, it would be better in the end for our social structure. Now we indulge in quantity production of decrees of divorce rather than in quality."

MAN ON RELIEF HOARDS $50,000; HEIRS IN COURT

Mother Seeks Fortune Taken Over by Son.

Rock Island, Ill., May 13.—[Special.]—The strange case of a man on relief who hoarded $50,000 and of his son who took over the fortune was disclosed in Probate court here today.

The disclosure came when the son, Thomas Ryan, 19 years old, was questioned in a court action to discover his father's assets. The action was brought by the boy's mother, who seeks to have herself appointed a guardian to conserve the fortune for her children, who, besides Thomas, are Elaine, 16 years old, and Doris, 8, who have been living with her in Rock Island.

Young Thomas was living with his father, Dennis M. Ryan, when he died three months ago, apparently in poverty, in Alhambra, Cal.

In his testimony Thomas said he discovered his father's hoard, in cash and securities, hidden in an old shoe box. The youth said he deposited some of the money in banks and bought several pieces of real estate.

Mrs. Emma Ryan, the boy's mother, who was divorced from his father, made a recent trip to California to see her son and they returned to Rock Island together. In the back seat of the car, unknown to Mrs. Ryan, was a suitcase containing $20,000 in cash and bonds. Recently the mother made a search and found the case in her attic after she discovered her son was flush with cash.

The Probate court here has caused the available assets to be turned over to the public administrator.

Boy Carrying Camping Outfit Injured by Auto

An unidentified boy, about 15 years old, was seriously injured last night when he was struck by an automobile at 159th street and the Rock Island railroad tracks in Oak Forest. He was taken to the county infirmary there. The boy, blue eyed and with light brown hair, was carrying a camping outfit which included an army canteen and knapsack. The driver of the car was George Hanson, 26, of 167th street and Harlem avenue, Tinley Park, a pressman.

ITALY PRESSES DRIVE TO STEM COFFEE DRINKING

ROME, May 13.—(AP)—Italy's campaign against coffee drinking took a new turn today with an order to bars, restaurants and cafes to try to change the public's taste to domestic beverages, such as "good wine from our Italian soil."

Until today the campaign had been waged as a temporary one to reduce coffee imports until countries like Brazil agreed to accept Italian products for coffee on a barter basis.

Today's order reminded waiters that the mixing of substitutes such as barley with coffee was legitimate but told them to urge citrus fruit drinks, tomato juice and wine upon the public.

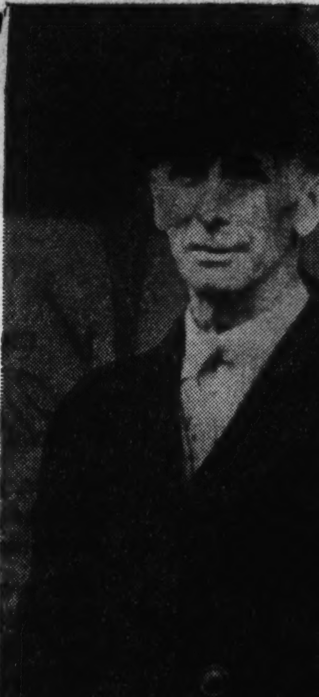
"CARS CERTAINLY HAVE BEEN IMPROVED!"



GEORGE T. HOWELL,
4826 N. Ashland Ave.,
tells why he bought a good used car

"We'd still be driving around in our old car if it hadn't been for a ride we took some weeks ago. My wife and I don't have much use for a car, except for week-end trips and for visiting our children who are all married and have homes of their own.

"One evening recently we drove over to see my son. He told us he'd just bought a late-model and wanted us to take a ride with him.

"He took us out and before we got back we thought we ought to do something about getting a better car ourselves. Cars certainly have been improved in the last few years. They not only look better, but they are easier to handle.

"The next day I started looking through the Tribune want ad section and came across a Dodge 1936 four-door sedan advertised by the James F. Goodwin company at 5725 Broadway.

"I got my son and we went over and talked to Mr. Goodwin and Mr. Oliver, the used car manager. They demonstrated the Dodge sedan to us and we were satisfied it was a good buy.

"The price was $395 with an allowance of $175 for my old car. It's a dandy car and a whole lot more enjoyable to drive than the old one."

Chicago Tribune

Dear Mr. Blend,

We think you will be interested to know of the splendid results we have had from our advertising in the Tribune want ad section.

The Dodge sedan we sold to Mr. George T. Howell, 4826 N. Ashland, was only one of 89 used cars we sold during the first 15 days of March.

During this period we ran a total of 552 lines of classified advertising in the Tribune. This represented 84% of all the money we spent for classified advertising in all Chicago newspapers during the fifteen days in which we sold 89 used cars.

With such gratifying results, we plan to keep on concentrating our advertising in the Tribune.

Very truly yours,

ECONOMY BLOC IN HOUSE FIGHTS SPENDING SPREE

Opposes Addition of 383 Million to Farm Bill.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—The house economy bloc girded itself for a fight to the finish next week on the agriculture bill to knock out the $383,547,959 added to the measure by the senate.

As passed by the senate the bill contemplates the expenditure of $1,218,666,572 by the department of agriculture. The senate added 225 million dollars for farm parity payments and 113 for surplus removal subsidies without a dissenting vote.

The house economy bloc regards the senate additions as having created a test case on economy at this session. If the senate additions are approved by the house, it is felt that the house drive to curtail Roosevelt spending will be a failure.

Means Increased Deficit.

The approval of the senate bill would add almost 400 million dollars to the deficit. President Roosevelt expressed opposition to the additions, but indicated that he would not veto the bill if it passes in its present form. He added that he thought congress should provide funds to meet the senate additions. Senate proponents of the increases have shown no disposition to ask for tax increases to meet the contemplated outlays.

"There will be no economy this session if this bill goes through as it now stands," said Representative Clifton A. Woodrum [D., Va.], leader of the economy bloc. "We will exert every effort to hold the bill down as near the budget estimate as possible."

Representative Clarence Cannon [D., Mo.], who unsuccessfully tried to have the 225 million dollars parity provision written into the house bill, declared the senate increases to be ill-considered. However, he said he was not passing upon the parity payment provision.

May Start All Over Again.

It was reported by Representative George W. Johnson [D., W. Va.], a Woodrum lieutenant, that a move was under way to send the farm bill back to the appropriations committee. This would mean, he said, that the measure would be started all over again and a new bill probably would come out of the committee.

The farm bill was linked by Woodrum to the rivers and harbors and flood control bill passed by the house last week. He pointed out that the house added $50,000,000 to the latter bill to bring its total of appropriations to 225 million dollars.

"The economy lid will be off if the additions to both bills are approved," Woodrum said.

Senate Action Assailed.

"The farm bill is 338 millions above the budget. That's certainly bad. And the senate let the expensive amendments go through without a roll call.

"Apparently there wasn't much of a struggle for economy, although there was a motion to recommit the measure at the last minute. There were no roll calls, however, while the money was being added.

"All I have to say is that there will be a struggle in the house."

NEW EVANSTON POLICE STATION URGED IN SURVEY

Evanston's police station is a disgrace, in the words of a citizens' committee which has spent the last eight months surveying Evanston municipal buildings. The committee, headed by Augustus Knight, recommended to Mayor Henry D. Penfield yesterday that a new station be built as soon as the city can finance it conveniently. The cost is estimated at $75,000 or $100,000. The report said that the station, 36 years old, has inadequate working space. The committee recommended that outside space be rented or that the third floor be remodeled so it can be used if a new building is not built. The report, which lauded Fire Marshal A. N. Hofstetter for the excellent condition of first station No. 1, is to be read at the council meeting tomorrow night.

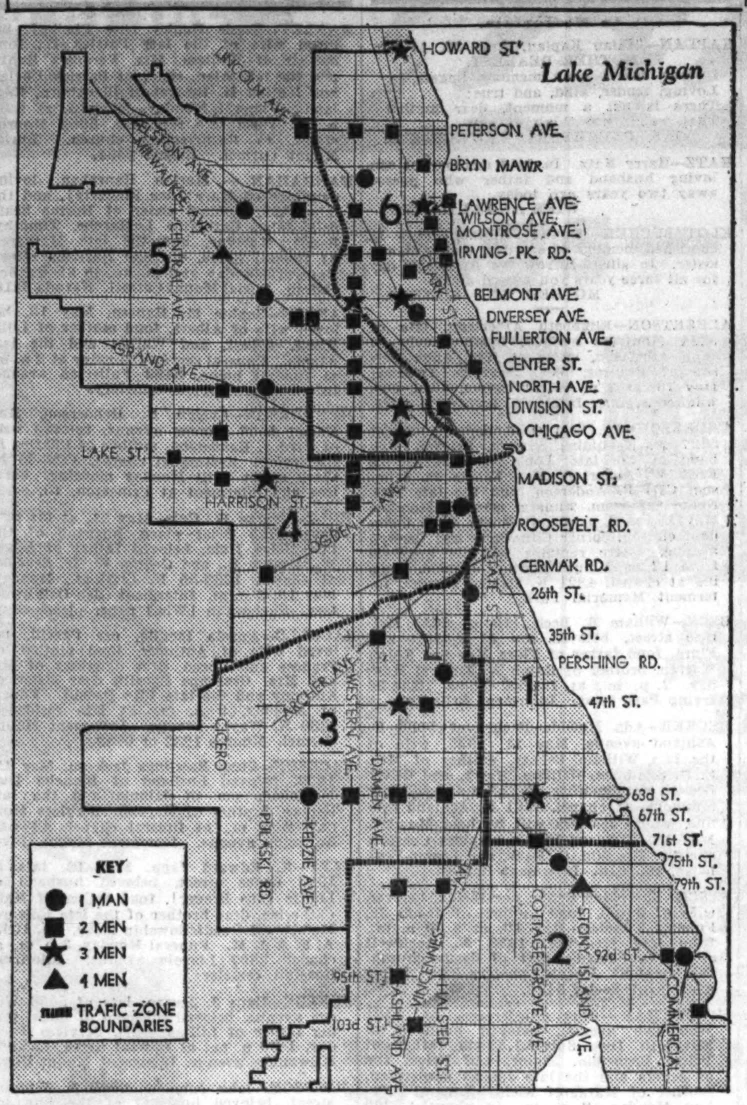
Police to Guard Outlying Trafic



How 189 policemen will be distributed to 77 most dangerous outlying street intersections to direct trafic. The trafic zones designated by large figures will be supervised by officers under command of Capt. David Flynn of the trafic division. Heretofore city police have done little supervising trafic outside the loop district.

189 MORE POLICE PUT ON TRAFIC ACCIDENT DUTY

Added to Division in New Safety Program.

Transfer of 189 police to the trafic division in an effort to reduce accidents was announced yesterday by Commissioner Allman. The order, effective Tuesday, brings the number of men assigned to trafic duty up to 588.

Police transferred previously were attached to district stations. From Tuesday on they will be under the command of Capt. David Flynn, chief of the trafic division, Allman said, and will be assigned to the seventy-seven most dangerous street intersections outside the loop.

Under this plan the trafic division for the first time will be responsible for the movement of trafic on all streets maintained by the city. Drives and boulevards, maintained and policed by the park district, are not affected by the change.

Assignment System Changed.

Heretofore most of the work of the trafic division has been in the downtown business section. Outlying district stations were responsible for assigning men to intersection duty as they could be spared from crime prevention work.

Beginning Tuesday the city will be divided into six trafic zones having the same boundaries as the police department's regular divisions. The men assigned to the intersections will report by police telephone to their superior officers at zone headquarters located in district stations.

The police have been instructed to make frequent tours of the zones to observe the results of the new system. As more men become available, Allman said, they will be assigned to other intersections.

District Work to Continue.

"District commanders are not being relieved of their responsibilities for school and church crossings or other special trafic conditions," Allman said.

"Police from the district stations will be assigned to these temporarily, as in the past. The districts also will continue to enforce trafic laws as well as investigate crime."

Those affected by the transfer order include Lieut. Timothy Lyne of the Brighton Park station, twelve sergeants, and 176 patrolmen.

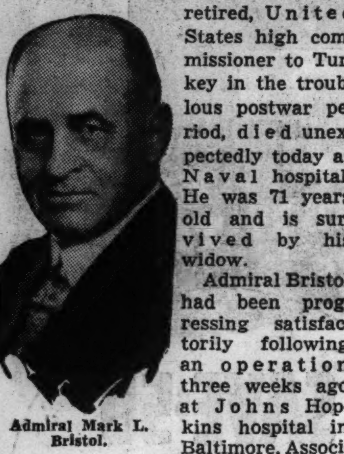
MARK L. BRISTOL, SEA FIGHTER AND DIPLOMAT, DIES

Admiral, 71, Was Post-War Envoy to Turkey.

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, retired, United States high commissioner to Turkey in the troublous postwar period, died unexpectedly today at Naval hospital. He was 71 years old and is survived by his widow.



Admiral Mark L. Bristol.

Admiral Bristol had been progressing satisfactorily following an operation three weeks ago at Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore. Associates blamed his death upon a weak heart.

Admiral Bristol served his country on every class of ship, and in all principal naval stations, besides rendering valuable services as an envoy and diplomat.

Commended by Hughes.

His services as high commissioner to Turkey, a former enemy country, were so valued by the state department that Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes [now chief justice of the Supreme court] wrote a special letter to the secretary of the navy commending the admiral's services. From 1919 until 1927 he served both the navy and state departments in the Mediterranean area, then returned to Washington for special service under the state department.

China was undergoing a strong nationalistic movement at that time and Admiral Bristol was placed in command of the Asiatic fleet to observe the situation for the American government.

Spanish War Veteran.

Admiral Bristol also served with distinction throughout the Spanish-American war. He was a lieutenant aboard the battleship Texas at the battle of Santiago, which marked the end of Spain's naval power. He commanded the battleships North Carolina and Oklahoma in the world war, and later helped coördinate United States and British naval operations while in command of the naval base at Plymouth, England.

Born in Glassboro, N. J., on April 17, 1868, he entered the naval academy in 1883. He was one of the navy's foremost experts on gunnery, torpedoes, and aircraft. He retired in 1932.

BOAT BUILDERS ERR; SO HOUSE REPAIR IS NEXT

The planning's everything in building a boat, Nicholas Folgers told his sons, Nicholas Jr. and John. And so they read about boat building in encyclopaedias, drew sketches, bought 1,500 nails, 500 screws and their wood. When they had their planning done, it was January, and when they had their building done it was yesterday.

There wasn't a nail left in the Folgers home at 2701 Wesley avenue, Berwyn. The screws came out even, too, and the timber. Nicholas Sr., who is 57 years old, said it was perfect planning. So did Nicholas Jr., and John. That was just before they remembered that they'd built the boat in the basement, and that the door was much too narrow. They didn't mention when they planned to rebuild the wall they tore out to get their boat outside.

Catholic Church to Tax Members, Austria Hears

VIENNA, May 13.—[U. P.]—Austrian bishops of the Roman Catholic church, under the chairmanship of Cardinal Innitzer, archbishop of Vienna, were reported tonight to have decided upon a church tax similar to that effective in the remainder of Germany. It amounts to 3.8 per cent of each communicant's income tax. The bishops met to decide whether the church should base its future financial existance upon voluntary contributions or exercise the right recently conferred by Reichsfuehrer Hitler to levy the communicants tax.

CHURCH CHARTS ITS FUTURE WITH ECONOMIST'S AID

Survey Shows Best Course to Assure Growth.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Application of business survey methods to the problems of church locations bids fair to get surprising results in reviving church memberships.

The method was used by North Shore Baptist church at 1311 Berwyn avenue in a survey just completed. James L. Kraft, chairman of the church board, yesterday made public a report on the study.

When questions arose in the North Shore congregation concerning the present location of the church Mr. Kraft and the Rev. Dr. Herbert W. Virgin, the pastor, asked David O. Taylor, economist of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE business survey staff and a member of the church board, to make the study. Mr. Taylor will explain his findings to the congregation by means of seventeen charts on Sunday, May 28.

Two Lines of Study Open.

"Two lines of investigation were open to Mr. Taylor," Mr. Kraft explained. "One was what is happening to the North Shore church's membership, and the other, what is happening to the neighborhood of the church. Are people moving toward or away from the church? Is the community growing and improving, or declining?"

The first chart answers the first question. It shows that in 1920 the church had 432 members, 158 of whom—or 37 per cent—became permanent members and remained on the rolls at least nine years. But the total membership increased during the period to 892 persons. Forty per cent of these remained on the rolls through 1938, when the membership reached 1,321.

A projection of these figures indicates a church of 1,800 members with a permanent membership of 40 per cent in 1948. The study also shows that declining population and notable social changes in the neighborhood are not likely to occur for twenty-five years.

Unmarried Poulation High.

Another feature disclosed by the study is that there are more single persons in the Edgewater district than elsewhere in Chicago. It is also the area of highest educational standards of Chicago.

The report advises retention of the present site. It states:

"The area has high economic rating. It presents a superb opportunity for the church. Here are young people, restless, trying to get settled in the business world and form their lifelong social relationships. They are the kind of persons who, potentially, become the most useful members of the church and community."

FREDERICK FAKE, EARLY MUNICIPAL COURT JUDGE, DIES

Frederick L. Fake, one of the first judges of the Chicago Municipal court, died last night in his summer home at Long Beach, Ind., after a brief illness. He was 70 years old. His offices were at 29 South La Salle street.

Judge Fake served on the Municipal court bench from 1906 to 1914, when he resigned to resume the private practice of law. For ten years before going on the bench he was an assistant state's attorney. About seventeen years ago he reassumed his old prosecutor rôle as a special assistant state's attorney in charge of labor terrorism investigations. He was born in Chicago.

Surviving Judge Fake are his widow, Alice, and three daughters and one son, born to his first wife. They are Mrs. Florence Gosnell, wife of Prof. Harold S. Gosnell of the University of Chicago, Miss Mary Fake and Miss Effie Fake, and Fred R. Fake. Funeral services have not yet been arranged.

Charleston, S. C., May 13.—[Special.]—Two Illinois youths are members of the 1939 graduating class, the largest in the history of The Citadel, a military college. They are Charles Henry Soutter Jr. of Oak Park and Andrew Alex Sabados of Aurora.

Twenty-two seniors in the class, which will be graduated on June 3, are candidates for bachelor of arts degrees and 120 are eligible for bachelor of science degrees. South Carolina, with seventy-two native sons, has the largest representation in the class. There is one graduate each from Cuba and the states of Wyoming and California.

IMPERIAL QUARTET AT LAIN & SON Exclusively

In 1932 Lain & Son announced that the Imperial Male Quartet and Organist would be included with all Chapel services.

First with Imperial Quartet

This was the first time in Chicago that any funeral director included music as a part of the service, for previously a quartet had cost $30 to $50 additional.

When the new Chapel of Lain & Son at 5501 N. Ashland was opened in April, 1937, the same policy of making available a quartet was continued.

Two Quartets . . Two Chapels

Now there are two Imperial Quartets—and two Lain & Son chapels—and with every service, regardless of cost, the IMPERIAL MALE QUARTET is included without extra charge — as well as organ and organist.

First in Chapel Services

Chicago's preference for Lain & Son funerals is now greater than for any other concern.

DETECTIVE SHOT IN GANG FIGHT 20 YEARS AGO DIES

Detective Sergeant James F. Carlin of whom hospitals had become a second home since he was shot in a battle with gangsters twenty years ago, died yesterday in the Alexian Brothers hospital. Sergt. Carlin, who retired last year, was an uncle of Lieut. Kyran Phelan, in whose home at 1007 South Austin boulevard he lived when he was not in a hospital. The sergeant was 64 years old, a veteran of forty years' service.

One night in 1919 he and Sergt. Hugh McNally stopped some suspects for questioning at 22d and Canal streets. The suspects suddenly opened fire, wounding both detectives. One of the gunmen was Nicholas Viana, known as The Choir Boy and The Singer. He was executed on his 19th birthday, in 1920, for the murder of Andrew Bowman. Sergt. Carlin carried the bullet in his back to his death.

Funeral services will be held at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday in St. Charles Borromeo church, Roosevelt road and Hoyne avenue, with burial in Mount Olivet cemetery.

Thomas post No. 5 of the G. A. R. The membership is ten, but the other veterans were unable to attend the meeting.

Those present were Capt. Thomas Ambrose, 91 years old, commander of the G. A. R. Memorial association; Capt. Arthur Dawson, 94, adjutant general of the state G. A. R.; Lieut. Milton Myers, 97, state chaplain; James Lewis, colored, 97, and James Quigley, 91. All saw at least two years of active service during the civil war.

The post's Memorial day celebration will be held in Rosehill cemetery. Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg address will be read by Myers, and the other members will participate in wreath laying ceremonies.

EX-SENATOR DILL AND EX-TEACHER MARRY IN WEST

Seattle, Wash., May 13.—(AP)—Clarence C. Dill, former United States senator, and Miss Mabel Aileen Dickson, former college teacher he met in Washington, D. C., three years ago, were married today in the garden of a private home. Dill is now a Washington and Spokane attorney. Miss Dickson is a native of Crystal, N. D.

Dill, about 55, wed Rosalie Jones, Long Island, N. Y., suffraget leader, in March, 1927, at Gold Harbor, N. Y. They were divorced in June, 1936, two years after Dill retired as senator from Washington state. He charged cruel and inhuman treatment, saying she was stingy and "queer." He accused her of telling acquaintances he "drank like a fish," and was going blind. Mrs. Dill asked the court for $40,000 she claimed to have given the former senator, but this was refused and Dill won the divorce.

Too Many Filipinos Answer Army Mobilization Call

MANILA, May 13.—(AP)—The Philippine army's first mobilization was a surprising success, the general staff reported today. The army called 23,277 trainees on May 2 and 24,174 reported, including Moros from Mindanao, Sulu, Cebu, and Bohol Islands, who were not ordered out. Officers had a hard time convincing the Moros they were not needed and could return home. Only 90.4 per cent of the officers responded.

$1 Per Week Includes both the Instrument and Lessons

READ THIS In this big city of Chicago there are thousands of people who do not realize the opportunity awaiting them to study music and own their own instrument at a very low cost. You or your child can own a fine musical instrument and receive private instruction from Chicago's outstanding teachers and not pay as much as the lesson alone usually costs.

The Musical Instruments

All are new, standard make—such as Hohner Accordions (just the kind for beginners)—Holton Band instruments—Regal Guitars—Deagan Percussion—Wm. F. Ludwig Drums, etc. Delivered upon small down payment. All instruments offered with this plan valued at more than $40, fully guaranteed and serviced free of charge.

THE MUSIC LESSONS

Are private by instructors selected for their ability. Any qualified student can join our many bands and musical units with free instruction in addition to their Private Lessons each week. Lessons by appointment from 9:30 A. M. to 9:30 P. M. No need to bring your instrument. Others furnished for teaching.

BUCK NEWSOM GOES TO TIGERS IN 10 PLAYER DEAL

KENNEDY, FIVE OTHERS SENT TO ST. LOUIS CLUB

Detroit Gives Up 4 Pitchers.

St. Louis, Mo., May 13.—(AP)—A transaction involving ten players, one of the biggest baseball trades of recent years, was completed tonight between the Detroit Tigers and the St. Louis Browns.

The deal, announced by General Manager Jack Zeller of the Tigers, centered around Louis [Buck] Newsom, big right hand St. Louis pitcher whom Detroit had sought for some time. In addition to Newsom, Detroit also gets Outfielder Roy Bell, Infielder Ralph Kress, and Pitcher James Walkup.

In exchange the Tigers gave Pitchers Vernon Kennedy, Roxie Lawson, George Gill, and Bob Harris, Outfielder Chester Laabs, and Infielder Mark Christman.

Trade Not Unexpected.

The trade was not unexpected, the Detroit management having openly admitted it was after Newsom when the team went into a tailspin that saw it drop to the bottom of the American league standing. Zeller accompanied the Tigers on their trip to St. Louis and had been conferring with President Donald L. Barnes and General Manager William O. De Witt of the Browns for two days.

No cash was involved in the transaction.

Newsom, 31 years old, who has seen service with a number of major league clubs, won 20 games and lost 16 for St. Louis last season. He defeated the Tigers, 5 to 3, today for his third victory of the season.

Kress and Walkup also are veterans, the former being 32 years old and the latter 28. Kress has been in and out of the majors during the last decade. Bell, who is 30, batted spectacularly with the Browns in 1936 and 1937, but fell to a .262 average last season.

Kennedy Also Veteran.

Of the players Detroit is giving up, Lawson is the oldest in point of service with the Tigers, having joined the club in 1935. His best year was 1937 when he won eighteen games and lost seven. Last season Lawson lost nine games and won eight. He is 30 years old.

Kennedy, who is also 30, came to the Tigers from the Chicago White Sox in the deal that sent Gerald Walker, Mike Tresh, and Marvin Owen to the Comiskey club at the end of the 1937 season. Kennedy won his first nine games for Detroit last year and then faltered, winding up with twelve victories and nine losses.

Gill went to Detroit from the Texas league in 1937 and pitched well. Last season he won twelve games and lost nine.

Laabs, a great hitter in the minors, has had several trials with the Tigers but has never been able to solve major league pitching. He has been on the bench most of the present season. Last year he alternated between Detroit and Toledo of the American association, batting .293 for Toledo and .237 for the Tigers.

Harris a Youngster.

Christman is another Texas league product, having joined the Tigers a year ago. He was Detroit's third baseman most of last season, batting .248. When Detroit acquired Frank [Pinky] Higgins from the Boston Red Sox during the winter, Christman was relegated to the bench. He is 24 years old.

Harris, a 22 year old right hander, was brought up from Toledo last season. He won thirteen games and lost twelve for the Mudhens.

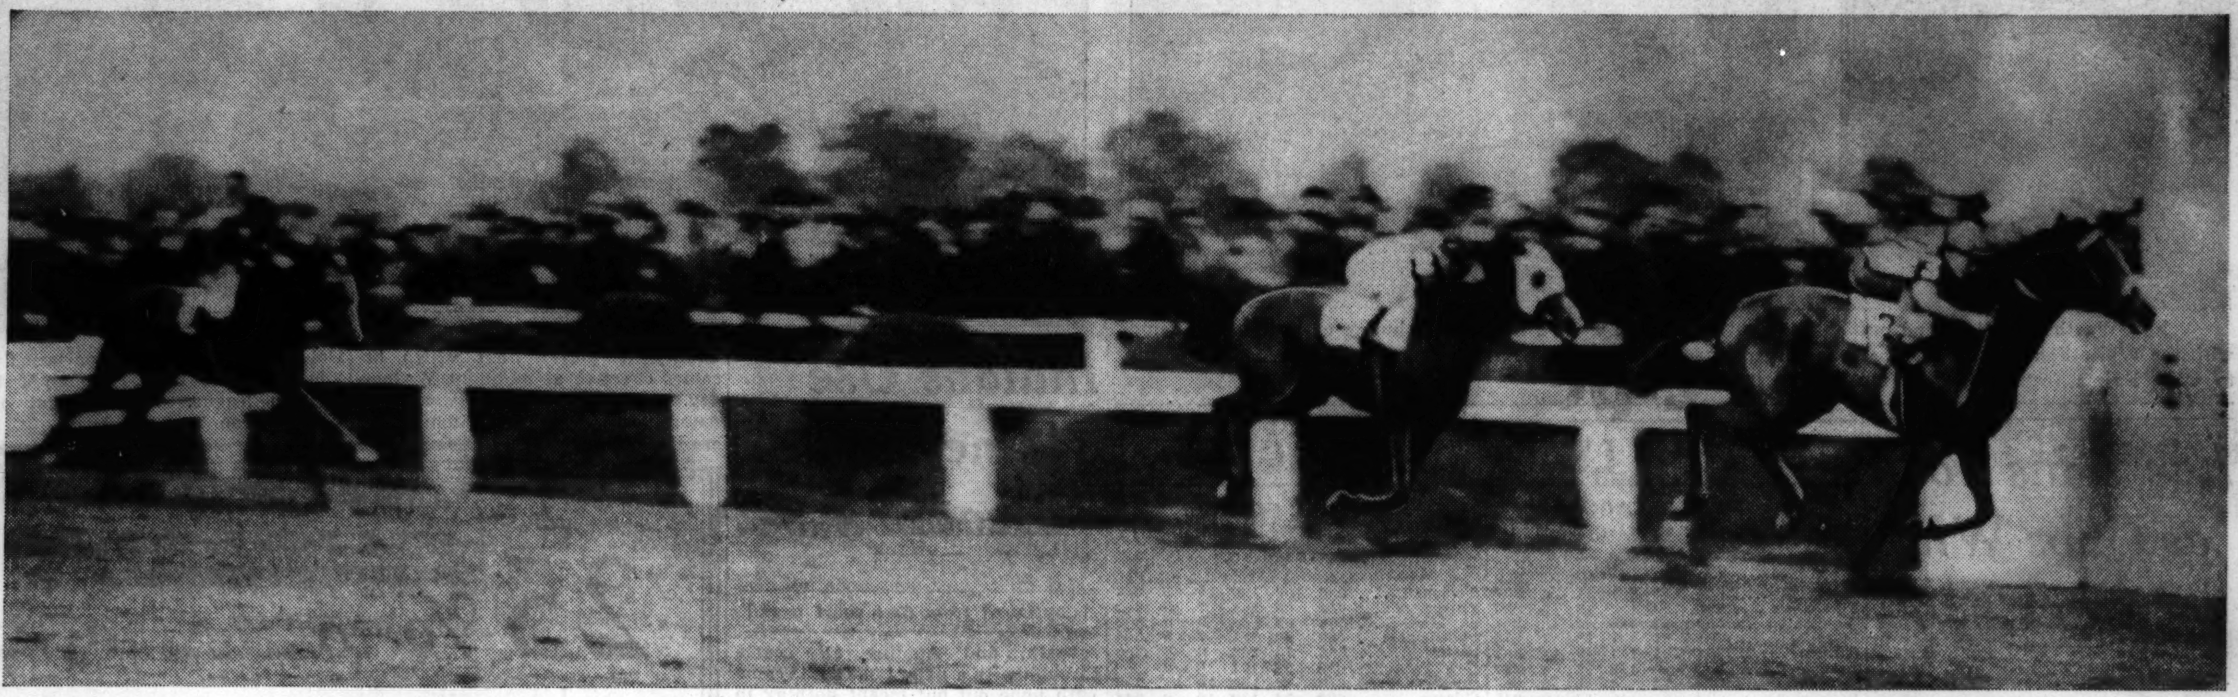
MAJ. NOEL LEAF, BRITISH POLOIST, IS DEAD AT 44

Santa Barbara, Cal., May 13.—[Special.]—Maj. Noel W. Leaf, 44 years old, noted British polo player and master of ponies for British polo teams, died in his winter home here yesterday. Following cremation of the body, Mrs. Leaf will leave for England with the ashes, final interment being in the family vault at Warwickshire. The widow, and a daughter, Angela Leaf, 16 years old, who remained at school in England when her parents came to America last winter with the British polo team, survive.

Maj. Leaf was taken ill at Del Monte last January with lung ailment.

As an officer of the fifteeth king's royal hussars, a cavalry regiment, Leaf served with distinction in the world war. In Argentina last year he purchased the ponies which will be used in New York at the Westchester international matches starting June 4.

CALL FOR JOHNSTOWN! CALL FOR JOHNSTOWN!



Finish of the Preakness at Pimlico yesterday in which Challedon beat Gilded Knight and Volitant, while Johnstown, the Kentucky Derby winner and favorite, trudged along, fetlock deep in the mire, behind Impound in fifth place. The heavy going was too much for the famous Woodward colt and the field swept past him coming up the stretch. He beat only the filly, Ciencia. [Associated Press Wirephoto.]

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Edgar Smith, the fair haired left hander who recently entered the White Sox family circle with a triumph over the titleholding Yankees, came back for a repeat performance yesterday, this time against the Cleveland Indians. The ex-Athletic, Manager James Dykes' latest find on the baseball bargain counter, was neither very good nor very bad, but was fighting a jinx and the jinx got him. The Indians won, 5 to 2, making the ninth defeat in succession they've hung on Smith since he came into the league in 1937.

Another complication encountered by Smith and his associates was one Willis Hudlin, who didn't seem to have the knack of preventing batters from becoming base runners. He was a past master, however, in the art of keeping the runners from making much progress, fair evidence of which is that only two scored out of fourteen who survived either through hits, an error, or passes. Three double plays, two of them on grounders by Marvin Owen, also were of material assistance to the Indian right hander.

They Catch Up with Ed.

Smith skipped along so brilliantly for three innings that 7,500 spectators began to figure the pace would go on forever. But the Dykes' bargain got a jolt in the fourth, the Indians scoring once to offset an earlier run by the Sox. Then Julius Solters put Cleveland ahead with a home run in the sixth just as a preliminary to a seventh inning salvo with which the Indians settled everything, including Smith. His removal brought forth Doc Clint Brown again, because of a suspicion that Hudlin would weaken. Hudlin didn't falter but the doctor had a little difficulty in the form of a homer by Ken Keltner in the eighth.

There were only three standouts in the entire layout of active Sox. Tops among this select trio was Rip Radcliff who wasted a two bagger but got production on two singles, one by driving in a run in the third and the other starting him toward the plate in the seventh. Owen compiled a pair of singles, one assisting in the

EUROPE'S BOXING TEAM OFF FOR ST. LOUIS TODAY

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Europe's amateur boxing team, conqueror of Chicagoland's Golden Glovers Friday night, five bouts to three, will leave town today for St. Louis. The Europeans, proud of their first conquest of a Chicago team, will board a Chicago and Alton train at 9:30, daylight saving time, in Union station.

The European team will meet a St. Louis Golden Glove squad in matches sponsored by the St. Louis Globe Democrat Wednesday night, completing the international contract arranged for them by The Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. In other years the European team has met and defeated Kansas City and Minneapolis. The visitors will leave immediately after the St. Louis bouts for New York and will sail Saturday on the S. S. Columbus.

Europeans Have Day Off.

Hugely delighted over their victory, the European boys spent their last day in Chicago visiting friends and in individual sightseeing tours. Coach Steve Klaus gave the boys this one day off. They will resume training tomorrow.

For the defeated Chicago team, keenly disappointed by the first defeat in international history and the first by any team since New York won in 1934, the day after was more depressing because Ragon Kinney, captain of the team, who met Luigi Musina for the 175 pound championship, was in the hospital.

Ellis Is Cheered.

Kinney's arm was badly bruised by the crushing right hand punches of

If You Missed Golf Lesson There's Still Time to Catch Up

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

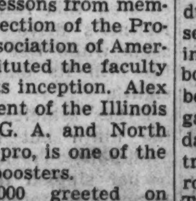
The seventh annual free golf school conducted by THE TRIBUNE, one of the true innovations of modern golf, also boasts another invention—the elasticity of the curriculum. Where most students must show at least a semester's credit in any other educational project, the willing pupils in the largest system of group instruction in the history of any American sport are not required to produce such qualifications.



Alex Cunningham.

A total of 35,000 men, women, and children from the Chicago district already have taken lessons from members of the Illinois section of the Professional Golfers' Association of America, who have constituted the faculty of the school since its inception. Alex Cunningham, president of the Illinois division of the P. G. A. and North Shore Country club pro, is one of the school's stanchest boosters.

A class of 19,000 greeted on Tuesday evening by the best weather ever to attend the opening night of the school, was followed by another 16,000 on Thursday's second lesson, in spite of temperatures in the 40s.

You're Still Eligible.

If you missed those first two lessons, don't consider yourself ineligible for the concluding two classes to be held this week on the same four courses of the Chicago district. Merely bring one golf club to the course most convenient to you at 7 o'clock Tuesday and Thursday nights.

The Illinois P. G. A. members who have been conducting the classes are eager to give you a summary of the major points of the first two lessons. They plan to give a résumé of the grip, taken up last Tuesday night, and the stance, the topic of Thursday's instruction.

The same four courses of the Chicago park district, made available through the commissioners of the district, will be the scene on Tuesday and Thursday of the concluding two lessons. For the benefit of those who have not yet taken the lessons, the names and locations of the four courses are: Jackson, 63d street and Stony Island avenue; Columbus, Jackson boulevard and Central avenue; Diversey, Diversey boulevard at the lake, and Marquette, Marquette road and Kedzie avenue.

Pick Most Promising Pupils.

Following the final lesson next Thursday, the members of the Illinois P. G. A. who have been conducting the classes will form four separate juries and name the pupils in each division—men's, women's, boys', and girls'—who have proved the best pupils in the classes. These will gather again on the afternoon of Sunday, May 21, at one of the park district courses to be announced tomorrow, to vie for prizes awarded by THE TRIBUNE.

Redskins Sign Todd, Texas A. & M. Star Back

College Station, Tex., May 13.—(AP)—Dick Todd, Texas A. & M.'s great broken field runner, signed a contract today to play professional football with the Washington Redskins. It was reported he would receive more than $4,000 his first season. The halfback will join Sam Baugh and Charlie Malone, two other Redskins who were Southwestern conference stars.

LAZZERI GIVEN RELEASE; ILL WITH TONSILITIS

Boston, Mass., May 13.—[Special.]—Tony Lazzeri, veteran infielder signed last winter by the Brooklyn Dodgers, was given his unconditional release today, Manager Leo Durocher announced in a surprise move.

Lazzeri, now 34 years old, did not accompany the team here because of an attack of tonsilitis. He has played fourteen games for the Dodgers this spring, as a pinch hitter, second and third baseman. He batted .282, making eleven hits, which included three home runs, and batted in six tallies.

Before being released in the winter of 1937 to enable him to take a position with the Chicago Cubs as a utility infielder and adviser, Lazzeri played for twelve years with the New York Yankees. Lazzeri requested his release from the Cubs last winter and was signed by the Dodgers.

SURPRISE TO LAZZERI.

New York, May 13.—(AP)—Tony Lazzeri said today his unconditional release by the Brooklyn Dodgers came as a surprise to him and that he had no plans for the future.

Reached at his apartment, where he is convalescing from an attack of tonsilitis, Lazzeri declared:

"I got a telegram only about twenty minutes ago. It was a surprise to me. I thought I was doing all right and expected to join the club in Chicago.

"I don't know what I am going to do, except I'll stay in New York for a week or so. This tonsilitis will keep me here for awhile."

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 13.—Big Bill Lee accomplished his fourth victory of the year today as he and the Cubs turned back the Pittsburgh Pirates, 6 to 2, in their fourth conquest of the Pirates this infant season. It was the ninth straight Cub victory over the Pirates, counting events this spring and late last season.

Today's success was designed to make the Cubs forget the anguish which attended the front end of the voyage now near its end. The trip started with four consecutive losses and five setbacks in the first six games of the journey. Since Gabby Hartnett raised hell with the boys after last Sunday's game the team has won four out of five, which has caused the none too subtle Hartnett to publicly deny his efficacious growling and lay claim to executing sly and gentle strategems.

Gabby Sets Pace.

Whatever the impetus, the Cub offensive, with a dozen hits in the first six innings, was right powerful, with the old gent himself contributing more than his share with three hits in his first three times at bat. Augie Galan, with a single and a double, his first two times up, was a factor in the production of the first two runs and Dickie Bartell was an important man in the four run sixth with a triple which sent Bob Klinger to cover.

The Cub defense was sloppier than it has been in any game this year, what with Bartell contributing two errors and waving at a ball which was scored as the sixth and last hit off Lee. Galan dropped an easy fly after having it in his hands and Lee made a bad throw. None of the miscues disconcerted the sometime temperamental Lee, however.

Cubs Take Lead.

Lee did not allow more than one hit in any one inning. Of the six hits he allowed all were singles except a homer which Bill Brubaker socked over the left field wall in the sixth, after the Cubs were leading 6 to 1. Lee had some trouble with his control, walking seven, but otherwise he had all his stuff.

The Cubs made one run and two

JOHNSTOWN IS FIFTH AFTER STRONG START

Gilded Knight 2d; Volitant Third.

Baltimore, Md., May 13.—[Special.]—Challedon, a Maryland bred horse owned by W. L. Brann, won the 49th running of the Preakness stakes this afternoon at Pimlico, beating Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Gilded Knight by a length and a half before 30,000. The Saratoga stable's Volitant was third, A. G. Vanderbilt's Impound fourth, and William Woodward's overwhelming favorite, Johnstown, fifth.

In the six horse field the Kentucky Derby winner led only the filly Ciencia to the finish line, after he had set the pace for six furlongs.

On a track that had been drenched by an all day rain, Challedon ran the mile and three-sixteenths in 1 minute 59 4-5 seconds, which was only 1 3-5 seconds over the Preakness record which High Quest set five years ago.

Mud Tells the Story.

The outcome of this $71,345 race seemed to support the theory that Challedon is a stayer which can run in the mud and Johnstown is a speed horse which requires a dry track if he is to maintain his pace over a distance. It was the first time he had ever gone to the post in mud.

The betting support was concentrated on Johnstown and Gilded Knight, which ran as an entry because both are trained by James Fitzsimmons. Accordingly, Challedon paid $14.40 to win, $3.50 to place and $2.90 to show. Gilded Knight's prices were $2.30 and $2.10. Volitant returned $3.10 for show. Brann received $53,710 as the winner's share of the purse.

A Myth Is Exploded.

Johnstown's victories in four consecutive races this season, including the Wood Memorial and the Kentucky Derby, had given many observers the idea that no horse of his age could beat him at equal weights. There had always been some doubt what would happen if he were asked to run in the mud, but it had been believed generally that he possessed a champion's ability to cope with any kind of going. That belief was shattered on the turn out of the back stretch today when he failed to respond to Jockey Jimmy Stout's urging as his pursuers closed on him rapidly.

Challedon is trained by Lou Schaefer, who rode Dr. Freeland to victory in the Preakness of 1929. Today's winner was piloted by George Seabo.

Challedon is the first Maryland sired and Maryland owned winner of the Preakness since 1877, when Clover Brook scored. Challedon is the colt which won the New England, Maryland, and Pimlico futurities last year for a total of $67,700. His winnings to date this year are $61,210.

The whole field, including Challedon, was slow at the break. Volitant was slightly interfered with after having been handled by two starters who strove to get him started straight. Johnstown went to the front, closely accompanied by his stablemate, Gilded Knight.

Johnstown Is Good for a While.

The first time past the stands Johnstown had to be pushed harder to open up an advantage, but at the clubhouse turn it seemed that he was running well within his power. Challedon was fourth at this stage of the going, with Volitant last.

Straightened away in the back stretch Johnstown went along in front, but he never could shake off Gilded Knight. Impound and Volitant closed ground. As they approached the far turn Ruperto Donoso sent Gilded Knight after Johnstown in earnest and shortened the leader's advantage to perhaps a length. As these two stablemates skirted the far turn Seabo slipped into third position. Half way around the bend he made his move, as did Donoso aboard Gilded Knight. The two moved up on Johnstown and for a brief moment the three were going head and head.

Leader Drops Back.

They were at the top of the stretch now and Johnstown had had enough. For another moment Gilded Knight

Johnny Yields Only 4 Hits to Beat Cardinals.

Cincinnati, O., May 13.—(AP)—Johnny Vander Meer was back in his last season's form today and won his first victory of the season as the Cincinnati Reds beat the pace setting St. Louis Cards, 2 to 1. Batted off the mound in his four previous starts, Vander Meer yielded only four hits, struck out nine and showed control in the pinches. He walked three.

After the third not a Cardinal got to first base until the ninth, when Enos Slaughter doubled. Gutteridge, trying to score from first on the hit, was out at the plate to end the game.

BEES WIN AGAIN, 5-3.

Boston, Mass., May 13.—(AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers erred four times today and the Boston Bees took the second straight victory of their series, 5 to 3. Freddy Fitzsimmons and Luke Hamlin gave up thirteen hits, but their plight was made hopeless by blunders in the field and a passed ball which put one runner in position to score. Score:

Browns Drop Tigers Into Cellar, 5-3

St. Louis, Mo., May 13.—(AP)—Two double plays, one coming in the ninth inning with the tying runs on base, enabled the St. Louis Browns to beat the Detroit Tigers today, 5 to 3. The defeat dropped the Tigers into the American league cellar.

Buck Newsom tired badly in the late innings, but managed to last and win his third game of the season. George McQuinn contributed a homer with a man on in the fifth.

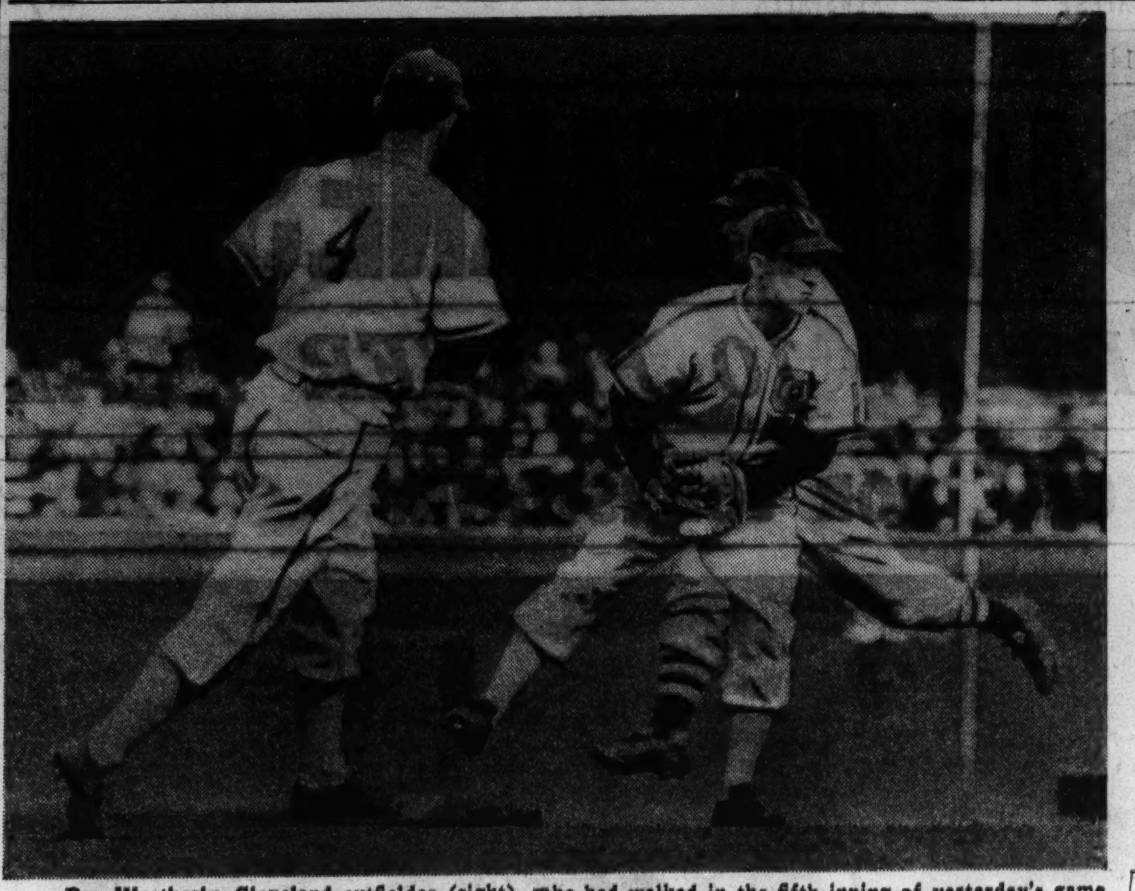
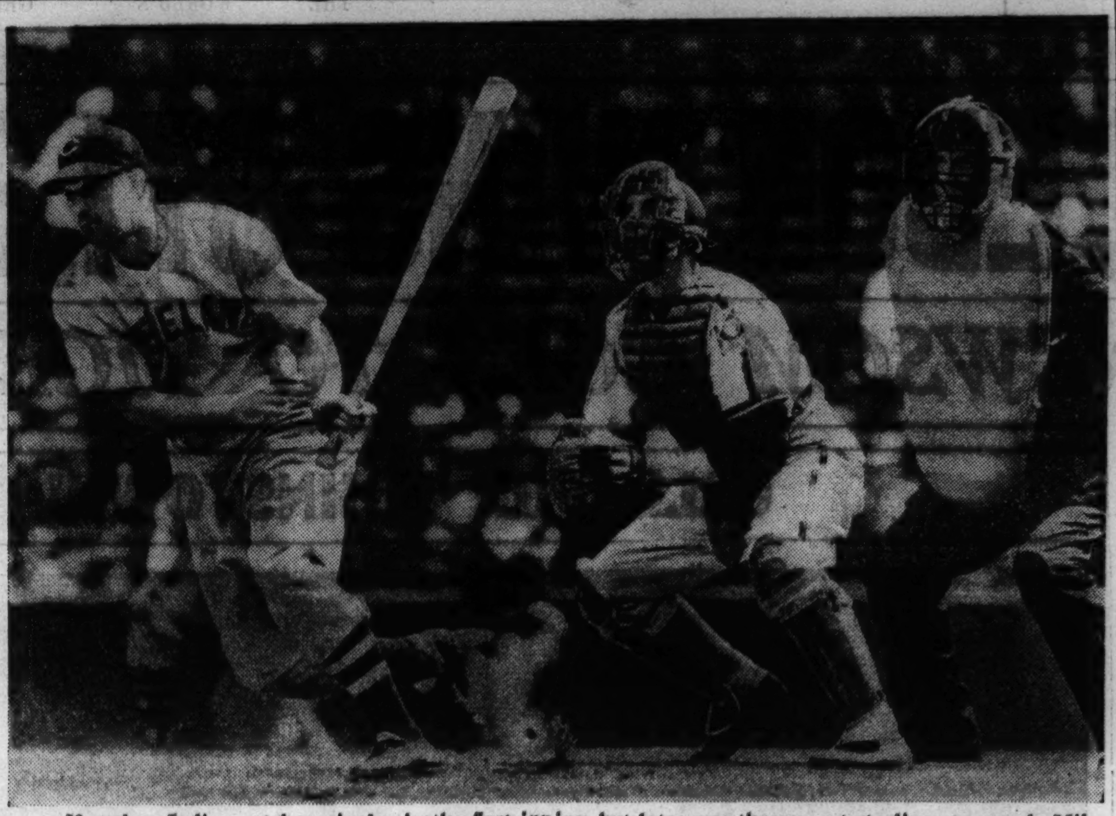
INDIANS FIND IT TOUGH JOB TO REACH SECOND



Roy Weatherly, Cleveland outfielder (right), who had walked in the fifth inning of yesterday's game with the White Sox in Comiskey park, is forced at second on Rollie Hemsley's roller, Luke Appling (left) to Ollie Bejma (center). The Indians won, 5 to 2.



Hemsley, Indian catcher, singles in the first inning, but later was thrown out stealing at second. Mike Tresh is the catcher and Red Ormsby the umpire. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

Lee Wins No. 4 as Cubs Whip Pirates, 6 to 2

hits in the first inning, no runs and two hits in the second inning and one run and two hits in the third inning. Bill Herman scored the first run on a walk, Stan Hack's out and Galan's first hit, a single to right. Hartnett also singled, but the inning ended when Jim Gleeson bounced a double play ball to Brubaker. In the second inning a single by Hank Lieber and a double by Lee were wasted. With one out in the third inning, Galan doubled and scored on Hartnett's single. Again Gleeson tapped into a double play.

An unearned run put the Pirates in the scoring column in the fifth. Klinger walked and stopped at second on Lloyd Waner's single to center. Paul Waner popped to Bartell, then Johnny Rizzo slammed a double play ball into Lee's glove. Big Bill threw wild to second and the bases were loaded. Arky Vaughan sent a sacrifice fly to Leiber, Klinger scoring. Gus Suhr lined to Bartell.

Klinger Helps Cubs.

With some help from Klinger, the Cubs really got tough in the sixth. Hartnett opened with his third hit, a single to left, and stopped at second while Gleeson was beating out a bunt. Leiber also bunted and, when Klinger tossed the ball into left field in an attempt to get Hartnett at third, Hartnett and Gleeson scored and Leiber reached second. Glen Russell bunted to Klinger and Leiber was speared at third. Bartell tripled to left center, scoring G. Russell.

Bartell's smash convinced Manager Pie Traynor that Klinger was through for the day and Mace Brown was called in. Lee knocked his second hit, a single to center, which scored Bartell. Herman also singled to center, but Hack and Galan were retired.

Brubaker opened the sixth with his home run. Though Bartell executed his second error of the game later in the inning, nothing resembling a jam was precipitated.

Brown sat down the Cubs in one-two-three order in the seventh, then gave way to a pinch batter in the Pirate eighth. Bill Swift pitched the ninth and also retired the Cubs in order.

TOBIN VS. BRYANT

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 13.—[Special.]—Jim Tobin will pitch for the Pirates tomorrow, according to Manager Pie Traynor. Manager Hartnett of the Cubs, registering deep thought and strategic genius, kept his choice a secret. However, it will be Clay Bryant, in all probability.

After warm weather aplenty in New York and Boston, the Cubs were back in the overcoat zone today. And the weather man says it'll rain tomorrow. The Cubs haven't missed a day on their trip and would like to continue their string of double-header destroyers right into Chicago.

The Cubs will be back in Chicago early Tuesday morning for a thirteen day stay.

Indians Use Home Runs to Beat Sox, 5-2

seventh, and Appling also came through with a pair. Luke's hits came with none out but meant nothing in the life of Hudlin.

Business was only fair for hitters in the first inning. For the Indians Hemsley singled to left with one out. Later he attempted to steal second but didn't make it and the session ended with Trosky striking out. Radcliff opened for the Sox with a line drive which Weatherly captured and Owen singled to left. Walker grounded into a double play. Then the Indians suffered through two hitless innings and the Sox had one such experience in the second, but improved immediately.

Kreevich, who is having long waits between hits these days, opened the third with a grounder which Grimes handled, but Tresh stepped into the argument by singling to center. Smith assisted by fouling off the good pitches until he was awarded with a pass. Radcliff boomed a single into right center, Tresh carrying home the first run of the game. With only one out and two men still on the bases Hudlin must have suspected he was about to undergo some real blasting, but was pleasantly surprised when Owen's roller to Keltner was converted into a double play.

Bang Goes the Lead!

The Sox hung on to their lead only until the fourth when the Indians tied it on the strength of their second and third hits off the tow headed southpaw. Hemsley was out on a fly to Walker, but Trosky upset Smith's intentions with a drive which nicked the right field wall for two bases. Solters provided some relief by hoisting to Kreevich. Chapman was plunked in the seat of the pants by a pitched ball, after which Keltner singled to center, Trosky scoring.

The Sox passed up a big opportunity in the fourth. Walker led off with a roller to Grimes, who threw wild to first. Appling singled past Trosky and Bejma's bunt put the runners on second and third. Hudlin walked Rosenthal, the fourth ball being intentionally wide, but, with the bags full, Kreevich fouled to Trosky and Tresh lofted to Weatherly. The same ineffectiveness was noticeable in the next two innings. Radcliff doubled with one out in the fifth but didn't get any place. Appling opened the sixth with a single but his mates walked out on him.

Owen Saves Smith Trouble.

Smith issued a brace of passes in the fifth but a trick defensive maneuver kept them from becoming bothersome. The first pass went to Grimes before anybody was retired. Hudlin bunted into the air and, Owen, after giving the impression he was going to catch the ball, let it drop. He picked it up in a hurry and tossed to Bejma who was covering first base. Bejma tagged Grimes, who was standing on the base, not knowing where else to go, and then stepped on the bag to double Hudlin. Next came a pass for Weatherly, but he was forced by Hemsley.

Solters dissolved the 1 to 1 tie in the sixth with his very emphatic homer, which sailed half way back into the lower pavilion in left. Then Shilling walked to start the seventh and there was trouble aplenty. Grimes sent Shilling to third by singling and took second on the throw in. Hudlin bounced to Appling but Weatherly tapped a single past Smith, Shilling and Grimes scoring.

Rally Comes Too Late.

The seventh inning Sox rally started too late to be important. Radcliff, Owen, and Walker singled in succession, one scoring, but all this was done after two were gone. Appling concluded the incident by grounding to Grimes. The Indians recovered this run in the eighth on Keltner's drive into the left field seats while Doc Brown was giving his arm its daily workout in the eighth.

Dykes' athletes had a little fun in the ninth but not enough to be profitable. Tresh walked and Steinbacher singled for Brown, but the latter was forced by Radcliff and Owen bounced into a double play.

Bob Feller, the famous Iowan who throws baseballs with amazing speed, not to mention the way he curves 'em, and Thornton [Lefty] Lee will start today in Comiskey park in the final of the Sox-Indians' series. The last time the Sox saw Feller was on April 25 and he fanned nine of them. A delegation is coming from Iowa to watch Feller and to give him a present.

The Sox squad now is down to the twenty-five player limit which becomes effective at midnight Wednesday. The last extra man was eliminated yesterday when Pitcher Jess Dobernic was given transportation to join the Wilkes-Barre, Pa., club of the Eastern league. He was sent out under option.

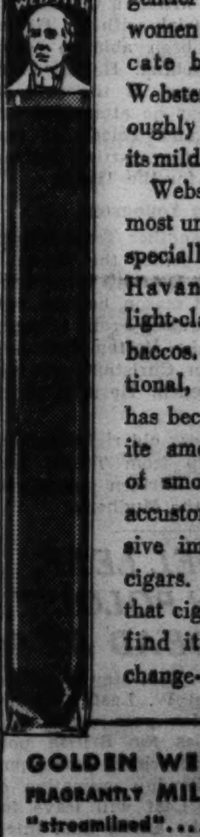
Men enjoy and women approve WEBSTER'S

FRAGRANT MILDNESS



• You need not hesitate to light a Webster in the presence of the gentler sex. . . . For women enjoy the delicate bouquet of a Webster cigar as thoroughly as you'll enjoy its mild, mellow flavor.

Webster contains a most unusual blend of specially selected, long Havana filler and light-claro wrapper tobaccos. . . . So exceptional, in fact, that it has become the favorite among thousands of smokers formerly accustomed to expensive imported Cuban cigars. . . . So MILD that cigarette smokers find it a delightful change-of-pace.

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 13.—[Special.]—Three Big Ten records were bettered and four Ferry field records fell today as Michigan's track team paraded over Ohio State, 102½ to 28½, in a warmup for the Western conference meet here next week.

Warren Breidenbach, sophomore from Dayton, O., headed the Wolverine parade with a victory in the 440 yard dash and an anchor leg on the mile relay team as Big Ten and field records were bettered in each event. MICHIGAN HOST FRIDAY IN BIG 10 OUTDOOR TRACK

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 13.—[Special.]—The University of Michigan will be host to the 39th annual Western conference track meet Friday and Saturday, with the Wolverines seeking their third consecutive team title.

Michigan balance and power, asserted as the Wolverines won their sixth straight Big Ten indoor title last winter and centered about a strong sophomore contingent and the return of the winners of 47 points in last year's meet, are expected to prevail again and give Charlie Hoyt his sixth title before going to Yale as head coach next fall.

Ten Champions Return.

Ten champions return in fifteen events, and records are threatened in at least six events.

The defending champions are John Davenport of Chicago in the 100 yard dash, Bob Lewis of Ohio State in the 220 yard dash, Harley Howells of Ohio State in the quarter mile, Walter Mehl of Wisconsin in the two mile, Elmer Gedeon of Michigan in the high hurdles, Capt. Bill Watson of Michigan in the shot put, discus and broad jump, Milton Padway of Wisconsin, who is champion in the pole vault, and Ohio State's mile relay team.

Mehl May Lose Two Mile Title.

Lewis will be the favorite to retain his furlong title, but Howells in the 440 yard dash faces the threat of a Michigan sophomore, Warren Breidenbach.

Mehl in the two mile established a collegiate and Big Ten record of 9:10.4 last year, but this year he will probably double in the mile and two mile and may see his two mile title go to Ralph Schwarzkopf, the Wolverine star who pushed him to his record last year and who ran 9:08.6 indoors last winter.

Gedeon and Watson are standouts in their events and favorites in their title defenses, as is Padway, who set a Big Ten indoor record last winter. Ohio State's mile relay team is threatened by Michigan, which today beat the defending champions in a dual meet.

Pole Vault Mark Threatened.

The record most seriously endangered is the pole vault of 13 feet 10⅜ inches, set by Vern McDermott of Illinois in 1930. Padway has consistently bettered that height, Bob Cassells of Chicago has exceeded it and Ed Thistlethwaite of Northwestern has approached it. Michigan's relay mark of 3:15.2, made in 1935, also appears doomed.

One of the two oldest Big Ten marks may go in the discus. The record of 155 feet 2 inches was set by Arlie Mucks of Wisconsin in 1916 and Watson has exceeded that distance once and approached it twice this spring. Watson will also attempt to improve his shot put mark of 52 feet 11½ inches, set last year.

Forest Weber of Purdue, sophomore star, who averages around 48 feet, is expected to place in the shot put.

Detroit Stars and Mills Will Meet in Double-Header

The Detroit Stars and the St. Louis Giants, two of the strongest members of the Negro National Baseball league last season, will be the attraction for semi-pro fans this afternoon. The Detroit club will play the Mills a double-header in Mills stadium, Lake street and Kilpatrick avenue, and the St. Louis Giants will oppose the Spencer Coals in a double-header in Spencer field, 4200 North Central avenue. The first games will start at 1:30 o'clock.

Bill [Lefty] Stevens, winner of twenty consecutive games in 1937, will pitch the opener for the Coals. Stevens pitched the Coals to a 4 to 2 victory over Sheboygan, Wis., last week. The St. Louis Giants will be making their first appearance in Chicago.

Joe Rezo, new Mills third baseman, will be moved to the cleanup spot in this afternoon's lineup. Rezo hit safely seven times in eight times at bat against Madison, Wis., last week. Walter Thomas, former American Giant pitcher, will hurl the opener for Detroit. Irving Cherry, former member of the Chicago Cubs, will work for the Mills.

Pitt Wins in Track, 75-56, Over Indiana

Bloomington, Ind., May 13.—[Special.]—Pittsburgh's great colored middle distance star, Johnny Woodruff, beat Indiana's Mel Trutt to the tape by one yard in the mile run as Pitt defeated the Hoosiers, 75 to 56, in a dual track meet this afternoon.

Woodruff, who prefers a shorter distance than the mile, trailed Trutt until the stretch drive. Then the two runners raced neck and neck until Woodruff's longer stride and final kick gave him the edge in the last ten yards. The time of 4:12.8 did not threaten the stadium record of 4:09.7, set by Indiana's Don Lash in 1937.

Woodruff took another first place in the half mile, which he won handily over Hoke of Indiana in 1:55.2. High point honors went to Frank Ohl who won firsts in the 100 and 220 yard dashes and the broad jump.

Harvard Beats Yale in Track, 91 2-3 to 43 1-3

New Haven, Conn., May 13.—[Special.]—Amassing the largest total of points ever scored in the meet, Harvard's track forces captured eleven of the fifteen events today to rout Yale in their forty-sixth varsity dual meet. The final count was 91 2-3 to 43 1-3, surpassing the previous high of 91 points, recorded by Harvard in 1936.

Paced by Jimmy Lightbody Jr., son of the Olympic star, Donald Donahue, sophomore hurdler, and George Downing, each of whom captured two first places, Harvard came through as expected and led after the first four events, 24 to 12.

The athletes had an added incentive for winning today, for upon their performances depended the personnel of the Harvard-Yale team that will go abroad in July to oppose Oxford-Cambridge in White City stadium in London.

A mild sort of upset marked the opening track event, when Ben Holderness of Yale dealt Roswell Brayton, Harvard's hitherto unbeaten miler, his first set back of the year in a mile race. Holderness came on with a rush around the final turn to win going away by the comfortable margin of fifteen yards in 4:32.2, his best time for the distance.

The 440 yard test proved a thriller from start to finish, with Lightbody overcoming some stubborn opposition on the part of Frank Curtis of Yale in the excellent time of :48.9.

Lightbody returned to the track to win the half mile in 1:55.4, defeating Alfred Hanlon, another mate, by six yards, with Jim Ord of Yale in third position.

Six records were established as De Kalb Teachers won the seventh annual intercollegiate invitational track and field meet sponsored by Elmhurst college yesterday. De Kalb scored 66 9-10 points.

Wadner, North Central clipped the 440 yard time one and three-tenths seconds, being clocked in :49.1 and then ran the 220 in :21.5 to take two-tenths of a second off the 1934 mark by Colletti of Loyola. Pike Season Is on Tomorrow In Wisconsin

BY BOB BECKER.

Wall-eyed pike, brook trout, northern pike, and other game fish in Wisconsin lakes [bass and muskies excepted] may expect to see hundreds of varied lures plunking in front of them tomorrow when the 1939 fishing season starts. Not only residents of Wisconsin but also many thousands of nonresident anglers will be heading north today in order to be on their favorite trout stream or pike lake by sunrise tomorrow and thus get away to an early start with tackle. The muskie fishermen must wait until May 25 before they may toss the big plugs, flashing spoons, and other fish foolers at the 'lunge.

The opening of the wall-eyed pike and the northern pike or pickerel season in Wisconsin not only brings a lot of fun to the devotees of rods and lines, but also revives that old, but ever fresh, argument about whether the Wisconsin northern pike is the same fish as a pickerel, or are they different species.

It Depends on the Localities.

The northern pike vs. pickerel debate has its origin in the fact that various localities give one kind of fish different names. Actually the fish that we call a pickerel in Illinois, the species that is commonly caught in northern Illinois lakes and in the Fox river, is the same species as the game fish which is known as the northern pike in Minnesota and Wisconsin and the jackfish in Canada. As far as most of us fishermen are concerned the northern pike and the well known pickerel [ranging in weight from a couple of pounds up to 25 or 30 pounds in northern waters] are the same species.

This is Esox lucius which is found throughout most of the world and is abundant in many northern and especially Canadian lakes. When old Esox lucius grows fat he's quite a game fish. [That's when this species rates the name of "northern pike!"] When he's small and thin you'll hear him called a snake by fishermen who have no use for this species. But both are the same species. The difference in size is due to environment and food conditions.

There's Also Grass Pickerel.

In addition to this widely distributed pickerel or northern pike we have in Illinois a small member of the pickerel family known as the grass pickerel which lives in small creeks and streams. It rarely if ever exceeds 18 inches in length. Few fishermen ever see nor do they know this small brother of the larger northern pike or pickerel. But in the northern lakes hundreds of thousands of anglers know and have fun with Esox lucius, the husky relative of the muskie that has more than thirty different names. It is called pickerel in Illinois, and is better known through the north as northern pike. These two names apply to the same fish.

Barrington Dog Captures Stake in Field Trial

Glenairlie Rocket, the black Labrador retriever owned by Fletcher Garlock of Barrington, which last year was selected as the best young retriever in the United States, yesterday completed its field trial championship by winning the limited all-age stake at the trial. The stake opened a two day event sponsored by the Midwest Field Trial club, three miles north of Barrington.

Judges Gaylord Donnelley, Bernard Genty, and Arthur Welch named Rocket the winner and placed Rip, a golden retriever owned by Paul Bakewell III. of St. Louis, second. Other dogs placed were field trial champion Freehaven Jay, a Labrador owned by James Free of Barrington, third, and Golden Beauty of Roedare, a Golden owned by Richard Ryan, Minneapolis, fourth.

A gallery of 400 watched the eleven dogs work. All dogs were tested with double retrieves of pheasants on land, and dogs which weren't eliminated on this test were brought back for triple land retrieves. The four winning dogs, as well as Goldwood Tuck, a golden retriever owned by H. J. Kaufman of Columbus, O., were called for water work. All five dogs retrieved two ducks after long swims in Grassy lake.

The program for today includes the Derby stake, which will start at 8:30 this morning, and the amateur novice handlers stake this afternoon.

MONMOUTH STAR RUNS TWO EVENTS WITH LEG BROKEN

Monmouth, Ill., May 13.—[Special.]—Willard Walworth, Monmouth college distance runner, broke his leg in the last quarter of the mile run in a dual meet with Knox this afternoon, but went on to win the race and a short time later ran three-quarters of the two mile event before he was forced to drop out.

Walworth felt a pain when he started his sprint in the mile race and was limping at the finish. In the two mile the pain gradually increased and he began to limp badly, but kept running as long as possible.

Coach Cahoon wrapped the injured leg and on return to Monmouth Walworth reported his injury to Dr. Ralph Graham, Monmouth college medical director. An X-ray revealed a complete fracture of the fibula two inches above the ankle. Walworth's leg was placed in a cast.

Iowa Collects 13 Hits; Defeats Luther, 11 to 3

Europe's Ring Team Off for St.Louis Today

Musina early in the bout, and when swelling developed immediately afterward Kinney was ordered to the hospital for treatment. He was resting comfortably yesterday, however, although he must remain quiet and have light treatment for the next day or so.

Like all team matches the international series provided its quota of upsets. Europe believed that Guido Nardecchia of Rome, its team captain, certainly would be one of the winners. Yet, Chester Ellis, Golden Gloves bantamweight champion, who had lost to Bill Speary in the intercity bouts, rose to demands of performance unequaled before.

The scrappy little Indian, cheered on by 20,000 fans, rallied in the last round to win from Nardecchia and tie the team score at that stage of the bouts.

For Nardecchia it was the second defeat in international competition in forty-six bouts.

Pleasant's Defeat Unexpected.

Chicago's unexpected reversal came in the lightweight class when Johnny Pleasant, Golden Gloves and intercity champion, was beaten by Egisto Peire of Italy. Peire was believed to have less chance than any of his mates, but the willing visitor unleashed a brilliant left hand that repeatedly jabbed Pleasant off balance and thus avoided Johnny's countering rights. As it turned out for Chicago this was the loss that ultimately decided the series, although it is unfair to single out this bout since Bill Pauli and Kinney later were beaten.

Eric Agren of Sweden, winner over Pauli, best demonstrated the style of fighting that is distinctive in Europe. Agren kept on top of his opponent, aggressive and more than willing to trade punches. And he kept up this relentless attack for three rounds, losing the first round, but carrying on to break through Pauli's defense and win. Pauli was knocked down in the second round for a nine count by a right hand to the head.

Reeves Outstanding Boxer.

Jimmy Reeves of Cleveland, Golden Gloves champion and National A.A.U. light heavyweight champion, turned in the most brilliant exhibition of the evening. Reeves, who had been boxing previously at 164 pounds, reduced to the middleweight division and met Anton Raadik of Estonia. Raadik was European winner in the tournament in Dublin, and because of his hard punching, was believed to have an excellent chance to win Friday night. Reeves gave him a boxing lesson, and by his speed, accurate punching left the Estonian hopelessly behind in points. Twice Raadik was staggered by body blows and at no time did he connect squarely with his famed right hand.

Olli Lehtinen of Finland won the flyweight title in a closely contested bout with Willie Moon of Chicago, C. Y. O. champion. By this victory he erased the defeat he received last year from Walter Cavalieri. Paddy Dowdall of Dublin won the featherweight international title from Roy Lewis. Musina took the 175 pound championship, and in the last match Altus Allen took the heavyweight title from Nemesio Lazzari of Italy.

Allen, outweighed twenty-two pounds, twice had Nemesio badly dazed, but couldn't seize the opportunity. There was no question of the decision.

WRIGLEY SEEKS YARDSTICK IN 2 BIG U. S. SPORTS

Development of Football, Baseball Men Compared.

Graphs and the notes the mysterious Prof. Snyder is preparing on the Cubs, it developed yesterday, are only part of a five year survey Owner P. K. Wrigley has undertaken in an attempt to discover why young baseball players are so much slower developing than football men.

Mr. Wrigley has ordered the research extended to football this fall, particularly to professional football, and will attempt to break down the two reports into a new yardstick for measuring prospective major league material and a method of developing the material.

Discovered Taking Notes.

The scheme came to light last week in the east when the Cubs discovered Snyder taking notes on their games and observing them with more than casual interest in hotel lobbies.

Three National Football league coaches, George Halas of the Bears, Ray Flaherty of the Washington Redskins, and Ernie Nevers of the Chicago Cardinals, all of whom have had major league baseball experience, are watching the experiment. They are not certain, however, it will solve the problem.

Lies in Structure of Games.

The answer to Wrigley's question, in their opinion, lies largely in the fundamental structures of the two games. Football players undergo a long, strenuous training period in high school and college, where their energies are concentrated on mastering the various technics under competent coaches chosen for teaching ability as well as their knowledge of the game.

Baseball is essentially an individual competition. The major leagues select the majority of their players from industrial teams, the sand lots, and the low minors, where the player has earned himself a place in the athletic spotlight through innate talents rather than careful preparation by skilled teachers and long, organized study.

Peak Between 24 and 28.

It has been definitly established, in baseball and professional football, that an athlete reaches his peak between the ages of 24 and 28 years. Left to his own devices and natural development, a baseball player signed in his early twenties takes longer to reach his peak than a football player who comes to a professional team with eight years of intensive preparation behind him.

Baseball might also learn something from football's pre-season training routine, particularly from the football policy of working a man into shape, mentally and physically, instead of permitting him to play himself into shape, as many major league clubs do.

SEA CAPTAIN IS BELMONT SWIFT STAKES WINNER

Bad Post Actor Finally Runs; Trailer 2d.

New York, May 13.—[Special.]—Sea Captain from the Wheatley stable who might have been among the elite of the 3 year olds except for his bad temper, finally felt amiable today and thrilled a crowd of 15,000 at Belmont Park as he drove through the stretch to win the 39th running of the Swift stakes.

Under a strong ride by Leon Haas, Sea Captain won by a length and a half from Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Trailer who was one of three that were only noses apart as they came over the finish line. The photo showed that Trailer had saved second by a nose from Robert Harris' Tiberius, with Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Lovely Night a nose back in fourth place.

Lovely Night Is Favorite.

Sea Captain had finished second to his more noted stablemate, Gilded Knight recently in the survivor stakes at Pimlico, but in spite of this he was held at 5 to 1 because he is a known bad post actor. Lovely Night was the favorite at 11 to 5 after Entracte, who would have been his running mate, was scratched.

Although he broke slowly, Sea Captain was quickly up among the contenders and Haas permitted him to stay in a good position for the early part of the seven furlongs. War Dog and Book Plate went out to make the pace, closely followed by Lovely Night. Sea Captain seemed lost in the field, but as the horses turned for the stretch he moved up fast through the field and turning for home ran over the leaders and drew out in the last furlong under a hard drive.

PAGLIACCI WINS

Pawtucket, R. I., May 13.—(AP)—Giving weight to all but one horse, Mrs. E. Graham Lewis' Pagliacci packed his 110 pounds handily today to win the $5,000 added Newport handicap at Narragansett Park.

A nose behind Pagliacci at the finish of the mile and one-sixteenth was R. A. Moore's Clodion, the choice of the 40,000 who shivered through the closing day program. Clodion had two lengths on Mrs. Emil Denemark's War Minstrel, which finished only a nose ahead of R. A. Cowardg's Be Jabbers.

Jockey Bobby Merritt handled Pagliacci well to win his third race in three starts during the afternoon. Pagliacci broke on top, but was quickly taken under restraint by Merritt.

The time was 1:45 2-5. Pagliacci returned $17.60, $8.60, and $5.80. Clodion paid $5.40 and $4, and War Minstrel $5.

New England's second racing meet of the season will open Monday at Suffolk Downs in Boston.

HitchcockFour Wins, 14-3, in U. S. Polo Test

Port Washington, N. Y., May 13.—[Special.]—Playing in a downpour of rain, Tommy Hitchcock's Sands Point team defeated the Long Island combination of American and British poloists, 14 to 3, in a test match at the Sands Point club today.

Limited to four tallies in the first half of the six period match, the second in which America's high goal players have engaged in preparation for the international meeting with England at Meadow Brook on June 4, 11 and 18, the White Shirted riders hit their stride thereafter and scored seven times in the final period.

Members of the United States Polo association's defense committee, including Devereux Milburn, Robert E. Strawbridge Jr. and John Hay Whitney, were on hand and undoubtedly were influenced in their decision to hold the test by the limited time in which the American team must be selected.

British Four Set.

The British challenging four is practically set after weeks of practice in California and Aiken, S. C., whereas the defending American side has not yet been determined, particularly at back, and is considerably behind the British in preparation.

The members of the British team, Bob Skene, Aidan Roark, Gerald Balding, Eric Tyrell-Martin and Lord Cowdray, nonplaying captain, were in the small gathering that braved the wet, penetrating weather to see the play, in which two of the British spares, John Lakin and Hesketh Hughes, helped to furnish the opposition for the Sands Point team.

Lakin, along with Raymond Guest, stood in the early stages, and their defensive work accounted in considerable measure for Sands Point's low score in the opening periods. Raymond Guest's performance, it was though, improved his candidacy as a rival of his brother, Winston, for the back position on the American tour.

Iglehart Ready Wednesday.

Expert opinion, however, is that when Stewart Iglehart is ready to play at No. 3, Hitchcock probably will drop to back on a forty goal team. Iglehart is expected to appear on Wednesday in the next test match.

Mike Phipps at No. 1, Cecil Smith at No. 2, Hitchcock at No. 3, all ten goal men, and Winston Guest at back, rated at seven goals, formed the Sands Point team of 37 goals. The opposing combination, handicapped at 29 goals, had Elbridge T. Gerry at No. 1, Hughes at No. 2, Lakin at No. 3 and Raymond Guest at back.

STUDENTS START YOUNG IN TRIBUNE GOLF SCHOOL

The free golf school sponsored by The Tribune brought out thousands of golfers last week to the four public parks courses where instruction will be continued on Tuesday and Thursday of this week. This group at Marquette park receives instruction from Packey Walsh, golf manager at Marquette (arrow, left), and Harry Kinnell, Edgewood Valley pro (arrow, right).

Jean Burley gets individual instruction in the grip from Bruce Herd, professional at Flossmoor, during a session at Jackson park.

Harry Kinnell helps Mrs. Ruth Hutchinson get acquainted with the correct grip for an iron at Marquette park.

CHALLEDON, allowed to settle into best stride and outrun to backstretch while saving ground, responded willingly when placed to drive, came around JOHNSTOWN and GILDED KNIGHT approaching stretch, took command to open good lead and won with some speed in reserve. GILDED KNIGHT, rated closest to pace of JOHNSTOWN for half, moved up menacingly on outside of pacemaker, could not resist CHALLEDON and was under drive at end. VOLITANT, fractious at post and started out of hand, was off poorly, raced wide thereafter and was held safe. IMPOUND lacked early speed, improved position along backstretch but flattened out when placed to drive. JOHNSTOWN, first away, opened a lead going to first turn while under steadying restraint, saved ground and stopped badly when caught and was being eased up at end. CIENCIA went well placed to backstretch and quit badly.

MANDJIAK HURLS NOTRE DAME TO 1 TO 0 TRIUMPH

Madison, Wis., May 13.—[Special.]—Mike Mandjiak of Notre Dame had a slight edge in a pitcher's battle this afternoon with Bob Henrichs of Wisconsin and emerged with a 1 to 0 victory. It enabled the Irish to split the two game series.

Mandjiak yielded one single and fanned thirteen. Henrichs gave up three hits and struck out twelve. Henrichs' error on a throw to second on a forceout in the first inning enabled Notre Dame to score the only run of the game. The score:

Notre Dame ....100 000 000—1 3 1
Wisconsin ....000 000 000—0 1 1

Batteries—Mandjiak and Verhoestra; Henrichs and Bietila

MINNESOTA NINE HANDS CHICAGO 11 TO 4 DEFEAT

Minneapolis, Minn., May 13.—(AP)—Southpaw Stan Sowa pitched steadily to give Minnesota an 11 to 4 Big Ten baseball victory over the University of Chicago today, avenging Friday's 11 to 3 triumph of the Maroons.

Johnny Kundla and Tom Sirany led Minnesota's ten hit attack on offerings of Art Lopatka, getting two hits each. Slipshod fielding by Chicago also aided the Gophers.

Challedon, a Mudder, Wins the Preakness

appeared to hold Challedon, and then the Maryland colt went on past with a show of power that settled everything. Gilded Knight hung on gamely, but Johnstown shortened stride so badly he beat Ciencia by only half a length.

The second horse took down $10,000, which was some solace. The third horse, Volitant earned $5,000 and Impound $2,000 for fourth. The fractional time follows: 0:23 2-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:13 3-5, 1:39 4-5, and 1:59 4-5. This compares with High Quest's Preakness record of 158 1-5 and Sea Biscuit's track record of 1:56 3-5—both, however, made over fast tracks.

After the last race it was announced that the handle on the day was $732,011, about a thousand dollars less than last year. The afternoon's racing concluded the Pimlico spring meeting.

YALE'S VARSITY CREW DEFEATS M.I.T., SYRACUSE

Derby, Conn., May 13.—(AP)—Yale's varsity crew beat M. I. T. and Syracuse and enabled the Elis to score a clean sweep over the Housatonic river's two mile course today.

A freak accident with three-quarters of a mile to go in the varsity race marred the event. With Yale barely leading Syracuse by a deck length, Bill Hall, the Orange's No. 4 struck the course marker and was thrown from the boat.

The Blue went on alone to beat M. I. T. by ten lengths with Syracuse, rowing with only seven men in its boat, trailing by little over a length.

The times were Yale, 10 minutes, 46 seconds; M. I. T., 11:27, and Syracuse, 11:32.

In previous races, Yale's freshmen and junior varsity led Syracuse and M. I. T. in that order.

Preakness Has Its Customary Quota of Rain

Baltimore, Md., May 13.—(AP)—The Preakness, fast building a reputation as the rainmaker of racing, was run again today in a welter of mud, wet feet, and a chorus of sniffles.

The steady drizzle, far from last year's downpour, did its best to displease, but failed.

Water seeped down coat collars and chilled feet squirmed for warmth in soaked leather, but the umbrella brigade seemed happy. Everybody got wet willingly to decide for themselves if Johnstown was the horse they thought he was at Louisville.

The Dempseys Ignore Rain.

Mrs. Jack Dempsey typified the spirit of the crowd. She thought it was such fun she didn't bother with a hat and bounced through the raindrops under a newspaper. Jack eased her through the throng without hat, newspaper or raincoat.

A brightly red coated band slogged down the track in front of the stands, pants pulled high out of the clinging mud, drums covered, but grinning back when the crowd roared a response to "Dixie."

Long before Starter Jim Milton sent the Preakness field away, longshot winners set the stands whooping, surging toward the mutuel windows and ready for anything in the way of a muddy upset in the feature.

Everybody Buys Raincoats.

Celebrities, well fed and warmed by luncheon in the clubhouse, braved the drizzle in increasing relays, finding the view best from the stands and boxes, and providing royal harvest for vendors of cheap transparent rainproofs.

Harry Hopkins, secretary of commerce, White House Secretary Stephen Early, and Chairman Jesse Jones of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, were among the official Washington contingent.

Others in the throng were Author Rupert Hughes, Mayor W. G. Angus of Toronto, Atlantic City's mayor, George A. Redding, a Pimlico box holder; George Weiss, manager of the New York Yankees farm system; J. Edgar Hoover, FBI chief, and Tom Healey, who, in his lifetime, has saddled more Preakness winners than any other living man—Pillory, Vigil, Display, and Dr. Freeland.

BIRKS WIN FOURTH STRAIGHT NORTH END PIN TITLE

Beat Fox De Luxe Rivals by Two Games.

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

For the fourth consecutive year the Birk Brothers team is champion of the North End Traveling league, which, like most bowling organizations, has ended its season.

The Birks, who a year ago set the all-time American Bowling congress record of 3,234 in the Coliseum, won 69 games and lost 39 to beat out Fox De Luxe, which led most of the season, by two games. In their final series the Birks beat the Keeleys three times while Fox De Luxe was limited to two victories by the Farwals.

It was not until two weeks ago that the Birks showed symptoms of wanting to retain their title. At that time they gained a tie for the lead by sweeping a series with Fox De Luxe, and since then they succeeded in drawing away.

The champions had 1,011 for the highest team average in the league and Joe Traubenik won the individual title with an average of 210 for 108 games. Traubenik has not missed a series in the North End for eight years, has competed in 861 consecutive games, and has averaged 204 during this span.

The Michelobs rolled the highest series of the season, 3,431, and the Kruse Stations had 1,212 for high game. Bill Hargadon of the Gills and Leo Krisch of the Birks each rolled a 300 game. Frank Kartheiser's 761 series was the best individual effort.

FINAL STANDING.

	W.	L.		W.	L.
Birks	69	39	Kruse	55	53
Fox De Luxe	67	41	Keeley	50	58
Michelobs	64	44	Pepsi-Cola	45	63
Gills	60	48	Farwals	41	67
Sid & Mikes	57	51	Samuelsons	32	76

On South Side Alleys.

The De Young Fuels couldn't stand prosperity. After fighting their way to the top of the Stevenson Major league standings they cooled off and now find themselves one game back of the Budweisers. The De Youngs suffered three beatings at the hands of the Gold Crowns while the Budweisers were whipping Interstate Engineering three times. The Budweisers have won 78 and lost 33. The third place Eden Insurance team was jolted twice by the fourth place Bill Rands, but still are two games behind the pace setters. The league will end Tuesday.

Here and There.

The Manhattans have rolled into first place in the Over-Your-Average tournament being conducted at Milo Wiesner's recreation. The team shot a total of 2,637 and had an average of 2,274, thus totaling 363 pins over their average. Albert Kroplin and Gust Cannon lead the doubles with 218 over their average score. Michael Stacy tops the singles with 155, having bowled 656, with an average of 501. He is also leading the all-events with 280.

The rolloff between the Pabst Blue Ribbons and the Monarchs for the Wednesday division title of the Classic league is being delayed until Matty Faetz Jr. and Leo Faetz recover from an illness. The Monarchs wanted to go ahead with Bud Wright and Joe Wilman in the lineup. . . . The Power House team's 3,376 was the best series of the season in the Classic league. The Pabsts' 1,178 was high game. . . . Team competition will end tonight in the Century of Progress women's tournament in Samuelson's Arcade. The Reising Chevrolets of Momence lead the teams with 2,966. Doubles and singles will be concluded next weekend.

MICHIGAN NAMES SAGINAW COACH AS TRACK AID

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 13.—[Special.]—Chester R. Stackhouse, football, basketball and track coach at Eastern High school of Saginaw, Mich., today was named freshman and assistant varsity track coach at the University of Michigan. He succeeds J. Kenneth Doherty, recently named head track coach at Michigan following the resignation of Charles B. Hoyt, who will become track coach and trainer at Yale university next fall.

Stackhouse, a graduate of Central [Mich.] State Teachers college in 1929, has coached at Saginaw for the last seven years. His teams have won five state track championships. His products form a nucleus of Michigan's 1939 track team, including Capt. Bill Watson, Ralph Schwarzkopf, and Jack Leutritz.

OHIO DEFEATS PURDUE, 6-5, ON SINGLE IN NINTH

Columbus, O., May 13.—(AP)—A ninth inning single by Paul Washburn, Buckeye outfielder, drove in Tony Jesko with the run which enabled Ohio State to beat Purdue, 6 to 5, today and even the series with the Big Ten baseball leader.

Outhit, 13 to 8, Ohio State had its big inning in the fifth when Jesko's single drove in two runs, and two walks and a brace of Purdue errors helped account for a third. Score:

DOUGLAS PROFIT SETS RECORD IN FIRST QUARTER

Military Sales Help Aircraft Concern.

Donald W. Douglas.
Reports $33,100,000 backlog of orders.

Net profits of the Douglas Aircraft company for the first quarter of its fiscal year reached $771.521, equal to $1.35 a share, stockholders were informed yesterday in an interim report. These were the largest earnings for any quarter in the history of the company and compared with $406,771, or 71 cents a share in the 1938 period.

The statement, covering the three months ended with February, showed the company, one of the largest producers of aircraft in the United States, continued to benefit from the accelerated demand for commercial and military air equipment. It followed the trend disclosed in preceding reports.

Net Sales Slightly Lower.

Earnings for the period advanced despite a small decline in net sales, which totaled $6,408,020, compared with $6,651,906 a year ago. The quarter's earnings were after a write-off of $587,906 for experimental expenses in developing new aircraft. Included in the charges was one of $88,864 against the cost of developing the DC—4, the four-engined, luxury commercial air transport soon to be delivered to and tested by the major air lines of the country.

Donald W. Douglas, president, said the company now has a backlog of orders totaling $33,100,000 and is employing 6,225 persons.

Cherry-Burrell Earns More.

The Cherry-Burrell corporation, manufacturing equipment used in the processing of dairy products, announced its net earnings for six months ended with April totaled $205,435. This was equivalent to 38 cents a share on common stock, after preferred dividends, and compared with net income of $199,389, or 36 cents a share, in the corresponding period last year.

Operations of the Ohio Oil company during the March quarter resulted in a net loss of $297,552, following the trend toward less satisfactory results shown in recent reports of most other components of the oil industry. Consolidated net profits for the first period of 1938 were $1,292,148, equal to 7 cents a share.

Utility Earnings Decline.

Reports of a group of utility holding and operating companies covering twelve months ended with March showed reduced earnings in comparison with the preceding twelve months.

Pacific Gas and Electric company's net earnings for the period were $23,613,549, equal after preferred dividends to $2.53 a share on common stock, against $24,509,605, or $2.68 a share, in the preceding twelve months.

American Light and Traction company's net income was $5,062,916, equal to $1.54 a share, against $5,469,376, or $1.69 a share. Continental Gas and Electric corporation had net earnings of $3,381,666, equivalent to $9.61 a share, compared with $4,413,321 in the preceding twelve months, or $14.42 a share. United Light and Power company announced net income of $3,200,564, against $4,938,418 a year ago.

Value of Products Manufactured in 1937 and 1929

What Per Cent Value of Products Manufactured in 1937 Was of 1929

Seek to Find Manganese in This Country

Washington, D. C., May 13.—The current drive to build supplies of strategic war materials has drawn attention to the critical need for finding means for economical development of manganese deposits in the United States.

For the last fifteen years the United States has imported approximately 95 per cent of the large quantities of manganese consumed by American industry. Latest figures show that in 1937 there were 955,000 long tons of ore used here, of which 96 per cent was imported. The annual consumption averages between 900,000 and 1,000,000 tons.

The metal is indispensable in steel making and is vitally necessary for national defense, in the production of munitions. Adequate substitutes for manganese have not been developed.

Used by Steel Industry.

In steel making it is used in two ways: [1] as a deoxidizer or purifying agent and [2] as an alloying element in special steels.

In addition to consumption in munitions manganese steel is used in the manufacture of plates, shapes, structural bars, open hearth rails, springs, car wheels, tires, axles, and for many other purposes where toughness and resistance to abrasion are required.

The metal also has chemical importance in the manufacture of dry cells, glass, paint and varnish driers, pigments and dyeing materials, and even for fertilizer.

More than 91 per cent of the world's manganese ore comes from Russia, British India, the gold coast of Africa, Union of South Africa, and Brazil.

Russia Is Chief Source.

Russia alone accounts for 58 per cent of the world supply and in 1937 supplied the United States with 40 per cent of its needs. Other principal American sources that year were: Gold coast, 27 per cent; Cuba, 13 per cent; Brazil, 8 per cent, and British India, 7 per cent.

Concerning the manganese problem in a recent study on strategic materials the bureau of mines said:

"Domestic resources of metallurgical grade ore are extremely limited and in fourteen years of high tarif protection producers have failed to develop any substantial production from low grade deposits. The need for an emergency stockpile is thus apparent and care should be taken to specify that the ore purchased for this purpose be of grades acceptable to the consuming industries."

Sources in U. S. Small.

The available reserves of high grade ore in the United States are small and the mining of many deposits on a large scale has been prevented by difficulties of technology and transportation.

The largest producing deposit of high grade ore in this country is located at Butte, Mont., in the mines operated by Anaconda Copper company. There is also a large supply of low grade ore in that area. More than 64 per cent of the domestic production originates in that state. Arkansas, New Mexico, Georgia, Virginia, and West Virginia are other principal producers.

The largest deposit of low grade ore is found in the region near Chamberlain, S. D., with an estimated content of more than 100 million tons of manganese, but it is of such low grade that no economical process has been discovered for refining it.

Power Plan Impracticable.

There has been some talk of developing power along the Missouri river for the purpose of working the South Dakota deposits, but army engineers say they have never encouraged it because the development and processing would be too costly.

Congressmen are showing interest in the problem inasmuch as the administration advocated the spending of 100 million dollars abroad for strategic war materials, including manganese, and the bartering of American agricultural products for foreign metals. The proposed purchase of metals abroad was assailed by Representative Leo E. Allen [R., Ill.], who said the money would be better spent in developing American mining.

The manganese situation is tied in with one of the most baffling mysteries of the sea—the complete disappearance of the U. S. S. Cyclops, a 19,000 ton navy collier, in March, 1918. The ship was en route from Brazil, loaded with manganese ore for American munitions plants. It was last reported leaving the Barbados, West Indies, and has never been heard of since.

BRITISH FOREIGN TRADE SHOWS APRIL DECLINE; STEEL IMPORTS DROP

LONDON, May 13.—[Special.]—British foreign trade declined in April, according to preliminary figures made public today by the British board of trade. Imports exceeded exports by £30,356,225 last month, against a balance of £31,418,509 in March and £31,403,000 a year ago.

Imports for April were £70,084,789, against £77,976,374 in March and £73,680,000 a year ago. Exports of £35,148,691 in April compared with £41,634,577 in March and £37,266,000 a year ago. Reëxports totaled £4,579,873 in April compared with £4,923,288 in March and £5,011,000 a year ago.

Declines were shown both in exports of yarn cloth and imports of steel products.

CHICAGO STEEL OUTPUT SHOWS SLIGHT UPTURN

Steel operations in the Chicago district are scheduled to start tomorrow at 45 per cent of capacity, a gain of 0.6 of a point over the preceding week. This will be 6.7 points under the rate four weeks ago. Production in the comparable 1938 week was at 28.5 per cent of capacity.

Although a better feeling is reported in Pittsburgh over the coal situation, no immediate response is anticipated by steel interests in the form of new orders. Production is scheduled to start at 37 per cent, unchanged from last Monday. A month ago the rate was 47 per cent and a year ago 31 per cent.

REPORT MARKED DECLINE IN ARMS EXPORT LICENSES

Washington, D. C., May 13.—(AP)—The state department reported today a sharp drop in the value of munitions exports for which licenses were issued in April. Permits were granted for shipment abroad of munitions costing $3,928,805, compared with a total of more than $33,000,000 for the previous three months. There was no official explanation. Actual shipments in April were valued at $6,712,008. Munitions, mostly military aircraft, costing $2,577,907 went to Great Britain. Shipments to France totaled $1,108,703.

YOUNG BUSINESS HEADS TO TALK AT TRADE CLINIC

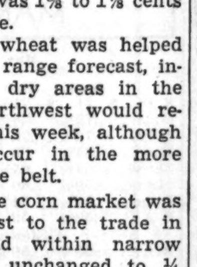
Chicago's young business executives will be given an opportunity to tell what they think is wrong with the city at a trade clinic at noon tomorrow in the Chicago club. The meeting, one of a series, has been arranged as part of the "Greater Chicago" campaign of the Association of Commerce. William J. Kelly, head of the Machinery and Allied Products' institute and a director of the National Association of Manufacturers, will direct the meeting.

Wheat Soars; Expect Small Kansas Crop

CHICAGO GRAIN PRICES

Closing prices on the July delivery of principal grains on the Chicago Board of Trade:

	Yesterday.	Friday.	Year ago.
Wheat ....$	.74⅞	$ .73½	$ .78⅜
Corn	.51⅞	.51⅞	.59⅜
Oats	.33⅛	.32¾	.27½
Rye	.50⅛	.48	.58½
Soy beans.......	.95½	.95⅝	.91¾



B. W. Snow.

Wheat prices on the Chicago Board of Trade soared 1⅜ cents a bushel yesterday to within a small fraction of a cent of the season's highest level. The upturn resulted from general buying based on an estimate by B. W. Snow, crop expert for Fuller, Rodney & Redmond, that Kansas might not harvest more than 100,000,000 bushels of wheat this year.

With the exception of the crop disasters in the 1933-'35 seasons this would be the smallest yield in Kansas since 1925. Last year Kansas harvested 152,000,000 bushels of wheat.

Wheat Closes at Top.

Closing trades on wheat futures were at the best prices of the day. Kansas City showed more strength than Chicago and was 1⅝ to 1⅞ cents higher at the close.

The upturn in wheat was helped along by the long range forecast, indicating that the dry areas in the southwest and northwest would receive little rain this week, although showers might occur in the more eastern part of the belt.

The action of the corn market was in striking contrast to the trade in wheat. Corn held within narrow limits and closed unchanged to ¼ cent higher.

Report CCC Sells Corn.

Reports were current that the Commodity Credit corporation, a government agency, had sold 1,500,000 bushels of cash corn in the last few days to northwest cash grain handlers. The price was said to have been 1 cent a bushel under the Chicago May delivery, delivered at Duluth. This corn is part of the 23,000,000 bushels taken over last fall by the CCC from farmers who defaulted on loans on 1937 crop grain.

Prospects of continued dry weather in the northwest resulted in an advance of 1⅝ to 2⅛ cents in rye. July and September rye sold at a new high price for the season. The bulk of the commercial rye crop of the country is raised in the Dakotas and Minnesota.

Young Chicagoan Awarded Sloan College Fellowship

Charles E. Wampler.

Charles E. Wampler, young Chicago business executive, and nine others were awarded Alfred P. Sloan Foundation fellowships yesterday for one year special studies at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The awards were announced by Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of the institute.

The fellowships were established by the foundation created by Sloan, chairman of the General Motors corporation, as one phase of the organization's attempt to promote the increase and diffusion of economic knowledge.

Telephone Company Manager.

Wampler, who is trafic superintendent for the Illinois Bell Telephone company in the Lakeview-Lincoln district, will begin his studies June 12. He has been employed by the company since his graduation from the University of Illinois ten years ago.

The only Chicagoan chosen from a group of 184 who competed for the fellowships, Wampler has been active in civic and educational affairs since he began his business career. He is a past president of the Illinois Junior Chamber of Commerce and is now an active member of the Lakeview Lions club and the telephone company's trafic club. He is 31 years old, married, and lives at 636 Sheridan square, Evanston.

Former Chicagoan Chosen.

Another winner is a former Chicagoan, Richard T. Orth, who is now employed by the Radio Corporation of America at Harrison, N. J. The others to whom fellowships were awarded are William L. Clark, Pittsburgh, Cal.; James H. Campbell, Lansing, Mich.; Russell De Young, Akron, O.; Joseph R. Bransford, Kearny, N. J.; William T. Putnam, Charleston, S. C.; Samuel W. Stouffer, Aliquippa, Penn.; Joseph T. Cosby Jr., and Robert N. Zimmerman, both of New York City.

The award committee consists of industrialists and engineering deans and professors. The fellowships may be won by students not earlier than five years after their graduation and call for specialized training for executive positions.

ORDERS TO BUY ARGENTINE BEEF CREATE STORM

U.S. Cattlemen Blast Roosevelt Action.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 13.—[Special.]—The navy's canned beef, known both in the army and the navy as canned willie, was the focus of international attention today as a controversy boiled over President Roosevelt's assertion that the Argentine canned product is cheaper and infinitely better than the American product.

At his press conference yesterday Mr. Roosevelt volunteered the information he had ordered the navy to purchase 48,000 pounds of the South American canned beef at 15 cents a pound, including a duty of 6 cents a pound, rather than to buy American canned beef for 23 cents a pound. He said he was motivated not only by economy, but by the fact he did not want American sailors to be eating inferior food.

Cattlemen Blast Congressmen.

Repercussions followed with surprising speed and continued to reverberate today. From cattlemen in the west angry defenses of the quality of American beef poured in upon members of congress.

An Argentine official applauded the order and expressed hope for further favorable action. "Such action," he said, "might erase the bad impression caused by the ban which would not permit the Argentines to offer their steaks in the nation's pavilion at the New York's World fair."

Imports of fresh beef from the Argentine are banned because hoof and mouth disease, which American cattlemen stamped out at great cost, exists in areas of Argentina. President Roosevelt has been seeking to modify the ban as a good neighbor gesture so as to permit imports of fresh beef from non-infected areas.

Believes Roosevelt Angry.

It was thought that his statement on the superiority of Argentine beef was the result of anger at senate refusal to authorize modification of the existing sanitary convention which would permit importation of fresh Argentine beef. Modification has been opposed stoutly by American cattlemen since its introduction in 1935.

Secretary of State Hull negotiated a new sanitary convention with the Argentine government in 1935 which would permit shipments from areas not affected with the cattle disease. The treaty has been bottled up in the senate foreign relations committee, and western senators have opposed its ratification.

Immediate denial of the statement that Argentine beef, canned, corned, or fresh, is superior to American beef was reported from the southwest stock raising area, where the cattlemen and chambers of commerce prepared to launch a drive for concerted opposition to the President's order.

"I thought we had enough experience during the Spanish-American war with imported canned beef to discredit it with the army and navy," one Texas official wired here.

Would Force Use of U. S. Beef.

All this long range firing was mild, however, compared to that directed on capitol hill. Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney [D., Wyo.] and Representative James G. Scrugham [D., Nev.] have pending there an amendment to the navy appropriation bill. The amendment would prohibit the use of any but North American beef in the United States navy.

Acknowledging the spread of prices, but reserving judgment on the quality issue, Senator O'Mahoney that the Argentine exporters are subsidized by their government.

"Producers in the United States cannot be expected to compete with the products of foreign government corporations," he asserted. "The successful bidder in this case was the Argentine Meat Producers' corporation, which, if I am accurately informed, is actually a government institution.

"This circumstance, it seems to me, fully justifies the amendment to the naval bill suggested by Congressman Scrugham and myself."

Capper Can't Understand It.

"I can hardly believe it," Senator Arthur Capper [R., Kas.] said. "I can't understand it. Nobody out in Kansas will admit that South American beef is better. The American farmer is entitled to the American market."

Representative Leo E. Allen [R., Ill.] said it appeared that Mr. Roosevelt "having failed utterly to solve our agriculture problem, has now turned his talents to try to solve those of the Argentine. Mr. Roosevelt undoubtedly believes he was elected President of the world," he added.

Chairman David I. Walsh [D., Mass.] of the senate naval committee received a cablegram yesterday from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in Buenos Aires opposing the O'Mahoney-Scrugham amendment to the naval appropriation bill. The American business men in Argentina said: "Relations already are unsatisfactory," and added that adoption of further restrictions on Argentine products would cause further resentment.

Argentine imports from the United States were cut 40 per cent recently, on the ground that purchases had to be reduced to conform to sales.

Stockmen in Angry Protest.

Denver, Colo., May 13.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's approval of a navy order for Argentine canned beef was called an "un-American" act today in an angry protest storm aroused

Coal Chiefs Get Together

Union shop agreements between coal operators and miners were signed yesterday at New York by Charles O'Neill, spokesman for soft coal producers (left), and John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers. The negotiators had previously been far apart on the question of the union shop, but finally were brought together.

County's Debt Cut 30 Millions in Last Year

The six major governments in Cook county reduced their debts by more than $30,000,000 in the year ended March 31, a compilation of their quarterly debt statements disclosed yesterday. The governments are the city, school board, park district, sanitary district, county, and forest preserve district.

The debt reduction was brought about by the retirement of bonds and tax warants at a faster rate than the issuance of new debt obligations. The net bonded debt of the six governments was cut from $410,610,201 to $384,156,033 in the twelve months ended March 31. Net bonded debt means bonds outstanding plus accrued interest minus the amount held in sinking funds toward retirement of the bonds.

Total Debt Is Higher.

A rise of nearly $14,500,000 in total debt in the last quarter of the year ended March 31 partly offset the debt reduction of more than $45,000,000 made in the preceding nine months. The debt increase in the final quarter was the result of dwindling tax receipts. Small collections were caused by the fact that no tax penalty dates fell in the three months' period. A substantial drop in debts is expected to take place however, in the current quarter because of an anticipated pickup in tax receipts. Taxpayers will probably make the usual rush to meet the June 1 deadline, when 1938 personal property taxes and the first instalment of 1938 real estate taxes fall due.

Almost all of the debt increase in the quarter to March 31 was in the form of additional tax warants. These were issued to pay current running expenses of the governments. While new warants were being sold, retirement of old warants, lagged because of slow tax collections.

Compare Total Debts.

The following tabulation compares total debts of each of the six governments on March 31, 1939, with their debts a year earlier:

ITALY'S ADVERSE TRADE BALANCE AT 39 YEAR LOW

[Copyright: 1939: By the New York Times.]

ROME, May 13.—The unfavorable balance in Italy's foreign trade has been reduced to its lowest level since 1900, Trade Minister Felice Guarneri told the chamber of fasces and corporations yesterday in presenting his budget.

The April figures, not yet published, show imports of 807,000,000 lire, compared with 958,000,000 last year. [The lire was quoted in New York today at 5.26¼ cents.] Exports were 784,000,00 lire, compared with 646,000,000 lire in April, 1938, reducing the adverse balance to 73,000,000 lire, compared with 312,000,000 lire.

For the first four months of this year the unfavorable balance was 548,000,000 lire, compared to 1,471,000,000 in the corresponding period of 1938. If this rate keeps up, Guarneri continued, Italy will reduce her annual trade deficit 2,000,000,000 lire this year, saving about 1,000,000,000 lire.

INDUSTRY LAGS DESPITE RISE IN NATION'S TRADE

Production Holds to Declining Trend.

BY LELAND FORRESTER.

Most branches of the nation's industrial activity declined last week, continuing the downward trend that has prevailed for many weeks. In contrast, retail trade was more vigorous than in the preceding week, and wholesale orders increased.

The automobile and cotton textile industries were the only important lines of manufacturing that increased operations. Excepting these and an increase in bank loans to business, the principal indices of business pointed lower.

Steel mills reduced output, fewer freight cars were moved by the railroads and the amount of electric power consumed in the latest period reported upon was less than in the preceding week.

Building Shows Decrease.

Engineering construction awards declined, residential construction decreased, and the volume of bank clearings shrank.

Meantime, business men began looking ahead to the usual summer lull and sizing up the prospects for fall. With production having proceeded cautiously in recent months, and with inventories reduced from year ago levels, there were predictions that autumn business will be quick to respond to consumer demand and that the summer letdown will be more brief than usual.

Another sign which business regarded as favorable was an indication that President Roosevelt will not fight repeal of the undistributed corporation profits tax or oppose other tax revisions which congress is expected to consider.

Retail Trade Improves.

Retail merchandising volume for the week was estimated to have been 5 to 10 per cent larger than in the corresponding 1938 week. Describing the increase over the preceding week as "rather sharp," Dun & Bradstreet said business sentiment was more cheerful. The credit agency also said wholesale trade volume was boosted by reorders and advance purchases of fall merchandise.

Automobile production rose to 72,375 units, compared with 71,420 in the preceding week. In the corresponding 1938 period only 49,415 cars and trucks were assembled.

Steel mills operated at an average of 47 per cent of capacity. In the preceding week the rate was 47.8 per cend and in the 1938 week it was 30.4 per cent. Orders placed with steel companies were reported to be declining.

Railroad Freight Shrinks.

The decline in railroad freight shipments was attributed largely to a slump in coal tonnage. The total freight movement for the week ended May 6 was 572,857 cars, 2.2 per cent less than in the preceding week, but 6.8 per cent more than in the 1938 week.

Consumption of electric power amounted to 2,163,538,000 kilowatt hours, against 2,182,727,000 in the preceding week and 1,939,100,000 in the corresponding period last year.

Engineering construction awards totaled 52 million dollars, compared with 73 millions a week earlier and 69 millions a year earlier.

Bank clearings in twenty-two leading cities amounted to $4,755,463,000, a decline of $1,321,559,000 compared with the preceding week. In the 1938 week the volume was $4,882,441,000.

The Associated Press composite index of industrial activity declined to 81.8 per cent of the 1929-'30 average, compared with 82.0 per cent for the preceding week and 66.2 per cent for the corresponding 1938 week. The index, with its seasonally adjusted components, compared as follows:

	Last week.	Prev. week.	Year ago.
*Composite Index........	81.8	82.0	66.2
Automobile Output......	56.6	54.6	37.1

Corporation Reports Variable.

The week's reports on the amount of business done in April by some of the large corporations disclosed both gains and declines. Montgomery Ward & Co. sales last month were the largest ever made in April. The company's three month sales also set a record for a first quarter. General Motors corporation sales of cars and trucks in April fell 9,450 units compared with March.

Shipments of finished steel products by the United States Steel corporation were 66,451 tons less than

STOCK PRICES POINT HIGHER IN DULL TRADE

Turnover Is Smallest in Nearly a Year.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 13.—The stock market showed some indications of rallying today, but most issues finished the week without any decisive price movements. News was unimportant marketwise.

Turnover was the smallest in nearly a year, amounting to only 159,140 shares. A week ago 176,750 shares were traded. Nine stocks pushed upward to new 1939 high marks. Sharp & Dohme was the one issue to touch a new low for the year.

A small amount of short covering and investment buying helped steady the list. Hope that at least a few tax revisions may get through at this session of congress was a buoying influence. However, traders mostly withheld action pending the tax conference called for Monday by the President at the White House.

Coal Situation Favorable.

The prospect that the soft coal shutdown would come to an end Monday stimulated buying on a modest scale.

Some farm implement and mail order issues attracted attention on the senate's approval of a record agricultural appropriation for the coming fiscal year. Montgomery Ward, International Harvester, and Oliver Farm edged higher.

Douglas Aircraft was a strong spot. The company reported the best net profit in its history for the fiscal quarter ended Feb. 28. Brooklyn Union Gas stock and bonds touched new peaks for 1939, continuing recent advances.

Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Chesapeake and Ohio, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Standard Oil of New Jersey, and Union Carbide were among the better performers.

U. S. Steel Is Lower.

United States Steel, United States Rubber, Santa Fe, Anaconda, American Can, Public Service of New Jersey, United Aircraft, Air Reduction, and Johns-Manville were soft spots.

Brooklyn Union Gas was the most active stock. Fairly extensive buying interest was reflected by sales of 5,200 shares. Chrysler was the third most active issue on the sale of 3,300 shares. Warren Brothers was second with a turnover of 4,800.

WEEK'S PRICES OF COMMODITIES MOSTLY HIGHER

Tin an Exception, Dipping Half Cent a Pound.

Higher prices were posted for a majority of the leading commercial and industrial commodities during trading in the New York futures markets in the last week. Tin was an exception to the general trend and was quoted yesterday about ½ cent a pound below the preceding Saturday.

Advances in coffee for future delivery ranged as high as 0.30 cent a pound. Hides were quoted 0.14 to 0.23 cent higher and rubber 0.04 to 0.07 cent higher.

Although domestic sugar contracts maintained an even trend during the week, the world deliveries declined slightly as brokers studied steps taken at London by international sugar authorities to release additional supplies of the raw product.

Lead and Zinc Higher.

Lead and zinc joined the group moving slightly higher, but copper futures declined small amounts. World stocks of refined copper totaled 522,722 tons at the end of April, an increase of 12,630 tons during the month, the Copper Institute announced. The gain was accounted for largely by a boost of 11,701 tons in the domestic supply, raising it to 332,513 tons.

Apparent domestic consumption, measured by shipments, dropped 8,002 tons during April to 42,484 tons. Foreign consumption increased 3,614 tons to a total of 111,194 tons. Prices follow:

AMERICANS LIVE BETTER BY USE OF MACHINERY

Set Record for World in Plant Investment.

BY LAURENCE BURD.

What has made it possible for Americans, farmers, and factory workers alike to have such a high standard of living in comparison with residents of other countries? Why do we have far more automobiles, bathrooms, telephones, and radios per person than any other nation?

The answer, according to a number of studies that have been and are being made, is that Americans have invested more heavily than any one else in machinery. They have added to their mechanical horsepower. By doing this they have tremendously increased the amount of goods that a single workman can produce. Workmen, by thus making themselves more productive, have increased their earning power in terms of dollars and cents in each pay check.

It's Easier with Machines.

The American worker, with more mechanical horsepower at his command, does not have to work so hard as workers in other countries to get the same things, according to studies made by the Machinery and Allied Products Institute of international labor office reports. The institute made some comparisons for the following items:

Food. To earn the money to buy a market basket containing twenty-three food items the average worker in Great Britain has to work twice as many hours as the average American worker. Germans have to work three times as long, the French nearly three times, and Italians four times as many hours as Americans. The market basket includes such items as bread, butter, beef, pork, potatoes, milk, and eggs.

Better Able to Buy Autos.

Automobiles. An average citizen in the United States needs the wages of 4.5 months to buy an automobile. The comparable average man in eight European countries must work 16.3 months, or nearly four times as long. The result is that ours is an automobile civilization, whereas many other countries are still living in a "bicycle world."

Radios. The average American can earn enough money to buy himself a radio in five days. It takes the average European in eight countries 20 days' earnings to buy a similar radio.

Electric refrigerators. It takes an American one month's pay check for one of these. It takes the European 3.7 months' wages.

Bigger Backlogs in America.

Further studies along the same line were recently made by Mill and Factory, monthly publication, and here are some of the results:

Life insurance. The average family of four in the United States has $3,249 in life insurance. This is more than three times the amount held by a similar family in England. It is eleven times as much insurance per family as in Japan, twelve times the average in Germany, and thirty times the amount in Italy.

Shoes. The average American family of four has 12.9 pairs of shoes. An English family has 10.8 pairs. Germans have 4.6 pairs, or a little more than one apiece. Japan has an average of one-half pair [one shoe] for every four persons.

Motion Pictures Cheap.

Movies. Americans can see million dollar movies for as little as 10 cents, a quarter, or half a dollar. They have three times as many moving picture houses as Germany, four times as many as France, and eight times as many as Russia.

Telephones. Americans have 549 telephones for every thousand families. England has 218 per thousand. Russia has only 21.

Schools. One American in four is enrolled in schools, including primary and secondary grades, and colleges and universities. Japan is second with one out of six. England has about one in six and Italy has only one in eight in its schools.

Bathrooms. For every ten homes, we have six bathrooms; England is next with three; Germany has 1.5, and France has 0.5.

Invest Savings in Plants.

The lead which Americans have taken in making better and more goods within the reach of everybody has been made possible by the large amounts of money that have been saved and invested in the last few decades. Thus, the National Bureau of Economic Research found that in the eleven years from 1919 through 1929 more than 50 billion dollars of capital was saved and invested to create new machinery, buildings, and other kinds of capital goods.

With this capital at work, men in factories could be more productive and receive higher wages even though they worked shorter hours. Another result has been the lower cost of many machine made goods because of improved methods of production.

Wages Go Up as Hours Drop.

The average factory worker in 1914 was paid 25 cents an hour. Last year he received 71.3 cents an hour. These figures are from studies by the National Industrial Conference board. The board also found that workers are now able to work shorter hours and still increase their standards of living. The average work week was 56.8 hours in 1899. By 1937 it was 39.1 hours.

The actual gain in purchasing power made possible by machines is shown in the following table. It shows how much less work a factory worker has to do now than in 1914 in order to earn enough to buy comparable products:

Product—	Hours of Factory Work Required. 1914.	1938.
Automobile	4,514	1,098
Tire	45.8	13.3
Camera	146.7	27.7
Electric fan	49.4	3.9
Bedroom suite	104.3	65.4

The comparisons were compiled by the Machinery and Allied Products Institute. It found similar tendencies for nearly all manufactured products including hats, shoes, electric light bulbs, washing machines, and baby carriages.

Goods Superior to 1900 Variety.

Although comparisons were made on a price basis, this does not tell the whole story. The products of today have been greatly improved by technological advances. Automobile manufacturers, for instance, say that a tire today will last ten times as long as the tire of thirty years ago.

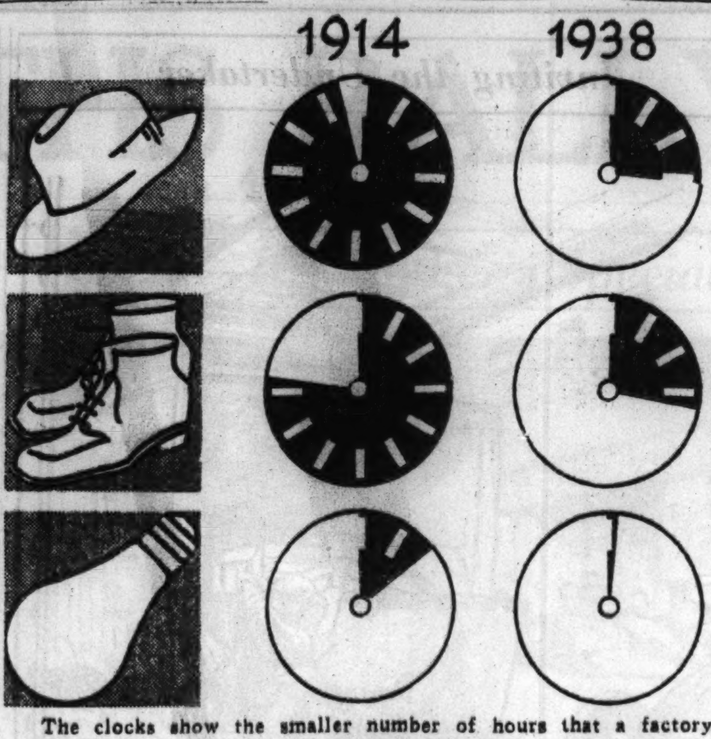
The growth of capital goods that has made possible the big gains in the American standard of living has been curtailed by the depression. Consequently, living standards have not risen so fast as previously in the last few years. Billions of dollars of productive or capital goods have been used up and have not been replaced since 1929, according to studies by the National Bureau of Economic Research.

Future Living Standards.

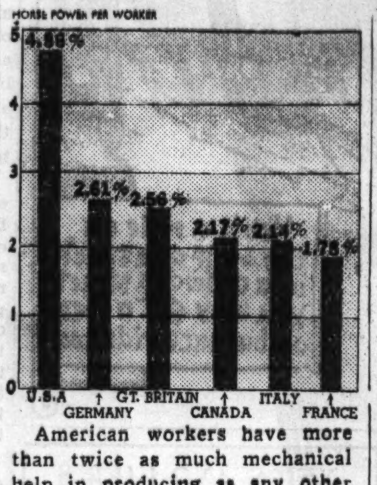
Higher living standards in the future will inevitably depend on a reversal of this trend of recent years. Instead of using more capital goods than it reproduces, industry will need to produce more new machinery and buildings than it scraps.

This needed capital formation depends on the amount of money that investors are willing to risk in business. Because of uncertainties most of the time since 1929, they have been afraid to risk capital. If and when their fears subside, their capital will flow into business enterprises and increase the productivity of industry.

Work Hour Now Buys More



The clocks show the smaller number of hours that a factory worker had to work in 1938, as compared with 1914, to earn enough to buy the same articles: hats, shoes, electric light bulbs.



American workers have more than twice as much mechanical help in producing as any other workers.

Appeal Phone Overcharge Claim to Supreme Court

The United States Supreme court yesterday was asked to review a decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals here on Feb. 22 which held that the Illinois Bell Telephone company was entitled to retain $1,688,295 remaining unclaimed from a fund of $18,897,980 ordered refunded to subscribers who paid overcharges.

The appeal was taken by the state of Illinois and the Illinois commerce commission through Attorney General John E. Cassidy.

CHICAGO SUGAR REFINERY GETS CARGO FROM CUBA

New Plant Will Start Operations Soon.

With the arrival yesterday of a ship carrying a cargo of raw sugar from Cuba, production will start shortly at the new plant of the Industrials Sugars corporation at 1562 Kingsbury street—at North avenue. Industrial Sugars is a newcomer to Chicago's industrial section.

The sugar arrived on the steamship Novadoc of the Patterson line from Montreal, where it was transferred from a ship from Cuba. The cargo totaled 2,250 tons, or about 15,000 bags of raw sugar weighing 300 to 350 pounds each. In its raw state the sugar was said to have a value of about $100,000. Customs duties and other charges will add about $50,000.

Will Make Liquid Sugar.

This new Chicago company will refine the raw product. Most of the output of the plant will be a liquid sugar for use by candy manufacturers. It will be transported to the candy factories in truck tanks.

Ralph K. Hoitsma, treasurer of the company, said that Chicago is the largest confectionery manufacturing center in the country and that Chicago is the second largest sugar market. It is outranked only by the New York market.

In its raw state the sugar from Cuba resembles an ordinary brown sugar, Hoitsma explained. When refined it must be especially free of impurities because of the exacting demands of the candy makers.

First Cane Refinery Here.

Hoitsma said this is the first cane sugar refinery to be established in Chicago. All other cane sugar refineries are located along the seaboards. A beet sugar refinery here was closed some years ago. The plant was established here because of cheap water transportation for the raw product and for coal and other raw materials and because of the importance of the Chicago area as a market.

The help employed at the Industrial Sugars plant will be mostly unskilled labor, Hoitsma said, and eventually there will be about a hundred persons on the pay roll.

The plant was purchased from Standard Brands, Inc. It was once occupied by the Fleischmann Yeast company.

Joseph F. Leete is president of Industrial Sugars. The Chicago corporation, largest investment company in the middle west, invested $500,000 in the company through the purchase of preferred stock.

TROOPS CALLED IN KENTUCKY'S C. I. O. COAL WAR

Take Up Posts as Mines Move to Reopen.

have signed an agreement with him. Gov. Holt announced he had taken steps to prevent any West Virginians interfering with the Kentucky miners.

"That's fine," said Chandler, "but if they come across, we'll be ready for them."

Holt said at Charleston that he had given state police orders to dissuade West Virginians from taking the initiative in any border warfare. He is eager, he said, to keep his people from interfering with the "domestic difficulties" of a neighboring state.

County Authorities Ask Troops.

The request for military help came from Harlan county authorities, who informed Gov. Chandler they would be powerless to control the situation it the mines reopened. The troops are to preserve order in "Harlan county and its environs."

The six operators' organizations which refused to bow to Lewis and the government are the Harlan county, Hazard, and Big Sandy-Elkhorn associations of Kentucky, the Virginia Coal Operators' association, the Southern Appalachian Coal Operators' association [Virginia and Tennessee] and the Kanawha Coal Operators' association.

Late today the Southern Tennessee Coal Producers' association signed union shop contracts with the United Mine Workers. This is the first break in the stand taken by the Southern Appalachian Coal Operators' association, which had opposed the "closed" and "union" shop.

Harlan county is the only area which has planned definitly to open Monday. The members of the other associations are to meet in a few days to discuss their stand. Hazard operators will meet at Lexington and the Big Sandy group at Ashland—both on Monday.

Field operators of the U. M. W. announced they will visit the groups and give the individual mine companies an opportunity to sign the same contract signed today by the fifteen other groups.

300,000 Back to Work.

New York, May 13.—[Special.]—Three hundred thousand bituminous coal miners are expected to go to work next week as a result of the signing today of a so-called union shop contract by their employers and John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers of America. The miners are employed in diggings controled by members of fifteen operators' associations.

It is estimated that six southern associations, which refused to sign, employ from 45,000 to 70,000 miners and produce 45,000,000 to 70,000,000 tons of coal annually. Their product in general is high grade, and there is a ready sale for much of it.

Lewis was aided in forcing the operators into line by federal officials. The Washington administration, grateful to Lewis for a $600,000 contribution to campaign funds, applied extreme pressure to the operators for his benefit.

Roosevelt Pressure Applied.

When it appeared after forty days of fruitless negotiation that no basis of agreement could be reached between the miners and the operators of the twenty-one groups, acting as a unit, a sensational move was made by Dr. J. R. Steelman, United States labor conciliator.

As President Roosevelt's personal representative, Steelman ordered the operators to sign as individuals if they could not as a group endorse the Lewis demands. Fifteen associations bowed, and the six that refused now face more pressure.

One result of the agreement signed today is the elimination of the Progressive Mine Workers, an affiliate of the A. F. of L., from the mines that have been signed up. Lewis obtained his one great demand—that his union be recognized as sole bargaining agent and that all miners not members be barred from employment.

Operators Resent Pressure.

Lewis referred to the agreement as the best that could be obtained. Some of the operators professed to be satisfied. They pointed out that there would be no change in the present wage and hour scales and that Lewis had guaranteed there would be no interference with "the rights of management as now understood." Privately a number of them said they were resentful of the pressure that had been applied. From Springfield, Ill., Joseph Ozanic, president of the Progressive Mine Workers, declared that only the government's force made possible the signing of the contracts.

"If it were not for Lewis' administrative backing," he said, "we'd drive him out of the nation's coal fields in a few days. Absolutely, without qualification, it was the administration lineup with the C. I. O. that forced the eastern operators to sign an un-American, undemocratic and illegal contract."

A. F. OF L. CLAIMS BURLINGTON SHOP BALLOT VICTORY

Victory was claimed by the American Federation of Labor yesterday in an election to determine the collective bargaining agent for 4,470 shop craft employés of the Burlington railroad.

J. J. Duffy, representing the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, said that the A. F. of L. affiliate had majorities in all six divisions but declined to announce the figures pending another counting. The ballots were mailed to Chicago by the shop craft workers.

J. A. Dryer of Kansas City, representative of the Mechanical Department association, which opposed the A. F. of L. in the election, would not issue a statement.

Troops Ready to Guard Miners

Drivers receiving instructions from Capt. Samuel Bridgers of the Kentucky National Guard at Louisville to take trucks and station wagons out this morning and head for the coal fields to protect miners who want to return to work.

GOLDWYN BUYS MARY, DOUG, AND CHAPLIN'S STOCK

Hollywood, Cal., May 13.—[U. P.]—Samuel Goldwyn, veteran film producer, today purchased from Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, and Charlie Chaplin their interest in United Artists studios, the United Press was informed tonight. Official announcement of the deal is expected to be made Monday in New York.

Miss Pickford, Fairbanks, her former husband, and Chaplin have produced only a few pictures in the last decade. Goldwyn, active producer and a member of the original group, has been at odds with the other major stockholders because of their inactivity.

COWS AND HENS SET RECORDS, BUT MARKET IS DULL

Brokers Curtail Butter and Egg Buying.

Butter and egg orders have failed to soar like the high productivity of industrious cows and chickens. Brokers have not been inspired to action by the record-breaking production of butter and eggs, if yesterday's record is an accurate barometer.

Brokers curtailed their commitments, both in the cash markets and in the futures markets on the Chicago Mercantile exchange. The butter futures market failed to respond to Friday's news that butter stored in the nation's cold storage warehouses on May 1 reached a new high record for that date at 70,861,000 pounds.

Egg Supply at New Peak.

Although figures had not been compiled, the supply of eggs is also understood to have reached a new peak. That made good news for those who like lots of butter on the toast which accompanies their breakfast eggs, but the brokers were not impressed.

Slightly lower prices were posted in the wholesale cash market for butter. November butter futures advanced modestly and trading was light both in the cash and futures markets. Slight declines were also registered in the cash egg market and were reflected in corresponding declines in eggs for future delivery.

Quotation System to Change.

The exchange announced that for two weeks, beginning Monday, price fluctuations will be measured exclusively in hundredths of a cent instead of a combination of the decimal system and eighths of a cent as at present.

After the two weeks' experiment governors will decide which of the systems to adopt.

Foreign shipments of paper base stocks for the month were valued at $427,566, an increase of 15 per cent over the previous month.

ORDERS TO BUY ARGENTINE BEEF STIRS UP STORM

U. S. Cattlemen Blast Action of Roosevelt.

in the western cattle country by his statement that the Argentine product was cheaper and better than domestic beef.

In a telegram to the President F. E. Mollin, secretary of the American National Live Stock association, declared:

"It is grossly unfair and entirely un-American for you to use the prestige of your high office to place any obstacle in the way of the American cattle producer being given the full benefit of supplying the government which he supports."

Mollin was joined by Gov. Nels H. Smith of Wyoming, President Joe Sneed of the Southwestern Cattle Raisers' association; E. A. Phillips, Montana Live Stock association secretary, and Con W. Jackson, president of the New Mexico Cattle Growers' association, in contending that President Roosevelt was mistaken in regarding Argentine beef as "better" than the American product.

Appeals to Seven Governors.

Besides sending a personal protest message to the President, Gov. Smith sent telegrams to seven western governors urging them to use their influence "in showing that the President's statement is unwaranted, unjustified, and untrue."

Gov. Payne H. Ratner of Kansas also addressed a protest message to Mr. Roosevelt in which he said:

"On behalf of the cattle producers of Kansas and western states I hope this order can be canceled and that definite policy be established for the future to prevent the purchase of foreign products by the United States government where domestic goods are available."

Gov. Smith's message to the President said:

"Wyoming vigorously protests your statement that Argentine beef products are superior to American beef products and believes your recommendation for the purchase unwarranted and in opposition to the interests of all stock producing states. It is a well known fact that western beef is far superior to any similar product in any part of the world."

Thinks Roosevelt Misquoted.

At Amarillo, Tex., Sneed said he believed Mr. Roosevelt "must have been misquoted or he said what he did as a joke," adding:

"The cattle industry helps to support our army and navy and we believe we are entitled to exactly the same consideration as American manufacturers from the cheap labor plants of Europe and Japan."

Sneed suggested the navy could buy uniforms, medicines, and other supplies from Japan, Germany, and England for 50 per cent less than the navy now is paying.

"We can't keep up the American standard of living by importing Argentine beef," asserted Representative J. J. Dempsey [D., N. M.] at Santa Fe.

"The cattle industry of the west pays taxes and employs American labor. To purchase foreign beef is a direct blow at it."

The Kansas Live Stock association sent a message to the President urging "immediate cancelation" of the purchase order.

"Producers of meat animals throughout our country need every possible help in obtaining the very best market for their products," it said.

WEIGH CONTROL OVER OUTPUT OF OIL IN ILLINOIS

Centralia, Ill., May 13.—(AP)—A joint legislative committee created to investigate the Illinois oil industry and determine the state's oil legislation needs may make its recommendations on production control and other proposed regulations to the general assembly next week.

Senator John Parish of Centralia, secretary of the committee, said today a draft of the recommendations in the possession of Representative Oral P. Tuttle of Harrisburg, chairman, would be given final consideration by the committee at a meeting which probably will be held in Springfield next week.

If approved, the report will be submitted to the legislature almost immediately, Senator Parish said.

USE MORE PORK, SAVE MONEY: TIP TO HOUSEWIVES

Now Cheapest of Meats, Live Stock Men Say.

Chicago housewives this week will have an opportunity to save on their food budgets if they serve pork in more meals than is customary, live stock men at the Chicago stock yards said yesterday. Pork is much cheaper than other meats.

Further price declines were registered in wholesale markets for fresh pork late last week, bringing most cuts to the lowest levels in five years for this season. Fresh pork loins, butts and spare ribs slumped 50 cents to $1.00 a hundred pounds. Packers granted concessions of mostly $1.00 in pork shoulders.

Beef and lamb meats wholesaled at steady rates compared with the close of the preceding week and were substantially higher than in 1938.

High Quality Pork Abundant.

There was an abundance of high quality pork, which was in contrast to the rather short supply of beef offered to butcher shop owners late in the week. Top light pork loins went into retail stores at $17.00 a hundred pounds, off 17 per cent from the $20.50 price for the same cuts a year ago. Heavy loins sank to $12.50, compared with $16.00 in 1938, a loss of 21 per cent. Shoulders were relatively the cheapest, at $11.00 to $12.00. Butts brought $12.00 to $13.00 and spare ribs $9.50 to $10.50.

Ribs of beef were bought from packers from $13.50 to $24.00; loins at $16.00 to $33.00; rounds at $16.00 to $19.00; chucks at $12.50 to $15.50, and plates at $10.00 to $12.00, indicating advances of $1.00 to $7.00 over 1938.

Beef Up 8 to 26 Per Cent.

In percentages retail purchases of beef cost 8 to 26 per cent more than a year ago. Veal carcasses were bought at $11.50 to $16.00, compared with $10.50 to $14.50 in 1938. Lamb legs at $20.00 to $22.00; loins at $23.00 to $28.00, and stewing lamb at $12.00 to $13.00, showed $1.00 to $5.00 increases over last year.

The abundance of hogs and the low level of prices at the stock yards enabled packers to move pork supplies into retail channels at the attractively low rates. The average cost of hogs for the last six days figured only $5.80 a hundred pounds, the lowest for any week since July, 1934. This was a loss of $1.15, or 14 per cent, compared with 1938 and a decline of $3.60, or 34 per cent, compared with 1937. The various classes of hogs finished the week unevenly 10 cents lower to 15 cents higher.

Cattle Regain Part of Loss.

After a sharp slump in the cattle market early last week about half of the decline was regained. Final rates for steers were steady to 25 cents lower than a week earlier. Beef cows showed losses of 25 to 40 cents, and heifers closed from steady to 25 cents lower. There was a rise of 50 cents to $1.00 in calves.

The six-day lamb average at $10.05 showed 10 cents advance, but closing prices for most lambs were off 15 cents for the week.

INSURANCE MEN SCORE AGENTS' POLITICAL DEALS

Casualty and Surety Fees Attacked in Letter.

Insurance agents who have been criticized for obtaining large fees on business secured through political influence were attacked from another angle yesterday. T. F. Coleman, chairman of the Insurance Brokers' association of Illinois, made public a letter to company representatives in which he declared commissions paid to some of these agents were unjustified.

Following a struggle carried on intermittently for months among brokers, agents, and fire insurance underwriters over division of commissions the new attack is leveled against fees paid for placing casualty and surety business.

Cause of High Cost Cited.

The letter criticizing the present schedule was directed to E. J. Schofield, chairman of the acquisition cost conference, an organization established by leading insurance interests to preserve harmony among the various groups in the business. It followed a meeting held in Chicago recently to discuss commissions.

Illinois brokers, the letter said, agreed that the high cost of acquisition in Cook county is due largely to the practice of companies paying general agency rates of commission to many agents and part time brokers who do not perform the recognized services warranting such rates.

Hits Political Tieup.

"The particular type of agents and part time brokers to which we refer are those with political jobs or affiliations and salaried employés of mortgage companies and mortgage departments of life insurance companies," the letter said.

Fire insurance companies operating in Illinois were directed to reduce their commission rates in an order issued recently by Ernest Palmer, state director of insurance. Action by the Illinois brokers' group was regarded in some insurance quarters as a step toward forestalling a similar order affecting casualty companies.

The letter expressed the association's opinion that the subject of rates of commission paid by general agents to brokers is one for arrangement between the agent and the broker and not one for regulation by the conference.

IDLE FUNDS VS. TAXES.

Several thousand investors in all parts of the country recently set down in black and white their reasons for not being willing to invest in new securities at the present time. These investors were handpicked. More than 75 per cent of those replying said they had money to invest.

The questionnaire followed findings of the National Association of Manufacturers that new capital raised during 1938 by American corporations through security issues totaled only 417 million dollars. This was about one-quarter of the annual rate at which new capital flowed into private channels during the decade from 1920 to 1930.

Tabulation of the investors' answers revealed the following:

1. Eighty-three per cent complained that the government takes too much in taxes from corporations.
2. Seventy-seven per cent cited legislation restricting industry.
3. Seventy-three per cent feared the possibility of new taxes on industry.
4. Sixty-three per cent dreaded the prospect of labor troubles.
5. Sixty-two per cent said government levies on the individual tax payer were excessive.

Setting aside the other factors making up the replies, what basis do these investors have for complaining that the tax collector is taking more than his due?

The upward trend of corporation taxes — federal, state, and local — is probably steeper than even the most pessimistic would expect, statistics compiled by the Brookings institution at Washington, D. C., show. Among successful companies the aggregate amount for every group except class 1 railroads has risen sharply since 1932. When the comparison is drawn between taxes and gross income, according to the Brookings report, the percentage has increased in every group, including the railroads.

Here's the tax percentage of gross income of profitable corporations in recent years:

	1932.	1935.	1937.
Rails [class 1]	8.21	6.43	7.42
Utilities	10.85	11.95	14.09
Industrials	2.56	4.27	5.13
Chain stores	1.41	2.47	3.22
Mining	11.40	7.48	8.69

This situation presents a problem differing from the many others for the investor, large or small. He holds the key to the situation. He can aid management as well as himself by digging into the tax problem, learning the facts, and then voicing his protests in the right direction.

INDUSTRY LAGS DESPITE RISE IN NATION'S TRADE

Production Continues Long Decline.

in March. With steel production steadily dwindling, additional unsettlement for the industry was indicated by reports of "unofficial" reductions in prices for hot and cold rolled steel sheets and strip such as are used in automobile making.

Price Troubles Recalled.

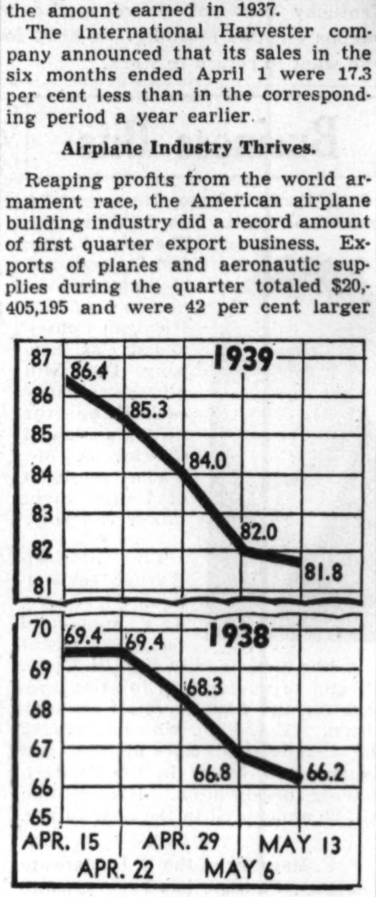
Price troubles beset the steel business in 1938, when producers fighting to maintain competitive positions made reductions which were said to have been a large factor in turning steel earnings downward last year.

Another industry which has had grief with price structures is the oil business, which in addition faces the problem of overproduction. Oil troubles were emphasized last week by the annual report of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, showing 1938 profit of little more than half the amount earned in 1937.

The International Harvester company announced that its sales in the six months ended April 1 were 17.3 per cent less than in the corresponding period a year earlier.

Airplane Industry Thrives.

Reaping profits from the world armament race, the American airplane building industry did a record amount of first quarter export business. Exports of planes and aeronautic supplies during the quarter totaled $20,405,195 and were 42 per cent larger than in the first three months of 1938.



The chart traces the course of industrial activity in the last four weeks, as measured by the Associated Press seasonally adjusted composite index, and shows the corresponding activity a year ago (1929-'30 average equals 100).

Employment on the class 1 railroads [those having gross revenues of $1,000,000 or more a month] increased 4 per cent between mid-March and mid-April. The number of employés at mid-April was 950,130.

A development last week which drew much attention in financial circles in Chicago and New York was the Commonwealth Edison company's private sale of $114,500,000 of bonds to a group of eastern insurance companies. The deal was the largest "private sale" of bonds yet made.

Although the company announced that large savings in interest costs were made possible by the transaction, it was understood that another factor in the decision was that the private sale avoided the necessity of meeting expensive and complicated requirements of the Securities and Exchange commission.

COTTON

Aggressive buying of cotton futures by mill interests advanced the price of cotton futures in American markets yesterday to new high levels on the current upturn. Offerings were light on the way up. Closing trades were at the top, with gains of .05 to .16 cent a pound. New crop months led the advance.

Negotiations are reported as nearing completion for the sale of at least 50,000 bales of American cotton to Spain. The transaction, it is said, will involve an extension of credits by the Export-Import bank to exporters for at least part of the sale.

Spot cotton closed .7 cent a pound higher, with New York at 9.51 cents, New Orleans 9.27 cents, Houston 9.02 cents, and Galveston at 9.01 cents a pound. Prices follow:

BRITAIN PLEADS IN VAIN AGAINST FLIGHT OF GOLD

Europeans Pour Capital Into U. S. for Safety.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 13. — Flight of "scared money" across the Atlantic continues in full force regardless of the admonitions of Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, against export of capital abroad at a time when the British government is seeking to devise the cheapest means of financing this country's vast armaments program.

Sir John Simon.

It is estimated $50,000,000 worth of refugee metal poured out of England this week-end alone, bound for the United States and Canada, and the outflow shows no signs of abating.

$20,000,000 Shipped in Day.

At least $20,000,000 in gold, it was revealed by market circles, left for New York on Thursday and Friday aboard the liner Transylvania from Glasgow and on the Scythia from Liverpool.

Simultaneously, $15,000,000 in gold was carried from Liverpool on the liner Duchess of Atholl, bound for Ottawa. Another $15,000,000 worth of gold left Southampton on Friday and Saturday aboard the Aurania for storage in Canadian bank vaults.

Most of the gold, it is explained, was sent by central banks and individual holders here and on the continent. They believe that Canada and the United States would be safer resting places for wealth in the event of war.

Urge Control of Capital.

Meanwhile, following the British government's decision to conscript manpower, the argument is being widely canvassed here that capital should be subject to compulsory control also. The treasury is faced with the problem of raising nearly 2 billion dollars from loans this year to meet the growing armament needs. The situation is being closely watched by market operators.

Although Simon turned down opposition demands for a capital levy during budget debates in the house of commons, some financial observers here believe the government may eventually be forced to tighten legislation to check the outflow of capital and preserve existing cheap money rates.

C. & N. W. RAILWAY BONDS ACTIVE IN QUIET MARKET

New York, May 13. — (AP) — Most bonds kept within a fractional range in today's market, with trading quiet.

Buying continued heavy in issues of the Brooklyn Union Gas company resulting in new peaks for several including the 5s of 1950, up 1½ at 94¼.

Some low priced railroad liens, including Chicago and North Western 4¾s, were turned over in rather large volume, but net changes were small.

Foreign dollar loans adhered to the general pattern.

PONDER FINANCES FOR 100 MILLION IN SUPERROADS

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., May 13.—A joint senate and house committee next week will resume its consideration of pending legislation to finance a $100,000,000 super-highway construction program in Chicago. Notwithstanding obstacles to their enactment, Senator Harold G. Ward [D., Chicago] believes that the assembly will be induced to pass the bills.

"The bills must be passed," said the senator, "or Chicago and Illinois may not be able to take advantage of prospects of federal aid for death proof road building."

Report Is Submitted.

Ward referred to a recommendation to congress from Thomas H. McDonald, chief of the United States bureau of public roads. He has recommended a congressional appropriation for building main highways into, through, and around cities and for modernizing the arterial routes between large centers of population.

Charles E. de Leuw, consulting engineer for the city of Chicago, and Duncan Campbell, assistant highway engineer of Cook county, this week submitted a report to the joint committee showing how the state might participate in the $100,000,000 Chicago program. It is proposed that the state contribute $40,000,000 and the city and county each contribute $30,000,000, the money to be raised by obligating future gasoline tax collections.

Prof. C. C. Wiley of the University of Illinois engineering school, reported to the committee that the state highway department is financially unable to participate. In reaching this conclusion, he used figures furnished by Ernst Lieberman, chief of the state department.

Attack Lieberman Figures.

De Leuw and Campbell, in their study, attacked the Lieberman figures. The city and county engineers deny that it will be necessary to replace all of the state highway's department's 10,000 miles of slab in the next twenty-seven years as the state engineer would have the committee believe.

Independent surveys have found an extended mileage of state highway with trafic volumes too slow to justify the original investment in their construction. Political roads, they are commonly called because they were built to meet a political rather than a trafic demand.

De Leuw and Campbell are not suggesting an abandonment of these little used routes. But they are protesting against Lieberman's contention that they should be reconstructed.

Add Mileage to System.

While the state administration has been objecting to any reduction in motorists' tax telling the legislature about the urgent requirements for replacing worn out slab, the highway department has continued to add to the mileage of the system. De Leuw last week suggested that this committee, headed by Senator Nicholas L. Hubbard [D., Mount Pulaski] investigate current construction expenditures to examine their merit as compared with the Chicago super-highway proposal.

The committee also is considering a companion measure sponsored by Lieut. Gov. John Stelle. It would call for $40,000,000 worth of downstate construction on secondary roads.

Urges Cross State Routes.

Most legislators agree that if Chicago is going to get $40,000,000 of state money for its super-highway system, it might be equitable to assign an equal amount of state money for downstate work. However, it is doubtful whether this downstate work should go into secondary roads.

Robert Kingery, chairman of the state planning commission and manager of the Chicago regional planning association, told the committee this week that downstate cities as well as Chicago need modern routes to relieve the congestion and hazard of their streets. He added that the construction of safe and fast cross state routes also was more important than any further work on the roads that would serve only a few farmers.

$250,000 FUND FOR ADVERTISING ILLINOIS SOUGHT

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., May 13.—A bill to appropriate $250,000 to advertise Illinois is pending in the senate. The objective of such a fund is set forth in the first section of the bill as follows:

"For the purpose of collecting, compiling, and disseminating information and literature concerning the industrial, agricultural, and recreational facilities and advantages, the historic and scenic places of interest, and the transportation and highway facilities of Illinois;

"For encouraging and coördinating the efforts of other public and private organizations or groups of citizens to publicize the facilities and attractions of Illinois;

"And to use, employ, or to contract for the use or employment of whatever advertising medium may deem necessary to effectuate the purposes herein provided."

Political Exceptions Noted.

Other states have established the efficacy of advertising to attract tourists and to attract industries. The exceptions have been where taxpayers' funds have been spent to promote the political welfare of incumbent officer holders rather than to promote the commonwealth.

In 1935 seven states had appropriations for advertising. In 1937 there were twenty-two. Today, all except ten, including Illinois and Indiana, have earmarked funds for this purpose.

Wisconsin spends $150,000 to stimulate a $250,000,000 a year tourist crop. Michigan spends the same amount on its $330,000,000 a year recreational industry.

Annual expenditures in recreational travel in Illinois are estimated at $82,000,000. Advocates of the pending legislation argue that to increase this figure just a few per cent would justify the quarter of a million dollar appropriation.

Cite Oklahoma Experience.

Oklahoma's experience is cited. It did $34,467 worth of advertising in 1938 and, with an increase in tourist travel, collected $139,545 more in gasoline taxes than in 1937. Tennessee's gas tax collections rose $537,000 in the year ending last July, while $90,000 was being invested in advertising.

Other states have concentrated promotional efforts in attracting new industries. Leaders in this direction have been New Jersey, Mississippi, Texas, and a western states group and a southeastern governors' conference.

Illinois, it was pointed out, is one of the eight leading industrial states in America and must compete with them for factory pay rolls. Illinois also has tourist possibilities. It is crossed by a heavy flow of recreational trafic, with only a small fraction of the cars stopping to visit such attractions as Chicago's museums, the Lincoln shrines hereabouts, or the natural beauties of the state parks.

NEWS AND VIEWS

A Studebaker Champion—the newest full sized car in the low price field—last week made the 809 mile round trip between Los Angeles and San Francisco with an average gasoline consumption of 30.8 miles to the gallon, Henry Levy of the Studebaker Sales company, Chicago, said yesterday. The average speed was 36.8 miles per hour. The car used was a stock sedan whose status was guaranteed by the American Automobile association. The car carried 3 passengers and a driver. All speed regulations were observed, so the car was driven at 45 miles an hour when conditions permitted.

When King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth arrive in Canada they will be met by two specially built Buick convertible phaetons, which will be available for their use during their tour, officials of the Buick division of General Motors announced yesterday. The two cars were completed last week in the Oshawa, Ont., plants of General Motors. They are custom cars finished in a maroon color. Built on special 155 inch wheel base chasses, they are powered by 143 horse power engines.

The Chrysler corporation announced that a part of the traveling by the royal couple in Canada will be done in a specially built Chrysler Royal, just completed at the Windsor, Ont., plant of the Chrysler corporation. The rear compartment is entirely enclosed in shatterproof glass so that the royal visitors may see and be seen yet enjoy protection. The seat design provides that the auxiliary seats face the rear instead of the front, because etiquette forbids any one but the chauffeur from riding with his back to royalty, Chrysler states.

VOICE OF THE TRAFIC

SAFETY LANES.

Chicago, May 8.—In view of the apparent inability or unwillingness of the city to furnish adequate safety lane facilities, may a suffering motorist and taxpayer offer a suggestion which might tend to alleviate the appalling waste? The city can authorize certain private garages, possessing the necessary equipment, to make these tests at a nominal charge. I am sure that thousands of car owners would gladly waive their right to a free test and pay a small sum for this service. This would result in a distribution over a wide area of the city and reduce waiting to a minimum. Of course, the free lanes would still be maintained for those demanding it. Thus, at no additional expense to the municipality, the motorist can be accommodated, the enormous loss of time ameliorated, and the car owner compensated for the slight expense by the time saved. And the private tests can certainly be kept as honest and accurate as they are at the present time.

"PAL" IS DEAD.

Edgebrook, Ill., April 29.—I am writing this letter in hope that the man who hit and killed our little pet mongrel dog in Edgebrook on April 27 will read it and feel remorseful. Perhaps it was not intentional, but it might have been avoided.

If he knew the terrible heartaches he unwittingly inflicted on the dog's owner, a little 13 year old boy, whom the dog idolized, I'm sure he would drive more carefully in the future. Our home is in mourning and the whole community is grieving over the loss of our little Pal.

Maybe she did happen to be crossing the highway, but could you not have slackened your speed and given her a chance? If you ever owned a dog yourself, how could you just toss her on the parkway and drive away without inquiring whom she belonged to?

Will you please contact us? It would be a great comfort to us if we knew you killed her instantly and did not leave her to suffer until we found her body several hours later.

LAW PROVIDES BEGINNERS PERMIT.

Cicero, Ill., May 10.—While the present drivers' law was enacted to curb reckless driving and curtail the mounting deaths resulting from accidents, there is one point about the law which the legislators overlooked. How is it possible for new drivers to obtain a license? If it is illegal to drive an automobile, how can a prospective auto owner ever expect to obtain a license? He cannot apply for a license because he will be refused one since he has had no experience driving a car. If he takes an examination he surely will be rejected. Just how did the legislators expect people to learn how to drive cars? Did they expect them to practice in their back yards, in dark alleys, or was it their intention to establish state schools to instruct drivers? After all, if you are learning to drive a car you are violating the law, and try to get by with a poor excuse like that when stopped by the law. Even the prohibition law wasn't as crazy as this.

RETRACTED.

Chicago, May 10.—In your column of Voice of Trafic you published a letter criticizing the lack of safety for the Emmet school children at the crossing of Central avenue and Madison street. This cross-section, as well as the crossing at Madison street and Pine avenue, has been properly protected by the Austin police department since last October, and we, therefore, wish you would retract these words of criticism and replace them with words of the highest praise due to the Austin police department for the most valuable services rendered in safeguarding the Emmet school children, and for which we are very grateful.

YOUTHS RALLY TO STUDY OWN NEEDS

CHICAGO IS HUB FOR METHODIST CHURCH MERGER

Bishop Waldorf Has Larger Area.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Bishop Waldorf.

Chicago will become the geographic center and general headquarters of the north central jurisdictional conference of the new Methodist church formed during the last three weeks in Kansas City, Mo. This area embraces 1,735,461 members of the church.

The newly organized church has been formed out of the merger of the Methodist Episcopal church [parent body], the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant church. The southern church withdrew in 1844 in a schism over the slavery question, and the Protestant group withdrew in 1828 because of administrative questions involving bishops and presiding elders.

Under the plan each of the sectional conferences, like the north central, and the central jurisdiction for Negroes, virtually becomes an autonomous church, but all are bound together by the general conference of the six jurisdictions every four years. The jurisdictions elect their own bishops and run their own fiscal affairs but coöperate in the international educational, missionary, and welfare program of the whole church.

Three Conferences in State.

Illinois will be divided into three annual conferences—the Rock river, which includes Chicago and northern Illinois; the Illinois, and the southern Illinois conferences. These, with the Norwegian-Danish and the central northwest [Swedish] conferences, make up Bishop Ernest Lynn Waldorf's area.

Bishop Waldorf is in charge of 1,200 ministers and nearly that many churches.

Bishop Waldorf's Chicago area, the largest area to be overseen by a bishop in the north central jurisdiction, will gain fifty-nine churches from the Methodist Protestant and Southern churches, but will lose several Swedish and Norwegian-Danish churches in the Pacific northwest beyond the bounds of the north central jurisdiction.

There are no Southern churches in Chicago and only thirty-two in Illinois, with a total of 7,000 members, but the Southfield Community Methodist Protestant church, 78th street and Cregier avenue, of which the Rev. W. Smith Harper is pastor, and the Wakeford Methodist Protestant church, 76th street and St. Lawrence avenue [the Rev. B. F. Langdon, pastor], will become members of the Rock river conference under Bishop Waldorf. There are thirty-eight other former Methodist Protestant churches, mostly in central and southern Illinois, with eighty-eight preaching centers and 4,000 members.

Nine States in Jurisdiction.

The Methodist Book concern, 740 Rush street, will remain the principal publishing house of the new church, and will house headquarters of several world-wide agencies, including phases of the church's educational and missions program.

The north central jurisdiction includes the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, and North and South Dakotas. Twenty-one annual conferences, such as the Rock River, are included in the jurisdiction. Bishops' areas will be located in Chicago, Minneapolis, Detroit, Columbus, and Omaha.

Meeting Also Elects 18 New Directors.

The Oakland-Kenwood Property Owners' association elected eighteen directors for three years of service at the annual meeting last week. Terms of one-third of the directors expire each year. A superhighway to the southeast also was advocated.

Those chosen directors are Allie M. Anderson, Edwin Clement, Dr. Chester Guy, Dr. William B. Needles, Walter Powers, Henry G. Taussig, Frank D. Ayers, Newton C. Farr, Elise F. Harges, the Rev. Thomas M. Pender, Leonard Reid, George W. Webster Jr., Clarence Clarke, Edward Froderman, Robert Miller, Clarence Poffenberger, C. C. Robbins, and Dr. Alfred L. Wilson.

Officers Are Named.

Following the session for members, the directors met and named Mr. Farr to be president; Albert H. Veeder and Charles L. Leindecker, vice presidents; Mr. Poffenberger, treasurer, and John A. Sullivan, secretary. Committee chairmen appointed were B. E. Sunny, finance; Oscar H. Boenicke, membership, and Mr. Sullivan, nominating.

Resolutions were adopted at the annual meeting expressing appreciation to public officials of the city, county, state, and WPA for their contributions during the last year in the association's efforts to maintain and improve this close-in neighborhood.

Enlisting the support of other south side civic organizations, the association has started a campaign for the establishment of a highway over Cottage Grove, South Chicago, and Indianapolis avenues to the southeast from the loop, J. V. O'Neil, business manager, said.

Want Street Widened.

The organization is especially interested in and recommends the widening of Cottage Grove avenue from 22d to 44th streets, and between Oakwood boulevard and South Parkway, as the major portion of the project. Mr. Poffenberger was named chairman of a committee to pursue this proposal.

Advantages provided by this route, according to Mr. O'Neil, would be the provision of a diagonal approach to and from the central and south central business districts for those living or employed in wards 1 to 10, assurance of the distribution of business in a number of sections and traffic diversion at a number of points, relief of pressure on Cottage Grove avenue, and easing of the flow of traffic on the outer drive, which is often congested during rush hours and special events in Soldiers' field. Other community organizations will be asked to back the improvement.

Final Membership Meeting Arranged by Y.W.C.A.Unit

The final membership meeting of the year for the South Parkway Y. W. C. A. will be held at 7:30 o'clock Friday night in the branch, according to Mrs. Thomas M. Clarke, chairman of the membership committee.

PARKS PREPARE VACATION TIME PLAY SCHEDULE

Activities Arranged for All Ages.

Finishing touches are being applied to the fullest summer recreation schedule in the Chicago park district's history, so that it will be working smoothly when the annual school vacation releases thousands of children a month hence.

This was announced last week by V. K. Brown, director of recreation for the park district, who said his enlarged staf of workers is preparing for a record participation in park play programs this year.

The program is already underway in thirteen south side parks which are equipped as summer recreational centers, it was announced. These centers will care chiefly for schedules of a neighborhood character, such as game tournaments and handicraft projects.

Facilities in All Sports.

But besides these local activities, the park district also maintains others of general character, Mr. Brown pointed out. It operates fifteen lake bathing beaches, fifty-eight swimming and diving pools, five golf courses, seven boat harbors, forty-one picnic grounds, thirty-six archery ranges, 353 softball diamonds, 571 tennis courts, 111 baseball diamonds, 282 horseshoe courts, and fourteen miles of bridal paths.

For several weeks the park district has been training scores of staff workers needed to conduct the play program. At the same time work was rushed on improvements to park facilities.

"We're better equipped in every way than ever before to handle our ever increasing recreational load, Mr. Brown said. "Our staff now has the benefit of several years of experience. Increased public knowledge of our aims and methods has reduced the "breaking in" period for participants in our program. Our physical equipment has been greatly improved.

"We have tried to arrange it so that every one in Chicago will be near a fully equipped park to enjoy the free facilities maintained there."

Activities are Listed.

As an aid to south siders in making up leisure time schedules for themselves or their children, Mr. Brown and his staff have listed the activities and facilities available in thirteen south side parks. They are:

Armour Square park, 33d street and Shields avenue — Artcrafts, badminton, barn dancing, baseball, baketball, boxing instruction, playground, community singing, croquet, dramatics, folk dancing, games room, handball, handicraft, hikes, hopscotch, horseshoes, jacks, kites, marbles, model airplanes, mumble-peg, nature recreation, O'Leary, play day, rhythm band, roller skating, rope skipping, sandcraft, play group, social dancing, softball, swimming, tennis, toy lending center, track and field, volleyball, and wading pool.

A graduate of Bowen High school, he fills the vacancy caused by the death of Henry Gilmore, who had represented the Holy Name society and the C. Y. O. in the court for years. For the last two years Matt has been assistant athletic director of the C. Y. O. in charge of general recreational activities, and since January he has been taking a special course in probation and parole under the Rev. Ralph A. Gallagher in the school of social work, Loyola university.

Our Towner Mrs. Sarah E. Gardner, who celebrated her 93d birthday last Sunday with open house, has two sons, one daughter, twenty grandchildren, and twenty-two great-grandchildren, so it's not strange that she knitted twenty-five pairs of mittens this last winter. She lives with her daughter, Mrs. Henry E. Thomson, 7351 University avenue.

Born in Raymond, N. H., a relative of one of the signers of the Constitution, Nicholas Gilman, she moved to Chicago in 1869 with her husband and settled near 47th street and Wentworth avenue, where they kept a cow and chickens. Later the family located at 6024 Indiana avenue and then at 6452 Eberhart avenue. Her husband died in 1911. Mrs. Gardner has kept a diary since 1880 and is a prolific letter writer, with fifty already to her credit this year.

MRS. KATHERINE SMITH, who lives with her only surviving daughter, Miss Mary Smith, three miles south of Lake Village, Ind., entered her second century of life last week. She marked her 100th birthday last Sunday with open house. Born in Marion county, Ohio, she is the widow of George W. Smith, a civil war veteran, who died in 1914. For sixty years she resided in Grant Park, Ill. She has six grandchildren—Mrs. Ralph Moody and George Smith, 5700 South Bishop street; Mrs. James Law, 8035 Constance avenue; Mrs. Richard Vehme, 9008 Colfax avenue, and Mrs. Claude Allen and Thomas Smith, Dodge City, Kas.—and twelve great-grandchildren.

Downing, 7807 Ridgeland avenue, is the new president.

Testing the Royal Cooking

Eagerly Miss Dorothy Curry, 6216 St. Lawrence avenue (right), shoves her bedaubed finger toward her mouth, and the culinary efforts of Miss Artis Louzein, 6507 Ellis avenue, hang in the balance. They're two of the stars of "The Knave of Hearts," one of three one-act plays which the senior class of Loretto (Woodlawn) academy, 1447 East 65th street, will present as its annual production Thursday and Friday evenings in the school. The other two plays are "I Know George Washington," and "The Summons of Sariel."

Peter and Paul Young Ladies' sodality, Beta Epsilon fraternity, Royal Castillians, Young Serbians social club, Stylettes club, 9th Ward Young Democratic club, 10th Ward Young Republican club, Cavaliers club, twelve Boy Scout groups, and the following athletic clubs:

Objectives of the federation are to obtain better community recreational facilities, to promote citizenship in the area, to alleviate the economic problems of youth in the district, and to promote the health of the people.

VOLUNTEERS AID BOY SCOUT DRIVE ON SOUTH SHORE

South shore volunteer solicitors for the Chicago council of Boy Scouts are conducting a drive in residential and business communities under the leadership of Richard M. Lenihan, vice president of the South Shore National bank, in an effort to realize their district quota of $10,000 in the city-wide financial drive.

"We are appealing directly to friends of scouting who appreciate the purpose of the Scout movement and who understand its desire to build finer boys through contact with leaders well versed in boy psychology," said Mr. Lenihan. "We develop this high standard of training and adult selection through both intensive and extensive training courses offered them in camping, health and first aid, cubbing and senior scouting."

In the south shore district there are 3,092 registered Boy Scouts, 263 Sea Scouts, 16 Rovers, and 931 Cubs, totaling 4,302 boys in scouting. One hundred and sixty-eight units sponsor scouting in the district.

CLOSED STATE BANK OFFERED FOR FINAL SALE

Roosevelt-Bankers Has Made No Refund.

The Roosevelt-Bankers State bank, one of the few closed state institutions that has never made a repayment to depositors since it closed, has been offered for final sale preparatory to ending the receivership.

This was announced by State Auditor Edward J. Barrett last week when he made public figures showing the condition of a final group of south side and south suburban Cook county banks for the three months ending last March 31.

Mr. Barrett's statements are founded on regular periodic reports made to him by the receivers for the 137 remaining closed state banks in Cook county. Charles H. Albers is general receiver for all but two of these banks.

His figures show that the Roosevelt-Bankers bank still owes $1,198,059 to its depositors, but the book value of its remaining assets is only $613,951. The book value is greatly in excess of the actual market value as shown by the fact that the bank reported a loss of $692,228 in converting its assets into cash. The institution was suspended on Aug. 2, 1930.

Here are the summarized new figures for the remaining group of south side and south suburban banks, with estimates of the future outlook for the depositors:

ROOSEVELT BANKERS STATE BANK—Total receipts, $282,047. Paid on prior claims, $115,685. Paid depositors, nothing. Costs: receivers, $11,448; legal, $15,000; clerical, $74,351; interest, $299; advanced to protect assets, $87,542, with $70,843 refunded. Cash, $7,720. None of the cash on hand is earmarked for the debt to depositors, who can expect little or nothing.

SOUTH SIDE SAVINGS BANK AND TRUST COMPANY—Total receipts, $3,051,730. Paid on prior claims, $252,912. Paid depositors, $639,710 or 55 per cent. Costs: receivers, $38,612; legal, $70,350; clerical, $179,870; interest, $15,536; advanced to protect assets, $760,079, with $401,058 refunded. Cash, $372. None of this cash can be applied to the debt to general creditors, who include the depositors.

STONY ISLAND STATE SAVINGS BANK—Total receipts, $1,500,018. Paid on prior claims, $346,832. Paid depositors, $343,858 or 17½ per cent. Costs: receivers, $16,520; legal, $90,417; clerical, $114,053; interest, $3,021; advanced to protect assets, $401,401, with $373,387 refunded. Cash, $183,912. Estimates indicate that some small additional return will eventually be made.

UNION STATE BANK OF SOUTH CHICAGO—Total receipts, $1,407,065. Paid on prior claims, $487,671. Paid depositors, $633,992 or 37½ per cent. Costs: receivers, $12,972; legal, $37,856; clerical, $102,727; interest, $1,096; advanced to protect assets, $140,587, with $126,196 refunded. Cash, $78,162. The present payout may rise another 5 to 8 per cent.

WOODLAWN TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK—Total receipts, $2,375,459. Paid on prior claims, $679,336. Paid depositors, $607,408 or 30 per cent. Costs: receivers, $12,722; legal, $92,693; clerical, $114,056; interest, $19,013; advanced to protect assets, $379,843, with $381,597 refunded. Cash, $64,941. Estimates point to an additional 10 or 15 per cent before the receivership is terminated.

ASK PUBLIC AID TO EXPEDITE NEW LAND USE SURVEY

Rehabilitation Is Primary Object of Plan.

Public coöperation with the land use survey now being made by Works Progress administration workers under sponsorship of the city of Chicago was asked last week by H. K. Seltzer, Chicago WPA director.

The survey is being made to determine exactly what purpose each separate parcel of land in the city is now serving, in order that an intelligent long-range plan of development and rehabilitation for Chicago's private real estate can be worked out.

Already 154 enumerators are in the field gathering information, while 705 other men and women are assembling preliminary statistics for them from assessment books and other records, Mr. Seltzer said. Later a large staff of workers will be needed to tabulate and correlate the information, he explained.

Points to Benefits.

The director emphasized that the information sought is being gathered for the benefit of property owners, and is in no wise to be used against their interests. It has no connection with taxation, and there is to be no publicity for individuals that arises out of the survey, he said.

He asked that property owners help expedite the work by answering the enumerators' questions fully and promptly.

"When the enumerator pays a visit he is not making a social call," Mr. Seltzer pointed out. "He is out to get information about property the assessor's records lack but which is necessary to make the survey really valuable.

"City improvement is the main purpose of the survey. Its principal object is to make Chicago a better place in which to live, work or carry on business."

Will Show Needs.

Real estate men have given hearty approval to the investigation, it was pointed out. It is expected to be particularly valuable in a recently launched private movement to prevent the development of slums in outlying parts of the city.

How the survey can and probably will react for the benefit of property owners was explained by Mr. Seltzer.

"First of all," he said, "the survey will show the parts of the city that are in need of improvement. It will turn the spotlight on those which lack adequate playground and park facilities, on those where there are not enough schools, and on ones that have some peculiar problem such as, perhaps, a dumping ground or other health hazard.

"Furthermore it will suggest the best use to which land and buildings in each neighborhood can be put. It will disclose the things that make neighborhoods deteriorate."

Seek Cause of Exodus.

The study will point out such things as the causes of residential exoduses from certain neighborhoods, thus making it possible to halt the desertions or prevent their repetition elsewhere, the director said. It will reveal the factors that have impelled Chicago industries to move outside the city, with a resultant tax and pay roll loss, he said.

Even if the mistakes of the past with respect to real estate cannot in all cases be rectified, Mr. Seltzer said, they can serve as examples of what to avoid in plans for the future.

ARCHERY GROUPS MERGED; START TOURNEY PLANS

Consolidation into one group of the Archery association and Archery Craft guild of the Chicago park district was announced last week. The new body was named the Chicago Park District Archers. H. Stuart Richter, 10736 Calumet avenue, was chosen chairman of the new organization. Paul Winston was named vice chairman, Mrs. Hazel Middleton was picked as secretary, and Harry Henrickson was elected treasurer.

One of the first important orders of business of the amalgamation will be the plans for the second annual "Robin Hood" tournament of the park district, to be held in June. With 1,500 expected entries, this will be one of the largest archery meets ever held.

The Archery association was organized in 1935. It was composed of eleven clubs, with a membership of more than 400. This group was credited for the decision to hold the National Archery tournament to Chicago in 1942. The association also devised the widely copied visible scoring system, whereby spectators are able to keep up with constantly changing scores.

The craft guild was composed of seventeen clubs with a membership of more than 1,000. The guild held competitive meets and also taught archery tackle making.

SO. BRYN MAWR AGAIN DEMANDS IMPROVEMENTS

Wants New Small Park, Beautified Parkways.

The South Bryn Mawr Improvement association recently revived its campaigns for the beautification of the parkways on Jeffery avenue from 75th to 83d street and for the construction of a small park and community building between 76th and 77th streets on Jeffery avenue.

Herman Benthey, representing the park district, told the members at a meeting that the district could not provide the parkway improvements on Jeffery avenue as previously promised, because of the lack of money.

Will Press Request.

Expressing disappointment at the change in attitude, the association voted to send a delegation to the park district officials and Mayor Kelly. This committee, appointed by Paul L. Anderson, president, consists of H. C. Moore, William Pridmore, Frank A. Houriham, John Wheeler, Frank Davin, Max Wilschke, Thomas O'Keefe, Herbert Eck, James Riley, David Pareria, Thomas Powell, Elmer J. Walsh and Mr. Anderson. Ald. Roy Olin [8th] and Ald. Thomas J. Daley [7th] will be asked to accompany them.

Mr. Walsh reported on the attempts of the organization in the last 10 years to obtain a small park for the neighborhood.

Will Circulate Petitions.

Following the suggestions of Mr. Wheeler and Mr. Davin, the members adopted a resolution that petitions be circulated among property owners and residents requesting a park and community building. Mr. Eck was chosen captain for the 8th ward and Mr. Powell for the 7th ward to obtain signatures.

After they are completed, a delegation from the association and other organizations will present the petitions to Mayor Kelly.

Ald. Olin, present at the meeting, promised his coöperation. Mr. Anderson presided, and Mr. Pridmore acted as secretary.

Officers of the council are Howard M. Landeau, president; Harold W. Schloss, secretary; Edmund K. Eichengreen, treasurer; Alan J. Altheimer, Maxwell Abbell, Herbert B. Fried, Henry Blumberg, S. ONE LEVEL HOME GOOD EXAMPLE OF TODAY'S BUILDING

Five Room House Shown at Exposition.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

The National House and Garden exposition, which opened yesterday at the Chicago Coliseum, shows the façade of a frankly modern five room house—one designed to meet the demands of a family in the medium income bracket, and exhibited by the Chicago Common Brick Manufacturers' association.

Whether you are planning to build a home for less money than this cost [$8,000 is the estimated price of construction] or whether you are planning to spend more, this house has many points of definite interest.

We are looking forward, according to authoritive sources, to a year which promises to bring the greatest revival in the building industry in almost a decade. And we know that we are getting more for every dollar spent, since architects, builders, contractors, and real estate dealers are working together to offer us homes which will bring us satisfaction and content.

Common Brick Walls.

This five room home [only the façade is shown, though miniature plans show room layouts and sizes and all available construction data] has walls of common solid brick, and its exterior has been carried out by the architects, Olsen and Urbain, 228 N. La Salle street, in the classic modern manner.

Its interior plan, organized into three main units, with utility and heater room on the first floor, is deserving of study.

You may or may not like its flat roofed, frankly modern exterior, with severely sophisticated lines. Some like this type, some don't. The methods of the modern school have their adherents and their opponents.

The vitally important part of a house is its interior plan. And the interior layout of this brick home has much to offer those who are interested in a five room house on one floor.

No Attic or Basement.

There is no provision for an attic or for a basement. Both have been eliminated. The closet and storage space throughout is generous, the utility room which is back of the kitchen offers space for laundry tubs, and it is always possible to find space in a garage for added storage space, by the installation of shelves and even closed cupboards.

The interior plan is organized into three units . . . one for service, one for living, one for sleeping, with bath accommodation.

One enters through a porch at the left, with floor of slate flagging. There is a long living room, running the depth of the house, with a sunny bay and French windows at the opposite end leading through French doors to an outdoor terrace.

Central Living Room.

At the left of this living room are two bedrooms, a bath, and a small hall; at the right there is the dining room at the front, the kitchen, and at the back a boiler and utility room. Automatic heat is specified, fueled with coal and a stoker or gas or oil. At the extreme right is a garage. In the rear bedroom, No. 2, which overlooks the garden area, there are corner windows.

You will find practically all of the "makings of a home and a garden" at this exposition; what goes into exterior and interior and landscaping, from almost the first impulse, through plans and counter plans, to the last dab of paint and the exciting approach to that moment when one moves in.

If you are one of those who have been playing with plans for a long time, only to see them die, you may come away with a more definite knowledge of what you want—and how to get it.

Answers To Problems.

You may come away with the idea of looking over what the market offers in houses which are already built. There's a lot of building going on now—and many expertly designed homes are being offered for sale.

You will find a great deal of experience to help you throught your home building or remodeling program, to guide you in the choice of a house site, to help you decide what style architect you prefer.

You will find answers to such perplexing problems as what the market offers in fueling units using coal stoker, oil, or gas; what to do about air conditioning and insulation and selection of wall surfacings, trim, windows, floors, and roofs; what is newest in refrigeration, in fireplaces, in kitchen equipment and plumbing.

From basement to attic and out to garage and garden, this exposition will enlighten you and answer questions which may have been unanswered in your mind for a long time.

State Bank to Celebrate 20th Birthday Tomorrow

Algar, cashier; Elizabeth C. Krouse, assistant vice president; Anthony Frale, assistant cashier, and William A. Sutherland, assistant cashier.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, May 15.

The hardy annuals should all be sown by this time. Examples of these are bachelor's button, aster, pot marigold, petunia, and cosmos. Spring is the time to plant magnolias, birch, and beech. Seeds of all annuals should be in the ground by the latter part of the month. Be sure that the seed bed is free from all lumps. Rake well and bury the lumps in a corner of the garden.

Tuesday, May 16.

Biennials may be sown now for flowering next year. Arrange to have on hand a few kinds of seeds for sowing in bare spots in the perennial border when some of the plants stop blooming. Annual larkspur, candytuft, portulaca, and poppies are all good for the purpose. A reserve supply of growing plants also can be kept on hand. Do not be in a hurry to plant the tender bedding stock, such as cannas and tender water lilies. There is nothing more interesting than a small pool for water plants.

Wednesday, May 17.

Watch all plants for the appearance of aphids and spray immediately if any are discovered. Use a contact spray material and not a stomach poison. Watch for iris borers and destroy at once. If ants appear use any of the recommended materials to eradicate them. The top dressing of lilacs, peonies, and other plants aids materially in obtaining a fine, luxuriant growth. Do not neglect pruning the early flowering shrubs as soon as they have flowered. Remove a part, at least, of the old wood and trim for shape. The growth made this season produces the flowers next spring. Give the cold frames full ventilation by removing the sash on all warm days and nights.

Thursday, May 18.

Get out the window boxes and repair and paint those that need it. Be sure they are strong enough to support soil and plants without any likelihood of breaking. Many windows can be made cheery by using window boxes and the type of material may be of such nature as to fit any location. The small flowered petunias are about the best for full, sunny windows, although many other plants can be used, such as the geranium, sweet alyssum, lantana, lobelia, vinca variegata, and many others. For shady north windows the Boston fern is excellent.

Friday, May 19.

Mow the lawn regularly; the clippings can be allowed to remain, as they do no harm unless the growth is excessively long. Keep the flower beds and borders edged with a sharp spade or special edging tool and cultivate all plots needing it. Why not plant some of the ornamental grasses? They are delightful when used for cutting, dried bouquets, and as garden plants. Seed can be sown now and the seedlings transplanted 8 to 14 inches apart. Job's tears, brome grass, quaking grass, animated oat, love grass, squirrel tail grass, fountain grass, and the rabbit tail grass are useful, ornamental, and easy to grow. Give the plants plenty of room to develop.

Saturday, May 20.

Sow seeds of the balsam apple for clambering over rock work, stumps, and trellises. It has warty fruits that open when ripe, exposing a brilliant carmine interior. The clockvine [Thunbergia] is a beautiful low climber with black eyed flowers of a yellow buff color. The seed may be sown outdoors, where the plants are to grow. Plant some of the hardy ferns in places that are too shady for other plants. Most of them do best in a moist location, such as along a shady walk, at the edges of pools, or the north side of the house. The fronds of some are excellent for cutting.

SPRING FLAUNTS FINERY IN WOODS FOR CITY'S HIKERS

600 in Organized Groups Make Trips Today.

BY PAUL HEALY.

This is the busy season for Chicago's true lovers of the outdoors. Hiking expeditions stemming from the city in all directions have been planned for today and next week-end by the largest and most consistent of the local hiking promoters—the Englewood Outdoor club, the Prairie club, and the park district.

Advance preparations have indicated that close to 600 persons of all ages will be trudging through the forests and meadows in the vicinity of Chicago on these excursions. Among the locales selected for the best exhibition of nature in its late spring finery are the Hoosier woods, Happy valley, Dresden Heights, White Pines forest, and Palos hills of the forest preserves.

Trip Through White Pines.

The Englewood Outdoor club is meeting at 7:30 o'clock this morning at 63d street and Western avenue before taking a bus to the White Pines State park near Oregon, Ill. More than sixty young people will tramp through the White Pines forest, a 315 acre tract preserved by the state in Ogle county as one of the large remaining examples of evergreen forest. William Jay will lead the way. Next Sunday the club will go to Palos hills in the Cook county forest preserves for a cross country hike under the leadership of Clarence Wolf.

The Englewood group was organized by a number of students in the Englewood Evening school in 1932. After being graduated, their common interest in recreation under nature's roof far from city streets caused them to incorporate and to expand. Today the club includes 250 members, most of them between the ages of 20 and 30, and averages two hikes a month during winter and spring. An average of sixty-five men and women usually turn out for the periodic jaunts to Turkey Run, Ind., the Shades [near Turkey Run], Devil's Lake, Wis., and seven divisions of the Cook county forest preserves, and other natural sites.

Leaders of Club.

Officers of the club, whose members come from all parts of Chicago and suburbs, are Thomas Johnson, president; William Jay, vice president; Miss Virginia Whyte, secretary; Miss Margarette Hanuska, treasurer, and Earl Whinna, sergeant at arms.

A nine mile walk through Hoosier woods, located a mile from Cedar Lake, Ind., is being undertaken today by a band of Prairie club members. For the hike Lee Troth and Miss Jeanette Carden are leaders, Miss Grace Montgomery is committee representative, and Adolph Renner will act as "rear guard."

The club is planning a week-end trip for next Saturday and Sunday which offers a hike through picturesque Happy valley, near Princeton, Ill., as the feature attraction. A committee consisting of Miss Nell Beatrice Nelson, Miss Evelyn Nelson, Miss Beatrice Hayes Podell, Marshall W. Pine, and Louis Morton is making the arrangements.

Visit River Junction.

Another group of Prairie clubbers will be at Dresden Heights, situated where the Des Plaines, Kankakee, and Du Page rivers join to form the Illinois, next Sunday. The eight mile route will follow the old towpath along the barge canal to Chinnahon and will include an invasion of McKinley woods. The hikers will have luncheon on a peninsula jutting into the wide Illinois river.

The Outing club, sponsored by the park district, has scheduled a seven mile hike through Black Partridge woods, near Lemont, next Sunday. The group will leave Randolph street by bus at 9 o'clock in the morning and will return to the loop at 7:30 o'clock in the evening. Frank Parker will be leader and Frank Stagenga and Miss Bernice Ahlgrim, guides. Any one wishing to be included in the party may call Lincoln 3000, extension 254.

WHAT THEY'RE DOING

Work is progressing as rapidly as possible on the new $3,150,000 south side trade school under construction at 87th street and Chappel avenue, John C. Christensen, school board architect has announced. The foundation is practically complete and steel work is being erected. The school, financed with the aid of PWA funds, will be completed next spring.

The school will include a central administration building, which will also house academic courses, flanked by one story wings in which shops will be located. It will accommodate about 4,000 pupils.

How I Rented My Apartment

"I have been renting my apartment through Tribune want ads for the past fifteen years. Recently I phoned a want ad to the Tribune to rent the apartment and again found a tenant."
Mrs. Ann Pollowy, 3845 Addison St.

How I Sold My Hunting Rifle

"To sell a hunting rifle, I placed a want ad in the Tribune. Next day I received a letter from a man in Kalamazoo, Michigan, asking for more information. I sent the information, and soon sold the gun."
F. T. Anderson, 1820 E. 79th Street

How I Sold a Stoker

"We wanted to dispose of a large stoker, so I phoned a want ad to the Tribune. The want ad brought replies from 35 people, and we sold the stoker."

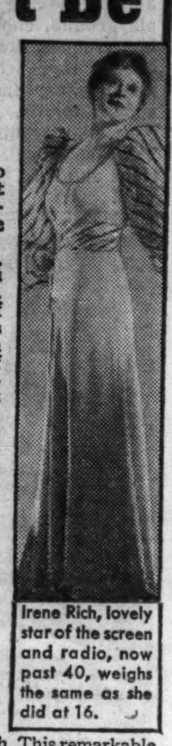
Don't Be Fat!



Irene Rich, lovely star of the screen and radio, now past 40, weighs the same as she did at 16.

IF you want to take off ugly fat easily and pleasantly all you have to do is—

First..eat sensibly, which means you avoid overeating. Second..mix ¾ of a glass of Welch's Grape Juice with ¼ of a glass of water and drink before meals and at bedtime. Thus you reduce caloric intake considerably. But you do not suffer a hungry moment. There are no strenuous exercises or taking drugs. Yet!—in a test conducted by Dr. Damrau with this method among a group of intelligent and cooperative people who followed directions implicitly, an average weight loss of seven pounds was registered per month. This remarkable method is just as beneficial and effective for overweight men as it is for overweight women. There is only one thing to watch. Eat sensibly, which means you avoid overeating, and be sure to use Welch's Grape Juice—always made from the pick of the grape crop; always full strength; always pure.

Try This Amazing Welch's Tomato Juice

JOHN BARRYMORE on Air Tonight in Knickerbocker Playhouse

Stars in "The Man They Thought Was Dead," over WBBM at 9:45

John Barrymore plays a truly great dramatic role tonight in one of the most thrilling radio plays of the year—a story of a man who returns from the "dead" and tries to start life over again.

During the World War, John Stewart was reported killed in France, a courageous soldier who sacrificed his life to save others. His home town erected an imposing monument to their hero's memory, and his son, James, grows up idolizing his brave father as his ideal.

Now, 21 years later, the real John Stewart comes home. Not a hero—but a lonely, penniless hobo, undeserving of the great respect paid to his memory.

Will John Stewart destroy his son's faith in him if he admits the truth about his past? Is he strong enough to make the greatest sacrifice in his entire life—the right to claim his own son?

Hear a thrilling dramatization of "The Man They Thought Was Dead," starring the great John Barrymore as John Stewart, with Elliott Lewis and Anne Seymour. Tune in KNICKERBOCKER PLAYHOUSE tonight at 9:45 over WBBM.

BETTY WINKLER, TO PORTRAY '1001 WIVES' IN SERIES

Four Authors for Novel Dramatic Program.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Short subjects:

"One Thousand and One Wives" is to be the title of a new NBC series, starting Friday, May 19. Listeners may expect to meet all kinds of wives in this program from Mrs. Malaprop, 1939 model, to the clinging vine. Betty Winkler will portray all of them. But the plays will be written by four persons—Sandra Michael, Fayette Krum, Al Barker, and William Hodapp.

"Cavalleria Rusticana" is to be the next on the W-G-N streamline opera series. It will be presented on Monday, June 5, from the W-G-N audience studio. Henry Weber expects to announce the cast next week.

David Rockefeller, son of John D. Rockefeller and a student at the University of Chicago, made an unannounced appearance on the "Bull Session" broadcast over WBBM-CBS last week.

Actors to Give Party.

Members of the local unit of the American Federation of Radio Actors are to give a party in the Hotel Sherman's Bal Tabarin on Friday, May 28. It will be open to the public.

Conrad Nagel is to be master of ceremonies for the summer show, replacing Fibber McGee and Molly, starting July 4. Alec Templeton, blind British pianist, and Edna Odell, W-G-N-Mutual songstress, and Billy Mills' orchestra will provide the music for the show.

Fred Allen's summer replacement is to be the quiz feature, "What's My Name?" It starts on July 5. Jack Benny will give way during the summer to the Aldrich Family who have been featured on the Kate Smith hour.

Glen Gray and his Casa Loma orchestra will replace Eddy Duchin at the Palmer House and over W-G-N-Mutual effective May 18.

Art Wright in Hollywood.

Art Wright, former W-G-N tenor, who has been singing with Buddy Rogers' orchestra, is now in Hollywood continuing his musical studies. He expects to get into west coast broadcasting, possibly pictures.

Allan Grant is the composer of the theme song for the new serial, "Midstream" on NBC. He calls his song, "Serenity." . . . Bob Hafter, WBBM production director, has gone to Hollywood to visit his wife, Kitty O'Neill who is now a regular with the Al Pearce Gang. . . . Katherine Roche, who as June Baker conducts the W-G-N Home Management program, is due back from New York this week. . . . Duwayne Carnes of the W-G-N vocal octet and Kathleen Bretzlaff of the W-G-N-Mutual Three Graces trio are to be married in Oak Park on Thursday, May 1

Schmidt Signed by Opera.

Reinhold Schmidt, basso with the Continentals quartet, heard on the Contented hour, has been engaged to sing with the Chicago City Opera company this fall. . . . Saxie Dowell, who wrote the current comedy hit, "Three Little Fishies," is to leave Hal Kemp's band and form one of his own. Skinnay Ennis, another former Kemp singer, has done very well with his own band. . . . Tizzie Lish, former Al Pearce comedian [it's a man], is in town making several appearances with the WLS National Barn Dance company.

Harry Horlick's music, missing from the airlanes for several years, has been reinstated on Friday nights on NBC. . . . Gracie Allen caused a near riot outside CBS Radio theater in New York the other evening. She stood in front of the theater entrance distributing tickets to her show after a high pressure sales talk on its merits.

Glen Gray's Orchestra Coming to W-G-N-Mutual

On Thursday, May 18, W-G-N and Mutual will add another name band to their long list of music makers. On that date Glen Gray and his Casa Loma orchestra will replace Eddy Duchin in the Empire room of the Palmer House. The broadcast programs of Casa Loma will feature the voices of "Pee Wee" Hunt and Kenny Sargent, and the trumpet playing of Sonny Durham.

BBC Music Hall List.

The B. B. C. Music Hall presentation to be heard on Mutual at 1:15 p. m. May 27 from London will feature Len Young, the Singing Fool; Scot and Whaley, celebrated "Koloured Komedy Kings," Billy Scott-Comber and his Singing Grenadiers, and George Robey, "Prime Minister of Mirth."

WEIRD SOUNDS ADD TO MYSTERY OF PETER QUILL

Director Won't Tell How Effects Are Made.

"Peter Quill," the mystery drama that has gained such wide popularity among W-G-N and Mutual listeners on Friday nights, employs the most unusual sound effects of any radio show in the country. That is the opinion of Blair Walliser, W-G-N producer, who is in charge of the show.

"We not only have sound effects that are different," he said, "but we manipulate them in such a way that even our studio audience doesn't know how they are made. I doubt if one person in a hundred in our audience knows how we make the eerie 'Peter Quill call.'"

Walliser declined to divulge just how that particular sound effect is made.

Imaginery Articles Used.

Many imaginary articles and devices are used on the program, and this calls for ingenuity on the part of the sound man, Walliser said. He must invent sounds for things that do not exist. Among them are "invisible lightning," "directional audiometer," "radiosonic compass" and innumberable others.

Sometimes, because of the difficulties of timing, six or eight effects that must be worked simultaneously are recorded. One of the most difficult moments, Walliser said, occurred when the sound of an airplane being catapulted from the deck of a warship had to be reproduced. This sound had never been set down. So a record was made, with nine different noises simulating the event.

Sound Man Never Seen.

The harried sound effects man in charge of the show is Russell Raycroft. He has never been seen by the studio audience, as he works behind a screen.

"Peter Quill" will take a hand in stopping a germ bomb plot next Friday. The drama will be heard from 8 to 8:30 p. m.

Mutual Network Station List Reaches Total of 113

On May 10 radio stations KHSL of Chico, Cal., and KVCV at Redding, Cal., became affiliated with the Don Lee Broadcasting system and the coast to coast Mutual network. The number of Mutual network affiliated stations now totals 113 from coast to coast.

TIPS FROM BOB

Bob Crosby gives Singer Morton Downey (left) a few tips on playing baseball just before Crosby's "Bandstand Grandstand" goes on the air at 11:30 Monday evening from the Blackhawk restaurant over W-G-N and Mutual. Downey is heard over NBC at 8:30 Monday nights with Eddy Duchin's orchestra.

WILKOMIRSKI IN VIOLIN SOLO ON MELODY HOUR

The Pageant of Melody, conducted by Henry Weber, will feature Michael Wilkomirsky in a violin solo and Attilio Baggiore, tenor, from 9:30 to 10:15 p. m. tomorrow on W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system.

Wilkomirski will play for his solo "Haranaise," by Saint-Saëns. Baggiore will sing "Siciliana," from Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana," and will join the octet in Nevin's "The Rosary" and themes from Kalman's "Sari."

Other numbers to be presented by the orchestra will include the waltz, "Morning Journals," by Johann Strauss; "La Feria," by Turina, and Liszt's "Hungarian Rhapsody."

58% OF NETWORK PROGRAMS MUSIC, SURVEY REVEALS

An analysis of more than 19,000 hours of programs over NBC last year reveals that 11,089, or more than 58 per cent, was music. Dramatic and literary programs accounted for the next highest number of hours—3,424.

Talks and dialog were in third place with 1,841 hours and news and résumés in fourth with 658. Commercially sponsored programs accounted for only 29.6 per cent of the total and the balance of 70.4 was devoted to sustaining programs.

Due perhaps to growing interest in public affairs and in audience participation programs, programs classified as "talks and dialog" showed a greater gain the last year than all other types of programs. The report showed 9.7 per cent in this classification, a gain of almost 2 per cent.

New Peak in Drama.

Dramatic entertainment gained in volume during the year while music and comedy both showed declines. Mucis programs accounted for 58.2 per cent of the total time.

Drama and readings ran to 17.8 per cent of the total; sports, 1.8 per cent; news, 3.4 per cent; comedy, 2.8 per cent; women's programs, 1.5 per cent; children's programs, 3.7 per cent, and religious programs, 1.1.

President Roosevelt spoke thirty-two times on the network; and there were 722 other federal officials on the air during the year.

New York Greatest Produc r.

New York produced more network programs than any other city, 36.4 per cent of all transmissions originating there; Chicago was second with 22.9 per cent; San Francisco third with 15.9 per cent and Hollywood fourth with 8.2 per cent.

Constipation Relief That Also Pepsin-izes Stomach

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up fast that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach-relief while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how pepsinizing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative—Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your druggist today! (Adv.)

LEADERS LAUD IDEAS BEHIND CADET REVIEW

Held Tribute to Value in Molding Youth.

Educational, military and civic leaders agreed last week that the Michigan avenue R. O. T. C. review sponsored by THE TRIBUNE and the board of education on June 2 is both a tribute to the importance of junior military training in molding the city's youth and an incentive to greater achievements. Chicago's 8,147 uniformed cadets, representing twenty-eight high schools, will march in the parade and Friday, June 2, will be sete aside as annual "cadet day" for the city.

In the opinion of Maj. Gen. Stanley H. Ford, commander of the 6th corps area, "the annual parade of the Reserve Officers Training corps of the Chicago high schools gives the citizens of Chicago an opportunity to view the largest junior R. O. T. C. unit in the United States and to see some of the splendid results which military training accomplishes."

Have Different Aims.

Lieut. Col. Willard R. Matheny, senior contact officer for the Reserve Officers association, thinks it should be emphasized that the junior and the senior R. O. T. C. have different aims.

"The purpose of the senior division," he said, "is to make officers, but the junior division does not lead to commissions—it exists for an educational purpose. In it a boy learns discipline and citizenship in a way hardly possible otherwise. That's why I believe there should be a 'cadet day' set aside for the purpose of paying tribute to these examples of splendid young manhood."

Herbert Simpson, president of the Kiwanis club of Chicago, commented that "the R. O. T. C. is a fine thing looked at from many angles. It affords contacts, discipline and a chance for physical development which are invaluable during a boy's formative years. Since it prepares boys for all sorts of jobs, we should encourage it as much as possible. The Kiwanis club specializes in youth work and is behind this parade 100 per cent."

Praise by Maj. Beals.

"R. O. T. C. day is a big day in the lives of the boys involved in it," said Maj. Frank L. Beals, assistant superintendent of schools. "It enables them to present to the public the results of their year's work and serves to stimulate further effort toward excellence.

Miss Besse B. Trout, national defense chairman of the state department of the United Spanish War Veterans auxiliary, said:

"I am highly in favor of THE TRIBUNE'S program of presenting awards to R. O. T. C. cadets each semester and coöperating in staging a review on a day annually set aside for the cadets. It encourages our youth to greater achievements and citizenship. I believe all parents should urge their sons to join the R. O. T. C. because of its benefits toward character, patriotism and poise."

BOYS AND GIRLS OF 'Y' TO NOTE MOTHER'S DAY

Celebrating Mother's day today, 200 Hi-Y boys and 60 Tri-Hi-Y girls of the South Shore Y. M. C. A. and their mothers will attend the 11 o'clock service in the South Shore Community church. The young men's division and the De Luxe and Centaur clubs of the Wabash Avenue Y. M. C. A. will hold a special program at 3 o'clock in the "Y."

The Rev. Richard G. Douglas has invited the South Shore "Y" representatives to occupy one section of the auditorium. This will be the fifth annual mother and son go-to-church observance.

The program at the Wabash "Y" will consist of vocal solos by Mrs. Bernice Keaton Barksdale, Miss Ethel Byrd, Mrs. Ruth Granson, Blis Tlaine, and Miss Jean Dorsey; readings by Miss Dorothy Herron, Miss Harriet Butler, and Willard Clark; piano solos by Miss Ruth Stewart and Miss Alvina Baxter; a violin solo by Thomas Cooper Jr., and numbers by the NYA-Y. M. C. A. chorus. Malcolm M. Hemphill is chairman and Maurice Anderson, co-chairman. Miss Charlame Rollins will be the speaker.

IN THESE DAYS, WHEN "MIGHT MAKES RIGHT," WHO CARES WHAT HAPPENS TO THE WEAK AND HELPLESS? WELL, SOME STILL CARE, AND CARE ENOUGH TO ACT--ONE LITTLE GIRL, A HELPLESS WAIF, IN DANGER, AND FROM THE CORNERS OF THE EARTH MEN COME SWIFTLY AND WITH A DEADLY PURPOSE-
NO- I'M SORRY- WE HAVEN'T A SINGLE CLEW TO GO ON, AS YET- WE'LL GET A BREAK BEFORE LONG, I HOPE---
WELL, IF WE SHOULD HEAR ANYTHING WE'LL LET YOU KNOW, OF COURSE-
OH, I'M AFRAID IT'S HOPELESS- IF THOSE MEN CAN'T DO ANYTHING, WHO CAN---?

ER--I--- WON'T YOU COME IN?
WE DID OUR BEST- BUT IT WASN'T VERY GOOD, I'M AFRAID-
DO NOT BLAME YOURSELVES- BUT I WASTE TIME-
MAY SANDY GO WITH ME TO AID OUR QUEST FOR ANNIE?
OF COURSE HE MAY--IT'S PLAIN TO SEE HE KNOWS AND LOVES YOU-
THANK YOU, MEMSAHIB- AND CEASE YOUR WORRIES- I ASSURE YOU JUSTICE SHALL BE DONE- AND SOON-
IF YOU'RE GOING WHERE THAT BIRD AXEL IS, WILL YOU TAKE ME, TOO?

FLYING BLIND in a STORM-LASHED ANDES CANYON!
JOHNNY WAGNER, FAMOUS TEST PILOT
THEY KNOW REAL SMOKING PLEASURE
LEE GEHLBACH, TEST PILOT
MARIE McMILLIN, PARACHUTE JUMPER
HARVEY PARRY, MOVIE STUNT MAN
THEY LET UP— LIGHT UP A CAMEL
LIFE AS A CHIEF TEST PILOT MUST BE PLENTY EXCITING, JOHNNY!
YES AND NO. FLYING THESE NEW PLANES IS SAFE AND EASY COMPARED TO THE OLD DAYS. I REMEMBER YEARS AGO...
SOUNDS LIKE A STORY COMING. HOW ABOUT LIGHTING UP A CAMEL?
"IN 1931 I HAD A ROUTE FROM SANTIAGO, CHILE TO MENDOZA, ARGENTINA. PASSENGERS WEREN'T FLOWN IN UNCERTAIN WEATHER, SO ONE DAY I WAS JUST FLYING MAIL OVER THE ANDES — 24,000 FEET UP..."
LET'S SEE NOW — ONLY 150 MILES TO GO — GAS FOR 3 HOURS — O.K. SUFFERING CATS — A STORM!
30,000 FEET, YET! I CAN'T CLIMB OVER THIS GALE. I'LL HAVE TO DIVE DOWN TO THE CANYON!
"BUT THE STORM DROPPED TOO. THE 400-YARD-WIDE CANYON GOT DARK — WIND CURRENTS SMACKED ME UP AND DOWN..."
IT'S NO GO! I'VE GOT TO TURN HER BACK ON A DIME!
"HEART-IN-MOUTH, I BANKED VERTICALLY, TURNED SHARP — MISSED THE CLIFF BY A SCANT SHIP-LENGTH..."
"BUT TO MY HORROR, I SAW MY GAS WAS TOO LOW TO FLY BACK TO SANTIAGO. MY ONLY CHANCE WAS TO FLY BLIND THROUGH THE STORM TO MENDOZA..."
THIS IS LIKE FLYING IN A STOVEPIPE!
"BUT I WON! I 'SAT DOWN' IN MENDOZA WITH HARDLY A DROP OF GAS LEFT."
JOHNNY WAGNER! WE'D ABOUT GIVEN YOU UP —
NEARLY GAVE MYSELF UP. HOW ABOUT ONE OF YOUR CAMELS FOR ME?
I THINK I'LL LET UP AND LIGHT UP A CAMEL MYSELF. WON'T YOU HAVE ANOTHER ONE, TOO?
THANK YOU! YES...
CAMELS HAVE A RICH, RIPE TASTE THAT I LIKE — AND REAL MILDNESS TOO. AND CAMELS NEVER JANGLE MY NERVES. THAT'S WHY, FOR MY SMOKING, I LET UP — LIGHT UP A CAMEL!
I WANT ALL THE PLEASURE THERE IS IN SMOKING — SO IT'S CAMELS FOR ME!

DADDY, TELL ME A STORY.
JUST ONE! THEN, JUDY, YOU MUST GO TO BED.
ONCE THERE WAS A LITTLE GIRL WHO LOOKED OUT AND SAW A CUTE BROWN-EYED DEER UNDERNEATH HER WINDOW.
SHE CLIMBED DOWN ONTO HIS BACK AND HE LEAPED GRACEFULLY OVER THE FENCE AND WAS OFF TO THE WOODS.
WHEN THEY GOT INTO THE DEEP SHADE, WHO SHOULD STEP FROM BEHIND A TREE BUT A BIG BEAR.
STOP, SAID THE BEAR. I WILL TAKE THE LITTLE GIRL ON MY BACK AND GIVE HER A RIDE.
NO, REPLIED THE DEER, YOU CANNOT RUN AS FLEETLY AS I CAN. BUT, SAID THE BEAR, YOU CAN'T CLIMB A TREE!
AT WHICH POINT IT SEEMS THAT THE LITTLE GIRL DROPPED OFF TO SLEEP IN HER FATHER'S ARMS.
DADDY WILL TUCK YOU IN YOUR LITTLE BED.
THERE, JUDY, HONEY! SWEET DREAMS.
I WANT 'NOTHER STORY.
YOU WENT SOUND ASLEEP IN THE MIDDLE OF THE LAST ONE.
NO, I HEARD IT ALL— ABOUT THE DEER AN' THE BEAR—
AN' THE G-MAN SHOT THE BEAR AN' THE DEER TURNED INTO A HORSE WITH A BLINDFOLDED RIDER, AN' THE AIRPLANE CAME. I HEARD IT ALL.

OKAY! WE'VE DUPLICATED THEIR PHYSICAL APPEARANCE PERFECTLY—WE'RE ALL SET!
Chester Gould
THERE'S THE SIGNAL FROM OUR BOAT—THEY'RE READY!
ALI OOP—PRINCE! THIS IS WHERE YOU BOYS CHANGE TRAINS.
AND IN THE CAPTAIN'S QUARTERS
IT'S A NOTE, CAPTAIN, I JUST FOUND IN THE CABIN OF THOSE TWO AVIATORS WE PICKED UP.
Thanks for the lift, but we're afraid the department of commerce will be looking for us because we didn't get a permit for that flight. We've got life belts and we're swimming for it. X
LOOK! THEY MUST BE GETTING PICKED UP BY THAT LAUNCH.
WELL—WE DID OUR DUTY. GOOD LUCK TO THEM.
YOUR HIGHNESS, WE DOCK IN ONE HOUR.
AND AT POLICE HEADQUARTERS...
BUT HOW COULD THIS "WHIP" CHUTE MAKE ANY MONEY OUT OF THE VISIT OF THE ROYALTY?
I DON'T KNOW, CHIEF. IT'S BEYOND ME.
—BUT PAT AND I LOCATED A ROOMING HOUSE WHERE HE USED TO STAY. MITZI GAVE US THE ADDRESS FROM AN OLD LETTER HE ONCE WROTE HER.
IN A CLOSET WE FOUND THESE PLASTER BUSTS OF THE PRINCES. THEY'RE SOUVENIRS BEING SOLD NOWADAYS TO THEIR COUNTRYMEN.
IS THAT UNUSUAL?
NO—THE UNUSUAL PART IS, THESE BUSTS SEEM TO HAVE BEEN USED TO CAST SOMETHING. THERE'S A SORT OF RUBBERY SUBSTANCE AROUND THE EDGE OF THE FACES.

Day by Day on the Farm

By BOB BECKER

Bird Sleuth Busy.

May 13, 1939.

A PAIR of wild Canada geese that settled down on one of the farm ponds several weeks ago keeps the flockmaster busy these days. They're not troublesome birds. On the contrary they mind their own business and apparently are quite contented with the food and the ponds on the farm.

But they're causing the flockmaster extra work in an unusual way. He is interested in finding out if this pair of geese is nesting around one of the ponds, so feels he has to do a little sleuthing on every one of his visits to the ponds. So far he has been unable to get conclusive evidence.

We are quite certain, however, that these two birds are not nesting. Nesting geese don't fly away when you get near them. When we encountered this pair of wild birds near one of the ponds this week they took to wing, circled, and then landed on the big pond about a quarter of a mile away. This behavior is anything but that of devoted, nesting wild geese.

Geese Offer Surprise.

Another pair of Canada geese living on the big pond surprised everybody this week. No one knew that they were nesting. When they appeared on Half Moon pond early this week with four goslings the flockmaster could hardly believe his eyes. The geese did a masterful job, not only in hiding their nest but also by giving the impression that they weren't even thinking about raising goslings. In fact, all who saw these birds marked 'em down as a pair too lazy to build a nest this season. Then came the surprise. Instead of loafers they turned out to be the smartest pair of geese on the farm.

The song bird traps continue to furnish many interesting contacts with the bird life on the farm. This week white throated sparrows, those sweet singing migrants that we hear each year in the north woods when we are fishing, were the most common visitors to the traps, although several other species of birds dropped in for visits. One evening this week we banded three bluejays, a brown thrasher, two towhees, and two white throats. So far this spring more than fifty birds have been given numbered aluminum bands and released. In addition to the number banded we had several repeaters—birds that were banded and then came back to the traps for a meal.

The way song birds are attracted to traps and feeding stations was graphically demonstrated this week on the farm. The traps are set to catch birds four days each week, being left open the other three days so that the birds may feed without being captured.

Wait for Handouts.

Early this week, when we went back to set the traps, we noticed that several birds seemed to be waiting for their handout of grain. A white throated sparrow was inside one of the ground traps. When we approached closer he flew out of the open trap and perched on the limb of a nearby thornapple tree. A few feet away a towhee stood on another wire trap, seemingly impatient with the delay in bringing his breakfast. The birds apparently recognize the traps as a loafing place where they can have a good time and get plenty of free meals.

The brown thrasher trapped this week was the first banded on the farm this year, although we did band one last fall on Sept. 15. We may expect to attract more thrashers this summer, because the trap is in the midst of a dense thicket, the kind of habitat that these birds like.

CHALLENGE USED CAR SALE!

James F. Goodwin

19 YEARS WITH DODGE.

"With us used cars are a definite part of the business and when they crowd our floors and retard the sale of new cars, then it is time for drastic action. It is a shame that we have to cut prices drastically right at the very start of the big used car selling season, but our loss is your gain. Prices on our used cars will definitely be stabilized after this sale."

Chicago's Annual House and Garden Exposition Is Opened at Coliseum

CAPE COD TYPE COTTAGE IS ONE OF EXHIBITIONS

Latest Developments in Construction Shown.

Arthur G. Lindell.

Chicago's annual home show—the National House and Garden exposition—opened at the Coliseum yesterday. It will continue through next Sunday, May 21.

Ald. Arthur G. Lindell, chairman of the city council committee on housing, represented Mayor Kelly at the dedication ceremony held in the afternoon. Officials of the Federal Housing administration, the Chicago Real Estate board, and other agencies took part in the ceremony.

For individuals interested in building homes or modernizing existing ones, the show will present the latest developments in construction, equipment, and furnishing. There also are numerous garden and other horticultural exhibits.

Because this is a home show, the features are a full sized model of a complete house and façades of a number of houses to give suggestions as to design trends.

Cape Cod Cottage Type.

The complete house is of the Cape Cod cottage type. Built of wood, it has four rooms and an attached garage. Including a lot on a typical subdivision, it is priced at $4,950. The house has been designed so that two rooms may be added in the attic. A utility room, 11 feet by 7 feet, contains an oil heating unit and laundry equipment.

Considerable comment was made by visitors on progress in the art of low cost home construction as represented in the house. The living room, 16.3 by 10.9 feet, is connected with two bedrooms and the bath by a short hall, and a swing door leads to the 9.6 by 9.3 foot kitchen-dinette. One of the bedrooms is 11 by 11 feet and the other is 10 by 9 feet. The bathroom is fair sized. Herman H. Bruns designed the house, which is being exhibited by the Indiana State Housing association.

Façades of Houses Shown.

Two façades of houses offer an interesting contrast to the model home. One, located in the north hall, is of the Ann Hathaway type, with an old English thatched roof. The other in the east center of the main hall, is of brick construction. The latter is of classic design adapted to present day custom. It was installed by the Chicago district group of the Common Brick Manufacturers' association.

The Majestic Lumber and Construction company is showing a combination small home and garage.

The apartment house dweller, as well as the home owner, will find many interesting exhibits devoted to household convenience and comfort. These include heating and lighting equipment, air conditioning devices, refrigeration, and mediums for ventilation. Some 500 items are included in the booths of the more than 100 commercial exhibitors at the show.

Exhibits of Landscaping.

Landscaping and gardening exhibits form some of the most attractive features, more than 20,000 square feet being devoted to them. The central section of the Coliseum has been converted into a garden, which is called the "Garden of Tomorrow." Robert Bruce Lovett was designer of the garden, which was installed by Roy Clavey of Deerfield. The Midwest Horticultural society also has a garden designed especially for the average small home.

Educational booths are maintained at the show by the Chicago Real Estate board, the Architects' Small House Service bureau, and the Common Brick Manufacturers' association. The FHA has an exhibit at which attendants will give information on every phase of home ownership, from the purchase of the site to the financing and construction. Colored movies of homes recently built in the Chicago area will be shown in the realty board booth.

Other features include a section for homecraft, in which various useful articles for basement, attic, garage, and workshop are shown; a handiwork exhibit of the American Legion; a homecraft exhibit of the Chicago park district, and an exhibit of the Chicago Aquarium society. The Chicago Business Men's Art club is showing fifty paintings by its members.

John A. Servas is manager of the exposition, which is open from 10 a. m. to 11 p. m. daily.

Row of Pre-Fabricated Houses in Lansing

Row of pre-fabricated houses built in the Morningside section of Lansing, Ill., in the Calumet industrial district. These houses stand on the north side of 178th street, between Wentworth and Maple avenues. Thomas J. O'Connor, real estate man, is developing the area.

Realty Firms Find Business Moving Ahead

Many Chicago district realty offices report substantial gains in business this year over last year.

The H. H. Halvorsen company reports that from Jan. 1 to April 30 an average of one sale a day was made, or a total of 120. Properties sold included: 79 bungalows, 13 residences, 20 two-flats, 7 properties containing from 3 to 19 flats and one near downtown store and loft building. Compared with the first three months of 1938 the gain in number of sales was 40 per cent and in dollar volume 54 per cent.

The Sack Realty company reports April business was the most active for the month in several years, with twenty-three sales closed. These were seventeen residences, five flat buildings and one store building.

Frank J. Petru reports that April was the best month he has had in more than fifteen years. He had nine sales.

Fred W. Alger of Albert F. Keeney said 116 properties were sold in the first quarter of 1939 for a total of $631,820, a gain of 35 per cent over 1938. Of the sales 82 were residences, 27 two-flats, 3 larger flat buildings and one income property consisting of 3 stores, 3 offices and 12 flats.

TWO HIGHLAND PARK RESIDENCES ARE PURCHASED

Purchases of two Highland Park residences were reported yesterday. Max Bloomstein, a member of the law firm of Poppenhusen, Johnston, Thompson & Raymond, bought the brick colonial house at 827 South Lincoln avenue from Richard F. Kuhns. Kuhns bought the red brick Georgian house at 218 Vine street from Mrs. Gerard Van Schaick, who is building a new home on the coast of Georgia. Baird & Warner represented Kuhns and Mrs. Van Schaick and Smart & Golee represented Bloomstein.

Field Building Reports Two More Leases Closed

Two leases closed recently in the Field building, 135 South La Salle street, included offices taken by William H. Price Jr., who will conduct a sales and distribution advisory service, and by William O. Burns, an attorney.

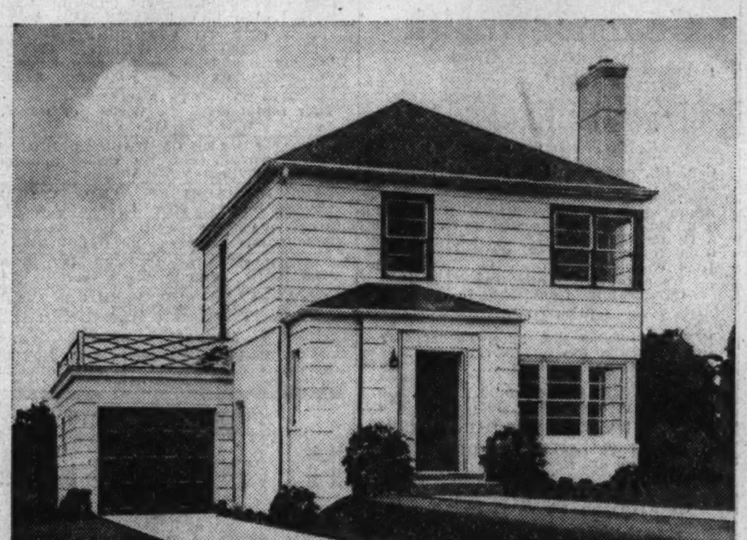
In North Edgebrook Section



Philip Holoubek, manager of the Utility Tool and Die works, recently purchased this residence at 5125 Morse avenue in the North Edgebrook-Lincolnwood district. It is one of a group of six colonial type residences built by Bon-Aire Builders, Inc., in the vicinity of Morse and Le Claire. Six have been sold. It is stated that payments under FHA loans for the houses in this group do not exceed $55 per month, including taxes, insurance, interest, and payment on principal.

BUILDING LOAN GROUPS SHOW BIG GAIN IN MEMBERS

There were 250,000 new accounts opened during the first quarter of 1939 in savings, building and loan associations, the United States Building and Loan league reported yesterday. This was the largest number of accounts to be opened in the first quarter of any year since 1929.

The gain over the first quarter of 1938 was 7.7 per cent and the gain over the fourth quarter of 1938 was 6.34 per cent. During each of the three months about 5,000 more new accounts were added than in each month during the like 1938 period.

"These data show that the associations are continuing for the third successive year gains in number of account holders," said Morton Bodfish, executive vice president of the league. "Although we do not have all the figures, it is estimated that a net gain of about 300,000 shareholders was achieved by the combined savings and loan institutions last year."

Reports Two Leases Closed at 179 North Michigan

The north half of the second floor of the building at 179 North Michigan avenue has been rented by Louis Brosilow, importer of oriental merchandise, for two years beginning July 1. Winston & Co. represented all parties. Carlton Fashions, Inc., leased the north half of the fifth floor in the same building for use in a mail order wearing apparel business. Warren Cahn represented the lessee and Winston & Co. the lessor.

Rusnak Brothers to Open Fifth in Furniture Chain

Rusnak Brothers, Inc., furniture stores, will open a new unit at 6815 Stony Island avenue on Saturday, May 20, the company announced yesterday. This will be the fifth in the company's chain. The premises, which contain about 15,000 square feet, were leased for five years from Dr. Julius Hess.

Brokers' Notes

N. C. Clausonthue. [Koehne Photo.]

J. J. Harrington & Co., 7 South Dearborn street, have recently been appointed agents for several additional buildings, N. C. Clausonthue, who heads the management department, announced. Among these are the Moxley building at the southwest corner of Randolph and Clinton streets and the Beneke building at 2559 West 21st street. Clausonthue said the new buildings were taken after 100 per cent occupancy for 700,000 square feet already under the company's management.

The Vognild Mortgage company has moved its real estate, mortgage, and financing business from 3247 West Fullerton avenue to larger quarters in the Division State Bank building, 2601 West Division street.

At the Realty Boards

Herbert C. Jenks has resigned as president of the Evanston-North Shore Real Estate board. Roland H. Peterson, who has been vice president, becomes president.

A one day conference of the real estate boards in the first district of the Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards will be held at the Oak Park Arms hotel, Washington boulevard and Oak Park avenue, on May 23. The Oak Park Real Estate board will be host. Homer L. Bundy will preside.

The Chicago Real Estate board's annual spring outing will be held at the Edgewood Valley Country club on June 14, Leo B. Varty, chairman of the outing committee, announced.

HOME, REALTY ACTIVITY GAINS OUTSIDE OF CITY

Prefabricated Houses Built in Lansing.

Chicago district real estate men, mortgage companies, and construction concerns yesterday reported substantial activity in the building of homes and in development of residential districts. All the enterprises discussed were outside the city's limits, indicating anew the population shift to the outside areas.

One of the most interesting projects is a development in Lansing—in the Calumet industrial district—in which prefabricated homes are erected on sites in one day. These houses are being erected in a subdivision of Thomas J. O'Connor, who has been in the real estate business in the district since 1919. They are being financed under FHA loan terms by the Republic Realty Mortgage company.

Prefabricated Homes.

Forty-two homes have been erected in the area, known as Morningside, about a half of which were prefabricated, and it is expected 35 to 40 more will be built before autumn. The houses range in price from $4,500 to $6,000. One group on the north side of 178th street, between Wentworth and Maple avenues, is just having the finishing touches put to it.

Under the program for speedy construction, Buckley Brothers, the contractors, take building plans from the purchasers to their shops, where the various wall and other sections are built. The foundation at the site is prepared in advance. When all parts have been assembled at the factory they are taken to the site by a crew which puts them in place, usually in one day. Earle V. Johnson, vice president of Republic Mortgage, said that the success with which the latest group was put up demonstrates the value of prefabrication in low cost building. These houses are unique because they are sheathed with plywood and have plywood interior walls.

Niles Center Activity.

A. E. Pearson, administrator of the civic housing administration of Niles Center, reports progress in a home development at Brummel street and Karlov avenue, Niles Center, not far from the Crawford avenue "L" station. Houses are being built for Charles W. Barber of La Salle Extension university; Neville H. Bicknase of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, and Paul H. Clark of the National Broadcasting company, adjacent to this intersection.

Excavation has been started a block north on Karlov avenue for Harold J. Daily of the Graybar Electric company. The first three are being financed under FHA loans by the Republic Realty Mortgage company, and the last by the H. Hoyt Thompson company.

Kenneth Hunter King of King Realty announced that the formal opening of Lockerbie Country Estates on Lockerbie street, Wilmette, will take place May 15. The property winds south from the King Realty office at 3343 Glenview road, two blocks east of the North Shore line's Glenayre station, into heavily wooded timber. There will be thirty-one lots in the area. Homes will cost from $10,000 to $20,000.

On Irving Park Boulevard.

George Manus, president of the Lake Shore Realty Co., Inc., reports that plans have been drawn for a group of 67 homes in Indian Park Estates, located on the north side of Irving Park boulevard, four blocks west of River road and adjoining the city limits of Schiller Park on the east. Manus said the development will total about $500,000. The average building cost is placed at $6,000. Larsen and Sons, contractors, are building a model home.

Claude W. Morris, manager of the Property Development company, reported that 270 unsold homesites will be placed on the market in Norshore Park, in the southwest part of Waukegan, running from north of 8th street to 10th street, west of Lewis avenue and Dugdale road. The property was originally subdivided in 1925, but fell victim to the realty depression. It will be developed into a low-cost homes area, Morris said.

Chicago Area House Permits Rise in April

Building permits in the Chicago metropolitan area had a dollar value of $3,272,967 in April, a gain of 46 per cent over the $2,235,828 total for April, 1938, according to the monthly survey of building in the Chicago region of the Bell Savings and Building Loan Association, made public yesterday.

For the first four months of this year building permits totaled $9,732,544, compared with $7,489,290 in the like 1938 period, an increase of $2,243,254.

There were 292 permits for new homes issued in April to cost an estimated $2,034,271. This represented a 51 per cent increase over April, 1938, when 203 permits for a total of $1,349,926 were issued. In March, 1939, there were 378 permits issued for a total of $2,414,164.

Gain Over Last Year.

For the first four months of 1939 there were 960 permits issued for new homes for a total of $6,418,633, compared with 513 permits for a total of $3,722,346 in the like 1938 period. The gain this year in dollar volume was 72 per cent.

Gary led in permits for new homes in April with a total of thirty-six permits to cost $139,000, reported by Alfred S. Hess, building commissioner. Evanston was second with a total of 9 permits to cost $106,000, reported by E. M. Goodman.

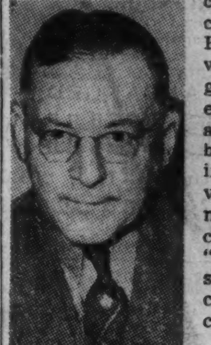
BUILDING WEEK IS REAL SUCCESS, LEADERS ASSERT

Public Is Well Informed, Says Angell.



Patrick F. Sullivan.

Chicago's Building Industry week was a success, Paul D. Angell, general chairman, declared yesterday. He reviewed the work of the many groups that coöperated to focus attention on the building industry in the hope of reviving that former leader in Chicago activity. The "week" was sponsored by the Chicago Building congress.

Among the groups that took part were architects, real estate men, labor leaders, engineers, contractors, and financial interests.

Finds Constructive Results.

"We made a test of the reaction among the members of the building industry," Angell said, "as well as the public. We found positive results. The public is appreciative of the fact that information and facts are necessary to an understanding of what we are trying to do.

"Our goal has been to make the public realize that now is the time to build—costs are down, products are right, and all should be set to go.

"Attendance at our various meetings by far exceeded our hopes."

Major Points Discussed.

Among the noteworthy points emphasized at the meetings were:

1. Recognition that a real revival in the building industry must come from private capital and not from wild government spending.

2. Rehabilitation of depreciated areas as one of the chief hopes for a revival of building in Chicago.

One of the most encouraging statements made during the week, according to leaders in the building congress was that of Patrick F. Sullivan, chairman of the Chicago Building Trades council. He pledged the efforts of his group to coöperate in doing everything possible to start the building industry moving again.

With the Spotlight Turned on Weddings, Fashion Grooms Bridegrooms

By Rhea Seeger.

With the spotlight turned on the many weddings planned for spring and summer, and the usual fanfare accorded the brides, it will undoubtedly surprise the hitherto less fussed over masculine halves of the parties to be assured that just as expert service, quite as many counselors, and equally resplendent apparel await the selections of the grooms-to-be. Any jittery gentleman can walk into shop or store, choose the correct outfit for such a momentous occasion, smoothly and in record time, round up the right accessories needed definitly to dramatize the event. Any and all questions can be answered while you shop, and the stores have everything but the bride!

The entire procedure is simple and painless. All the bridegroom has to know is where the wedding is to take place, the time of day, and what the bride will wear. Sketched are four outfits, all officially sponsored by masculine experts. Descriptions, reasons, and suggestions were all checked and rechecked for accuracy.

Upper left: For a church wedding, at night—the most formal and dress parade occasion—here are the accepted and official selections, the clothes that Chicago shops and stores are showing and wedding wardrobes that Chicago men are wearing. Dress suit of black or midnight blue, with silk or satin facings on lapels. A vest in single or double breasted style made of white piqué, the shirt a starched bosom number of all white linen or piqué with one or two studs. Wing collar. A bow of white figured piqué. Silk or opera hat. White kid or buckskin gloves. Patent leather, calfskin, plain oxfords or pumps. Jewelry, white pearl links and waistcoat buttons, pocket watch with chain of white gold or platinum flat links. Silk dress suspenders.

Upper right: For the afternoon wedding still formal. Cutaway coat of black or Oxford gray, made with plain or braided edges, peaked or notched lapels. Waistcoat matching the material of the coat or of gray cloth (single or double breasted). Trousers of gray or black striped worsted or fine cheviot. Also accepted, small check pattern in black and white. Overcoat blue or black single or double breasted. White shirt with plain or plaited bosom. Collar, white wing or turndown (with negligee bosom shirt turndown collar only). Tie, Ascot or four-in-hand. The Ascot is preferably a blue gray color, the four-in-hand one of black and white (stripes or figure or tiny shepherd's check). Hat, silk. In some smart weddings the men all wear (by previous arrangement) gray toppers similar to those worn in England at Ascot. Jewelry pearl stick pin. Shoes, black calf or patent leather with or without spats or shoes with cloth tops. In summer spats are of white or gray linen, the gray toppers worn match the gray spats. Gloves, fawn gray or white, chamois, buckskin or suede.

Lower left: For the summer wedding, garden variety, or living room of home. Informal all-white suit of hookloom or white tropical linen. Three-button double breasted for the younger man, single for the older. Less expensive suits are of fabric like gabardine. Hand finished edges and details; white pearl buttons. Shoes, white buck. Tie, pastel tints in stripe or plain silk. Shirt, white piqué or broadcloth.

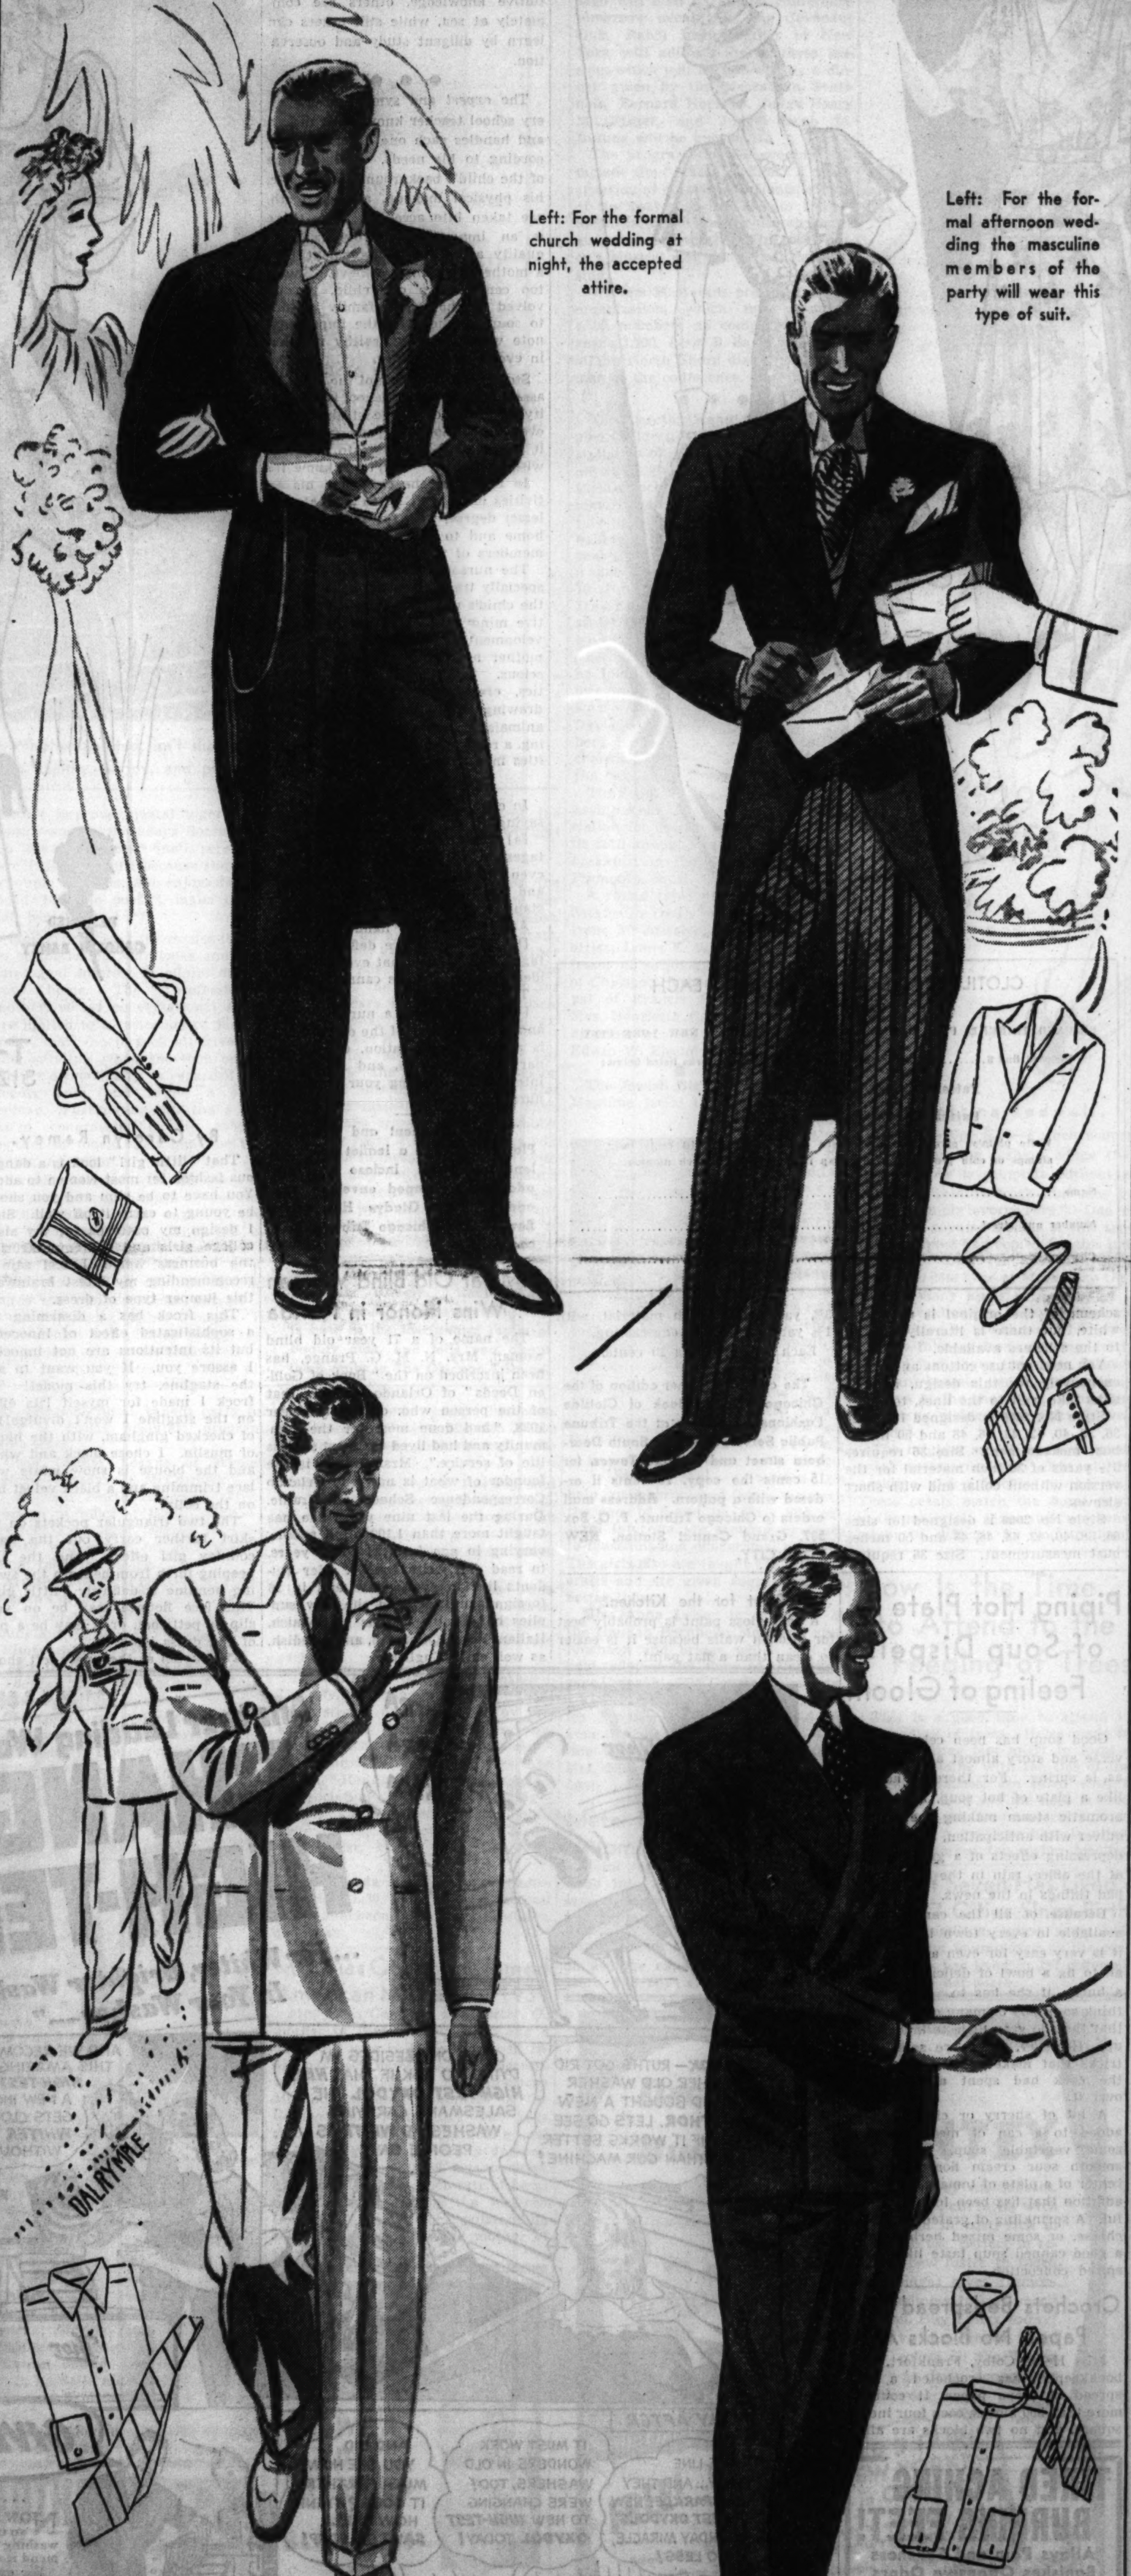
Lower right: Informal ceremony, when the bride wears a simple silk suit or afternoon costume. Suit, plain dark blue (alternate, a faint chalk line striped blue) in three button, double breasted Shetland worsted with peaked lapels, for the younger man. For the older man a two button single breasted model with notch lapels of flannel in Oxford gray or navy blue. Flaps on pocket worn in or out. Shirt, white with starched collar or pastel colored shirt with separate starched white collar. Shoes, plain black calf. Tie, almost any color, small patterned. Gloves, natural or yellow buckskin. Hat, derby, felt or straw, depending on season. White linen handkerchief in pocket and carnation in lapel.

All the men in the wedding party (best man and ushers) dress exactly like the bridegroom.

(Posed by Miriam Hopkins.)

Sophisticated summer hat for street and travel is made of popcorn white toyo straw and has a navy blue grosgrain ribbon bow and streamers at the back. A downward swoop to the front brim accents the unusually shallow crown.

Four Ideas in Wedding Attire Sponsored by Experts



Left: For the formal church wedding at night, the accepted attire.

Left: For the formal afternoon wedding the masculine members of the party will wear this type of suit.

The summer time garden ceremony calls for suits such as this one.

The well dressed man at an informal ceremony should choose tailored suits such as the one sketched.

Nursery Schools and Home Both Possess Values in Child Raising

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

(Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.)

The following comments are addressed to the parents who really love their child, who are eager to put him in a nursery school, and are, at the same time, quite conscientious about it. They are not primarily for the mother whose delight in her small son or daughter is so great that she wants him at home, and who makes his life there full, normal, active, and happy.

What I mean to say is that this article is not an argument to urge you to put your very little girl or boy in a nursery school. It is, rather, a discussion of the subject for the first group of parents.

Many parents who are fortunate enough to live near nursery schools write me: "What do you think of the nursery school for little children of 2 and under?" Or, "Do you advise me to join other mothers in forming a nursery school for our 2 year old children? What are its advantages and disadvantages?

"Don't you think such little children should be at home?

"Don't they particularly need to feel at this age the sense of security that home and love give them?"

A man experienced in the child research field (and a father) has gone on record as saying that for at least the first year and a half education should be confined to the home, for there is nothing the nursery school can offer that the home cannot duplicate. For eighteen months to two years education still should be confined to the home, in spite of the fact that now the child needs greater activity which might be better served by the equipment of the nursery school. And his reasons are that up to this age there is the need for personal attention to the child's still insecure habits and routines.

In other words, home, up to two years, provides an adequate setting for the child's needs, which, during this time represent the formation of proper habits, and the development of a sense of security based on love and understanding.

But what are the advantages and disadvantages of home and the nursery school for the 3 year old and the 4 year old? What decision should parents come to who have money and leisure for their children? Or those who live in moderate circumstances? Or those who both have to go to work?

Perhaps, instead of trying to answer these questions, it would be more helpful to doubtful parents if we listed here the various things the child at this age needs, and to what extent the home and the nursery school can supply these needs.

1. One of the essential conditions of a child's life is a sense of security and affection. The home is the ideal place for the child to get this sense of security and affection. The nursery school does not attempt to supply this, but rather, as one writer puts it, to "extend the child's sense of security in his own world." (The italics are mine.)

2. Companionship. The child needs the companionship of children of his own age. The nursery school answers this need, for children are grouped according to age, or should be, and they therefore are in the companionship of their peers.

3. Playthings. Children need furniture and fixtures scaled to their size, space to be rambunctious, "messy," and noisy in; and, most important of all, the proper toys and playthings. At this age this means: Sandboxes, toys that are simple and strong, tools to develop skill, and blocks and so forth to develop imagination, slides, swings, and other apparatus to develop sureness and daring. The average home can supply some of this, more than you realize unless the will is there, but not all, whereas the nursery school can supply it 100 per cent.

4. The proper handling and development of the child. Mothers vary in their knowledge of (Continued on Page 2.)

Spanking white gloves, as perennial summer accents for both pastel and dark colored wardrobes, boast unusual trim such as contrasting insets of lacy net. Briefly cut short at the wrists, the soft, dull sheen of the fabric copies the more luxurious and warmer doeskins.

English Queen Is Gaining as Style Arbiter

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

PARIS.—[Special.]—There's a struggle going on behind the scenes in English court society, with bitter factions divided on the issue of who is England's first lady of fashion. Queen Elizabeth has so spruced up in the matter of dress since she became the queen that her devoted adherents insist she has ousted the duchess of Kent as the best dressed lady, while the followers of the latter hotly deny any such thing.

The queen's faction cite the crinoline dress as a fashion that was launched by Queen Elizabeth, and has traveled around the world. "Not at all," cry the enemy. It was the duchess of Kent who wore the first crinolined evening frock, and that before there was a Queen Elizabeth. She started the style, they say, while Edward VIII. was still on the throne.

I asked the duchess of Kent's dressmaker, Molyneux, about this burning question, and he says that the duchess of Kent indubitably was the first to wear that type of style. He explains, however, that all this submerged war is entirely beneath the two subjects of the controversy. The queen herself graciously gives the title of "best dressed" to the duchess of Kent, as she herself has little or no ambition to be a style maker. There is no friction whatever between herself and her sister-in-law in the matter of dressing.

The duchess of Kent, according to the judgment of Paris, is still the first lady of fashion, and her new wardrobe will do nothing to reduce her rank.

She is introducing a new evening style this month and has abandoned altogether the crinolined dress that has caused the rumpus. Her first crinolined dress was purchased in February, 1936, a black lace model from Molyneux, with lilies of the valley for a corsage, and three years is long enough, in her opinion, to wear any style. This summer she will wear the super slim, high waisted Directoire fashion that Molyneux is stressing. It gets far, far away from the crinolined line which Queen Elizabeth still prefers and has chosen extensively for her American visit. The nearest approach to the full skirted dress that the duchess of Kent wears this season is the dress with a gathered skirt, and a low cut closely fitted bodice, but this type of dress she considers a second best choice, preferring the strikingly new slim line.

The Directoire evening dress selected by the duchess of Kent and made by Molyneux is of heavy ivory satin. The high waisted, low necked bodice, and the brief puffed sleeves of this model are covered with pearl embroidery in the pattern of flowers. A full length scarf of the ivory satin is worn with the dress.

Another of the duchess' evening gowns is made of very heavy brocade in pale pink and silver pattern. It has a heart shaped bodice, and a halter neckline, and the skirt is gathered on at the waistline.

For daytime she prefers a slender line silhouette with a high waistline. She has chosen a number of dresses and suits with plait skirts, but these skirts are stitched down to below the hipline, so they fall in a slim and not a flaring line.

One of these daytime suits is made of very soft yellow tweed with a vague plaid pattern. The skirt is knife plaited, and the plaits are crossed by horizontal lines of stitching from the waistline to the hips for a fitted line effect. The hip length jacket is closely fitted and has a very open, rounded neckline, flanked by revers that become stitched down epaulettes. There are two set-in pockets just below the waistline.

Another afternoon ensemble made for her has a slender navy blue dress, made of crêpe with a wide sash of blue faille set in at the waistline, to give a high effect, and tied in a huge bow. The bolero jacket is made of the blue faille, and the round neckline of the dress is banded with faille.

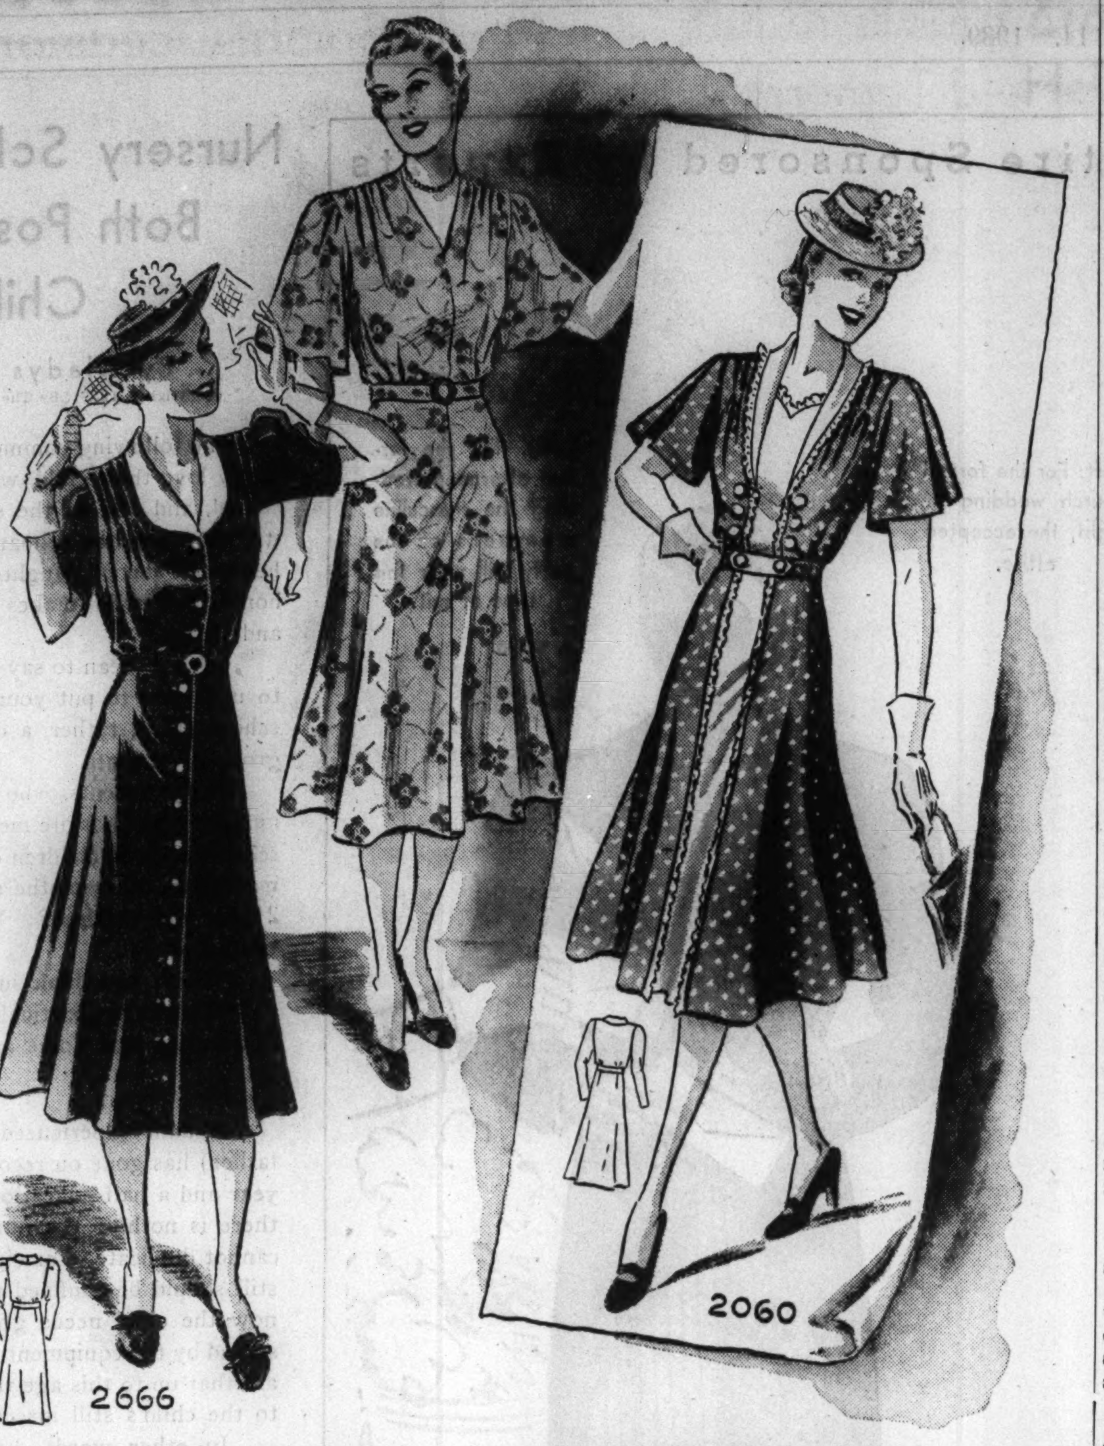
Patterns by Clotilde



By Clotilde.

Women with figure problems have discovered that often it is the better part of fashion wisdom to make their own clothes. Patterns such as those illustrated today were designed primarily for silhouettes that are difficult to clothe, and they are patterns that are easy to follow, too.

At the left, a simple daytime frock with V neckline, semi-tailored collar, simple puffed sleeves, softly shirred bodice, and flared skirt. Down the front, a row of buttons to match the collar. Dark plain materials make up especially successfully, and both silks and cottons are seasonal and smart. You may use the same pattern for the dress that is sketched in the center. Its V neckline is left untrimmed, and the sleeves are allowed to flow freely. The paneling is intact, but there are no buttons down the front, making this design slightly dressier than the other. Floral silks and cottons are the logical choices for this feminine frock.

There's a slenderizing panel down the front of the other pattern. The original of this model is created in coin dot cotton, with the panel and the tuxedo collar of piqué. Ruffling is used for the finish. The color scheme of the original is navy and white, but there is literally no end to the schemes available.

You need not use cottons and linens exclusively for this design, because silks take well to the lines, too.

Piping Hot Plate of Soup Dispels Feeling of Gloom

Good soup has been celebrated in verse and story almost as reverently as is spring. For there is nothing like a plate of hot soup, its wisp of aromatic steam making the nostrils quiver with anticipation, to dispel the depressing effects of a gruelling day at the office, rain in the streets, and bad tidings in the news.

Because of all the canned soups available in every town in the land, it is very easy for even a busy woman to fix a bowl of delicious soup in a hurry, if she has to. Some cooks think so highly of many canned soups that they do very little to fancy them up. However, there are some little tricks that make a soup taste as if the cook had spent all afternoon over it.

A bit of sherry or claret can be added to a can of meat-stock and some vegetable soup. A dab of smooth sour cream floating in the center of a plate of tomato soup is an addition that has been found successful. A sprinkling of grated Parmesan cheese, or some mixed herbs, makes a good canned soup taste like an inspired concoction.

Nursery School and Home Both Possess Value

handling children. Some have an intuitive knowledge, others are completely at sea, while still others can learn by diligent study and observation.

The expert and sympathetic nursery school teacher knows all children and handles each one differently, according to his needs. A knowledge of the child's background, family life, his physical makeup, and so forth, are taken into account. Also, there is an impersonal or dispassionate quality about her management that a mother can rarely achieve. She is too centered on one child, too involved in the whole family picture to sound, sometimes, the impersonal note which has its healthy reaction in evenness of temper.

Stoddard says: "One of the greatest assets of the nursery school is a serenity and lack of undue strain which, even with knowledge and good will, it is not always possible to maintain with the home." Don't we know it?

In the home the child and his activities have to fit in, to a greater or lesser degree, with the routine of the home and to the demands of other members of the family.

The nursery school, because of its specially trained teachers, can supply the child's naturally thirsty and creative mind with opportunities for development of which the untrained mother may not be sufficiently conscious. Spontaneous simple dramatics, oral expression, music, color, drawing, the study of nature and animals, all are creative and enriching, a realization of the potential qualities in a child.

In conclusion we might sum up by saying:

[a] That there are definite advantages in the fine nursery school that even the most ideal home conditions and the most intelligent and understanding parents cannot supply.

And on the other hand:

[b] That there are definite advantages in the home that even the most ideal nursery schools cannot supply.

Therefore:

[c] A half-day at a nursery school and the remainder of the day at home is an ideal combination, under ordinary circumstances, and if you are interested in placing your child in a nursery school.

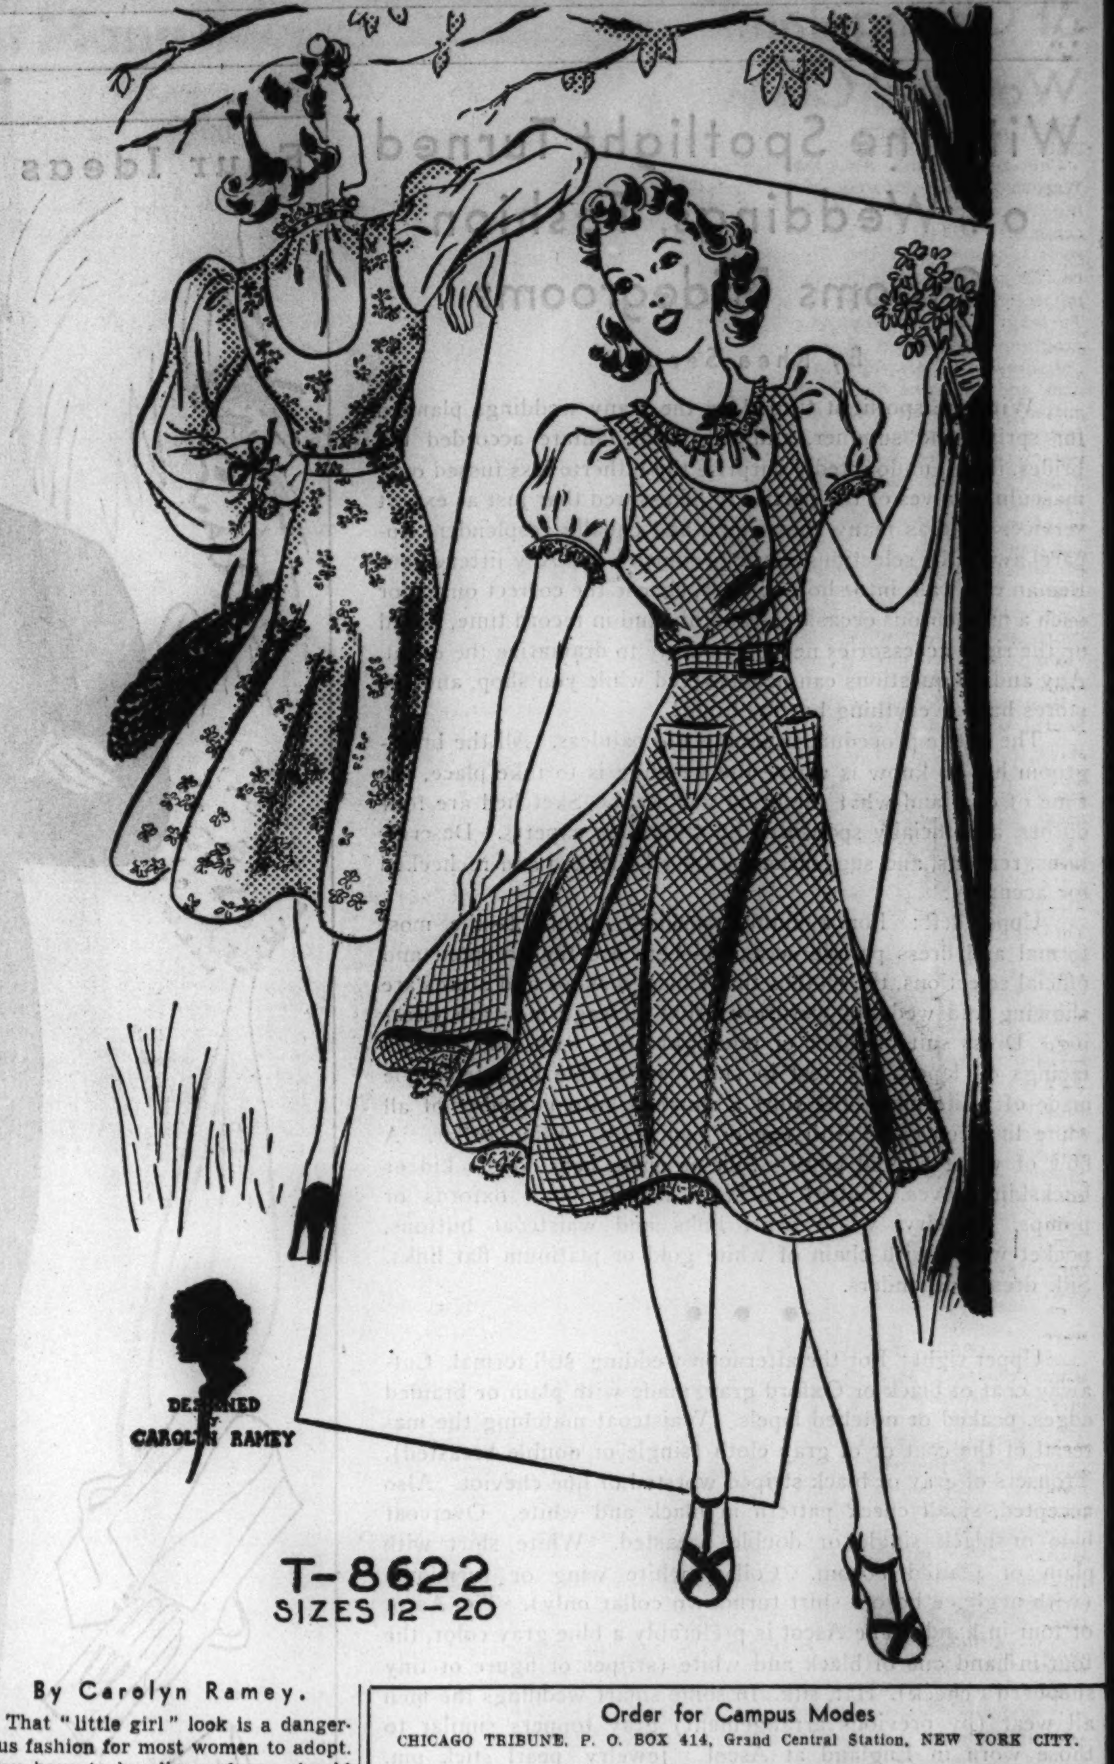
Campus Modes by a Co-ed



T-8622
SIZES 12-20

By Carolyn Ramey.

That "little girl" look is a dangerous fashion for most women to adopt. You have to be slim and you should be young to carry it off well. Since I design my patterns for my sister college girls and contemporaries in the business world, I feel safe in recommending my latest brainwave, this jumper type of dress.

This frock has a disarming air, a sophisticated effect of innocence, but its intentions are not innocent, I assure you. If you want to slay the stagline, try this model! The frock I made for myself [its effect on the stagline I won't divulge!] is of checked gingham, with the blouse of muslin. I chose black and white, and the blouse is snow white with lace trimming and a black velvet bow on the collar.

The two triangular pockets on the skirt further carry out the naïve country girl effect. And the lace peeping forth from beneath the swirling hemline is definitly "little girl." This lace flounce may be on your slip or petticoat, or it may be a part of the dress itself.

The sketch at the upper left shows a different version. It gives the sheer blouse long sleeves and a collarless neckline edged with lace or ruffling.

Cottons are the very best choices for this frock, and you can wear them right now, even if the calendar does read "spring." In the fashion world it already is summer. And gingham has been "in" for a month or so.

Style No. T-8622 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20.

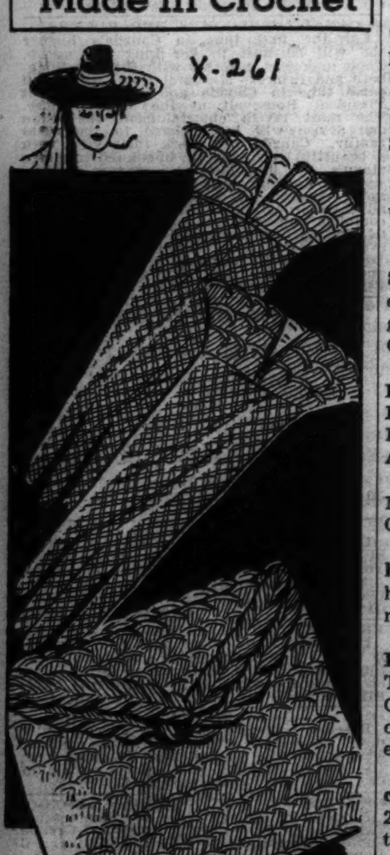
Accessories for Your Ensembles Made in Crochet



By Ellen Bruce.

Crocheted purses and gloves still are among the popular style items which complete every ensemble. These gloves, crocheted in a shell stitch, have a narrow cuff of the same design. The purse, also worked in a shell pattern, is finished with an attractive braided handle. A belt of the shell design may be made to finish the group. Crochet cotton, carpet warp, or any of the plain or nubby knitting wools may be used.

For instructions in crocheting the purse and gloves in shell stitch, No. X-261, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Through the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

Far cry from the mother Whistler painted, isn't she? But Billie Burke is typical of the modern mother, who is healthy, happy, and physically and mentally youthful.

We are not one to break out in mawkish mood over Mother's day. We leave that to people with different tastes and temperament. But we do think the modern mother who looks young, feels young and "thinks young" deserves a great big hand.

You see it every day. There was the mother of two children we watched this winter on the day of a big blizzard. She's forty, probably, but by eleven in the morning, when her housework was done—and well done—she was out in a snow suit, having all the fun in the world. And she had the kind of a figure that could make a snow suit seem a smart, sensible choice. You see mothers of grown children playing golf almost any day on any course you happen to strike. You see mothers riding horseback, bicycling, swimming.

It's all done, not from any desperate effort to keep girlish, but from sane efforts to keep healthy. Keeping suitably, attractively youthful is the inevitable aftermath of such pursuits. And you can't tell us that attaining and maintaining physical vigor doesn't improve mental vigor. The smart woman nowadays doesn't coil up like a contented snail, serene in her little shell, just because she's had a couple of babies. She enjoys motherhood, but she doesn't make it her sole career.

Motherhood isn't the excuse it used to be for losing your looks and your intelligent interest in affairs outside your home. The "professional" mother, whose conversational sallies are limited to a recitation of junior's menu, and who forsook all frivolities and activities when she took on the mantle of maternity, is regarded as a deadly bore, and rather a dumb woman. Fortunately, and that's why we're congratulating the modern mother of today, she's now the vanishing American.

Frank children will tell you, unless perhaps you happen to be their mother, that mothers ought to have and hold good looks. They tell us. They're proud of the mother who is pretty and spry and fun.

Not that they, or any one else, admires the mother whose pursuit of youth excludes all other thought. To their honest and pitiless young eyes the woman who makes frantic efforts to be young is grotesque. They dislike the comic strip effect of the mature woman who is downright silly.

The best beauty routine for the woman who preserves her figure, her face, and her outlook on life is based, above all, on a sane health program. She watches her diet. She is neither too thin nor too plump. And she doesn't let the rocking chair get her as the years advance. Her muscle tone is what it should be, and exercise makes it so!

Face lifts and such interest her not at all. She gives her complexion and hair intelligent care; she uses flattering makeup and, while she's not clothes crazy, she does acquire with the years a definite clothes wisdom. Cleanliness is a passion with her. She may not have classic beauty, but she doesn't care. She's well groomed, well dressed, healthy, and happy. And her child is proud to the point of bursting when he says: "This is my mother!"

Eleanor Nangle, "through her looking glass," sees everything that is new in the fascinating realm of beauty aids, and tells you about them daily in The Chicago Tribune.

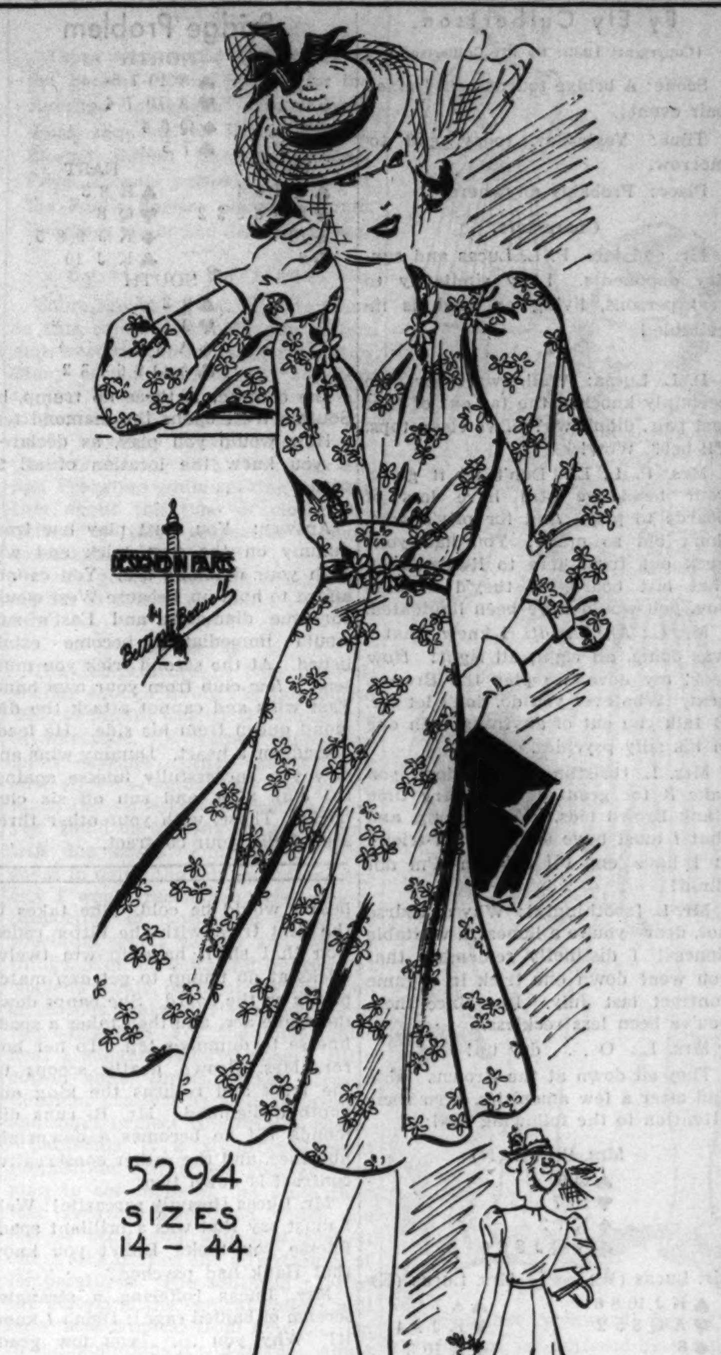
Paris Frock Is Charming for Many Social Occasions



By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—French women are proving the fashion adage that no wardrobe is complete without at least one printed frock that may be worn "simply everywhere." One of the most popular models of this type is one I have had copied for this pattern, No. 5294. It has interesting lines, and the type of streamline that flatters many kinds of figures.

The neckline is a softly draped one that is kind to the throat. The bodice derives fullness from shirring deftly created just above the waist. Sleeves that are bracelet length originate in fullness at the shoulders. While the hipline is molded, the skirt is well flared.

The original model employs flower petal accessories, two clips at the neckline and a buckle on the belt. These petals match the floral print in the material. Since such a scheme might be difficult for you to duplicate, because most of us have not the access to matching accessories as the couturiers do, you might have the clips and buckle in harmony, but not necessarily the same in motif as the print.

Washable silks probably are the best bet at this time of year. By all means select a color scheme that is cool looking.

Style No. 5294 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20, and 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measurement.

Address orders to Chicago Tribune Paris Patterns, 119 West 19th street, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred — wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be certain to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

Now Is the Time to Attend to the Feeding of Trees

This is a good time to attend to the feeding of trees. Holes made in the soil, three feet apart to form a circle coinciding with the tips of the longest branches, are filled with a good plant food and the hose is used to dissolve the food and carry it to the roots. A fertilizer high in nitrogen is preferred for spring feeding.

Are You a Wife Who Frets if Mate Is Silent?

Every day there is presented, in the feature columns of The Chicago Tribune, a stimulating article by Miss Blake, who lends friendly counsel on a wide variety of common problems.

By Doris Blake.

[Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

You wouldn't happen to be one of those wives who frets and pines because hubby doesn't tell her frequently and often that he loves her; that she is the most marvelous, the most wonderful, the most beautiful on earth?

If you're one of those healthy, wholesome companions who would be moved to hilarious laughter at the thought of your man repeating daily the oft told tale of his love as done during the courtship era, you can skip this advice about to be presented. Your good sense and good humor will save you. You're adult enough now to know that a man has his own ways of expressing his heartfelt devotion.

However, there are countless women who do fret and pine and work themselves into a dither because the man to whom they're married appears to be too casual in his acceptance of the little wonder luck brought them as marriage partners. If you belong to this group the words of Mana-Zucca, famed composer and wise observer on the ways of her sex, may interest you.

Mana-Zucca dwells for a moment on the words of one of her famous songs: "You never told your love for me, yet I am wise, for in your eyes I read the story of love's plea."

That, she points out, is often the way with a man, and not all women will concede man's right to tell his love in his own way.

There are other ways, much better ways, in fact, Mana-Zucca contends, by which to express affection than by the spoken word. There are deeds. There are actions. Perhaps even acceptance of the "lady" with all her faults.

"One of the unnecessary causes of discord in many an otherwise happy home," our popular composer remarks, "is the wife's failure to realize that men show their affection in less outward ways than women do." The vivacious, blonde composer has herself been married happily to her publisher, Irwin Cassel, for fifteen years.

The sort of woman who can make unhappiness out of her own imaginings is a good deal of an infant in her reasoning. She certainly is not grown up, Mana-Zucca contends. Why should a woman be unhappy unless she is showered with continuous declarations of love when the man's daily deeds and actions plainly prove that he wants above everything else to make her comfortable and happy? The husband looks upon repeated implorings of the sort as just an unpleasant form of nagging. He can't understand why his wife won't see that he is doing all in his power. Besides, some males have a natural aversion to wearing their hearts on their sleeves, so to speak.

"In real devotion," Mana-Zucca repeats, "actions speak louder than words. The thousand and one little kindnesses of everyday life, thoughtfulness, consideration—these are the eloquent messages of love. They are more eloquent in substance, really, than the most glowing phrases a poet may fashion, more dependable barometer of affection than ardent caresses."

Marriage can't be a perpetual honeymoon, we're reminded.

"A wife," says our authority, "can be pretty certain of the kind of husband who is willing to offer a hand with the dishes on maid's night out, or who uncomplainingly sits through an evening of bridge because she likes it though he'd rather be somewhere else, or a man who sends her off on a vacation when she needs a rest without a whimper over his own impending loneliness."

Such attentions outweigh, in our authority's judgment, whisperings of sweet nothings into the little woman's ear.

The time to be concerned is not when your husband leaves in the morning without kissing you good-by, or when he forgets flowers on your anniversary, or when he fails to comment on your new outfit, but when he grows out of the habit of insisting that you leave your household duties on a spring Sunday to go on some nice little outing, a drive through the blossoming countryside, say. When he insists upon smoking that cigar that makes you feel ill or when he shows signs that he'd rather slip away nights for a game with the boys than take you anywhere, then 'tis time to worry about whether love is slipping out of your grasp.

"Besides," adds Mana-Zucca, "a woman who is attractive doesn't need to be told so continually. It's the woman whose charms are fading who requires the constant bolstering. It's a confession that she's not very sure of herself that inspires repeated flattery. Too, there's a doubt inspired often by the verbal mouthings of the man given to sugary terms of endearment.

"Every really happy marriage," concludes our adviser, "is living proof of the wise old proverb, 'True love is silent, perfidy has a million tongues.'"

Contract According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1939: By Ely Culbertson.]

Scene: A bridge tournament [mixed pair event].

Time: Yesterday, today, and tomorrow.

Place: Probably anywhere.

Characters.

Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Lucas and sundry opponents. [Any similarity to real persons, living or dead, is inevitable.]

P. L. Lucas: Well, sweetheart, we certainly knocked the tar out of that last pair, didn't we? Two clean tops, I'll bet! Wow!

Mrs. P. L. L.: Don't let it go to your head—we still have lots of boards to play. And for pity's sake, don't bid so much! You had your neck out from here to Rumania on that last board. If they'd doubled you, you would have been liquidated.

Mr. L.: Ah! . . . if! I knew what I was doing, all right, all right! Now look, my dove, we play the Browns next. Whatever you do, don't let Mr. B. talk you out of anything with one of his silly psychics.

Mrs. L. [bristling]: And don't you take it for granted that every time Hank Brown bids, he's psyching, and that I must have eight or ten tricks. If I have 'em, I'll bid 'em—I'm not timid!

Mr. L. [soothingly]: Why of course not, dear—you're a lioness, a veritable lioness! I distinctly remember that you went down one trick in a game contract last July. But since then, you've been less reckless.

Mrs. L.: O . . . dry up!

They sit down at the Browns' table and after a few amenities, turn their attention to the following deal:

Mrs. Brown (N)
♠ Q 9
♥ 10 7
♦ K 7 2
♣ K Q J 8 6 4

Mr. Lucas (W)	Mrs. Lucas (E)
♠ K J 10 8 6	♠ A 7

♣ 7 3	♣ A 10 5 2

Mr. Brown (S)
♠ 5 4 3 2
♦ Q J 9 8 5 4

The bidding [neither side vulnerable]:

South	West	North	East
Mr. B.	Mr. L.	Mrs. B.	Mrs. L.
1 heart!	1 spade	2 clubs	2 no trp.
Pass	3 spades	Pass	3 no trp.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Mr. Brown, South, breathes a sigh of relief that his opening psychic did not land him in the soup, and selects the diamond queen as his opening lead. Mrs. Lucas, the declarer, after seeing the dummy, gives her lord and master a vitriolic glare—it is immediately apparent that at least six hearts would be cold. She takes in the first trick with the bitter reflection that she'll have to win twelve tricks at no trump to get any match points on the board. She bangs down the spade ace, and then takes a spade finesse to dummy's ten. To her horror, Mrs. Brown neatly scoops up the trick and returns the king and another diamond. Mr. B. runs diamonds till he becomes a downright nuisance, and the rather conservative contract is down two.

Mr. Lucas [heavily sarcastic]: Well, I must say that was a brilliant spade finesse you took! Didn't you know that Hank had psyched?

Mrs. Lucas [offering a strangled scream of baffled rage]: Didn't I know it! Why you . . . you low grade moron! It couldn't have occurred to you, I suppose, to bid hearts, after I mentioned no trump a couple of times! And you had the gall to warn me about not letting Hank Brown psyche me out of anything! Hah! hah! You probably haven't discovered even yet that six hearts was ice cold!

Mr. L. [with great dignity]: It was you who asked me not to bid so much, if you recall, and begged me, implored me, not to suspect that Hank Brown would psyche.

Mrs. L. [sneeringly]: A slight misquotation, but let it go, you big sissy—hiding behind your wife's skirts! And anyway, since when have you ever done what I asked?

Mr. Brown: Aw, come on, folks! What's one board among friends?

Mr. and Mrs. L. [simultaneously and vociferously]: You keep out of this!

In deep silence, the next board is put into play:

Mrs. Brown (N)
♠ A K J 7 2
♥ K 8
♦ K Q 10 7 2

Mr. Lucas (W)	Mrs. Lucas (E)
♠ —	♠ Q 9 8 5
♥ Q 9 3 2	♥ A 7 5
♦ 9 6 4 3	♦ 8
♣ Q 10 9 7 4	♣ A K J 6 3

Mr. Brown (S)
♠ 10 6 4 3
♥ J 10 6 4
♦ A J 5

Smarting from their ignominious defeat on the first board, Mr. and Mrs. Lucas let their bidding run riot on this one, as follows:

North-South vulnerable.

East	South	West	North
Mrs. L.	Mr. B.	Mr. L.	Mrs. B.
1 club	Pass	1 spade!	2 diam.
3 spades	Pass	4 clubs	Pass!
4 diam.	Double	Pass	Pass
4 hearts	Double	Pass	Pass
4 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass!

The moment Mrs. L. opened with a club, her brilliant spouse decided that the vulnerable opponents must have a game in spades, hence his reckless effort to keep them out of it by bidding the suit himself. From that point on the bidding rapidly got away from him. Mrs. Brown, spotting the psychic, merely gave her opponents plenty of rope and finally, as was to be expected, they hanged themselves. Mrs. Brown shrewdly decided that there was no game in the hand for herself and knew that she could defeat four spades, undoubled, more points than five clubs [the obvious rescue], doubled. She was right! Mr. Lucas, the declarer, took three tricks on his contract for ten, and the 350 points earned by the Browns gave them another absolute "top."

For a moment there was an oppressive silence, then . . .

Mrs. Lucas: I'm through! This is the end! You can get some other punching bag to finish this tournament with you! Why, I'd rather play with Dracula!

Mr. L.: Now, baby . . .

Mrs. L.: Don't you baby me, you monster! How dare you psyche in spades, of all suits, without one in your hand! And tell me, what was the brilliant logic behind that pass of yours to my four spade bid? Did you think I had eight or nine solid spades?

Mr. L. [feebly]: I thought Mrs. Brown would double and then I would run to five clubs.

Mrs. L.: You thought—you braggart! You'd have a hard time proving that you're able to think! Well, let me tell you one thing. If I ever catch you playing bridge for money I'm going to have you declared incompetent and put away in a safe place!

An article by Mr. Culbertson appears in the feature section of The Tribune each weekday.

How would you play, as declarer, if you knew the location of all 52 cards?

Answer: You must play low from dummy on the first trick and win with your diamond ace. You cannot afford to hold up, because West would continue diamonds and East's suit would immediately become established. At the second trick you must lead a low club from your own hand. East wins and cannot attack the diamond queen from his side. He leads a spade or a heart. Dummy wins and now you successfully finesse against the club king, and run off six club tricks. These, with your other three aces, fulfill your contract.

Switch Panels Beautified by Clever Device

Smart housewives will hide their lights under a bushel this year, particularly if the "bushel" is an attractive decoration for the walls of their homes.

That's the word from the Merchandise Mart, where decorative switch panels were recently introduced to replace the old style rectangular plate which was often a blemish in an otherwise beautiful decorative scheme. The new switch panels, hand made in a little forge in Illinois, are cut out of iron to fit any type of outlet, including service outlets. The silhouettes, on basis which are placed over the old switch, are carefully executed in minute detail to enhance any room setting, including such ideas as a hobby horse, lasso artist, bucking bronco, or barefoot boy for a little boy's room; a kitchen range, a coffee pot, or tulips for the kitchen.

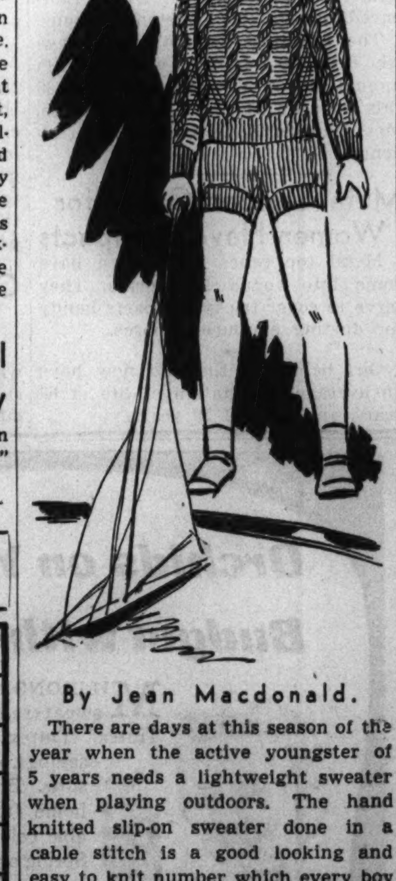
Simple Sweater Is Created for Five Year Old



By Jean Macdonald.

There are days at this season of the year when the active youngster of 5 years needs a lightweight sweater when playing outdoors. The hand knitted slip-on sweater done in a cable stitch is a good looking and easy to knit number which every boy will enjoy wearing. The original model was knitted in one color, but contrasts may be achieved by using a lighter shade for the ribbing at the bottom, neck, and wrists.

For instructions in knitting the sweater for the 5 year old boy, No. X-262, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

[Answer on page five.]

Bread of Salt Rising Type Is Hard to Make

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Salt-rising bread isn't made a great deal any more, except by persons in whose families it has been a favored food for many years. It is much different from yeast bread. The leavening agent is a gas producing bacillus which may be present in flour, cornmeal, or in the air. The texture is heavy, the crumb is moist, and the flavor is somewhat cheesy.

Addicts to this bread consider it perfectly delicious. There is a disagreeable odor while the dough is undergoing fermentation, but this disappears during baking.

Chance is an important element in making salt-rising bread. We can be pretty certain about yeast breads, for we know the fermentative action of yeast, but we can only hope and guess that the bacteria which produce gas for unyeasted bread are present and will do their work.

Experimenters have found that hot, dry weather usually is favorable to these bacteria. After heavy rains success has been rare.

Salt-rising bread is made from a "starter." The organism is coddled along in a liquid medium until it starts its gas formation. Then the dough is made.

SALT-RISING BREAD
[One loaf]

1 cup milk
2 tablespoons white cornmeal
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
1 tablespoon butter or lard
Flour for a stiff dough

Bring milk to the boiling point and cool to lukewarm. Add cornmeal, salt, and sugar. [Some cooks omit the sugar at this time, adding it with the flour. They think sugar detrimental to the growth of the organism. This point has been disputed.] Place this mixture in a tall pitcher or fruit jar and surround by water at 120 degrees, which is hot to the hand. This is a higher temperature than that used for yeast breads, it will be noted. Allow to stand for about seven hours or until it shows signs of fermentation. Gas may be heard as it escapes at this point. If the ferment can be kept warm it may be allowed to rise overnight. Add melted butter or lard and one cup of flour. Beat thoroughly and let ferment again, surrounded by water at 120 degrees. When very light, gradually add more flour until the dough is soft but doesn't stick. Knead for about ten minutes. Experiments have shown that about 100 kneading strokes, on the average, produce the best bread, but this depends somewhat upon the vigor with which kneading is done. Place in a greased pan and allow to rise until about two and a half times its original bulk. Bake as you would yeast bread, in a hot oven, 400 degrees, for about an hour.

Do not expect the loaf to look like yeast bread. It probably will not rise above the top of a standard size bread pan. It will be heavy and solid. That is its nature.

As I have implied, salt-rising bread is temperamental, and no directions, however explicit or complete, can assure perfect results, even when followed to the letter. You may get fine, prize taking results, and again you may meet only with disappointment. Many cooks think that one success is worth several failures, however, and follow the "if at first you don't succeed" policy with their breadmaking.

A warm temperature and freedom from draughts are important factors in fermentation. Some cooks cloth-wrap the jar containing the ferment and, instead of setting it in hot water, place it in a warmish oven or near a radiator to rise.

If fermentation takes place too slowly the bread may sour. The cook must be attentive if she hopes for success.

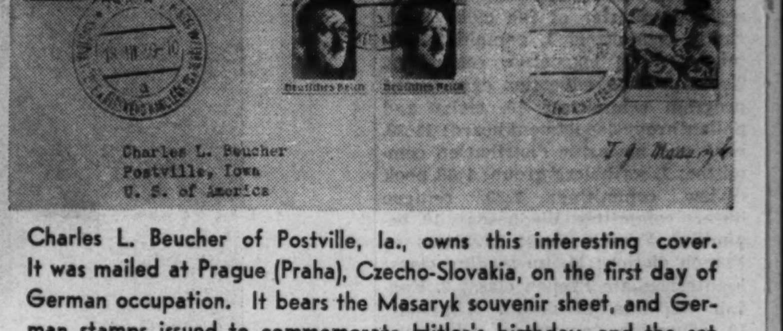
English Women's Units to Free Men for Defense

Women's units are being formed in England to free men for defense duties. The admiralty plans to form a women's naval service to take over many naval jobs on shore so trained men may be released for new warships which are going into service at the rate of more than one a week. Members will be responsible for radio operating, decoding, drawing of maps and blueprints, naval accountancy, the making of anti-submarine nets, truck driving, and other duties. The ministry of agriculture will recruit immediately a women's land "army" to replace male farm workers and provide additional labor to increase home food production in case of war.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning values. Do not ask where stamps may be sold, as the Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.



Charles L. Beucher of Postville, Ia., owns this interesting cover. It was mailed at Prague (Praha), Czecho-Slovakia, on the first day of German occupation. It bears the Masaryk souvenir sheet, and German stamps issued to commemorate Hitler's birthday, and the set commemorating the fifth year of Nazi rule in Germany.

The inauguration of trans-Atlantic airmail service on the southern route next Saturday has been announced by postal authorities and collectors who desire first trip covers must act at once.

The east bound postage rate to any point en route or in Europe is 30 cents for each half ounce and arrangements have been made for the return, by ordinary mail to this country, of covers addressed to points in the United States. Covers for the eastbound flight, with a remittance to pay for stamps to be affixed, should be sent at once to the postmaster at New York, with instructions to hold for the first trans-Atlantic flight.

Point to point postage rates for the foreign sections of the route are as follows: Horta, Azores Islands, to Lisbon, Portugal, 2.15 escudos; Horta to Marseilles, France, 3.50 escudos; Horta to New York, 7.75 escudos; Lisbon to Marseilles, 3.50 escudos; Lisbon to Horta, 2.15 escudos; Lisbon to New York, 7.75 escudos; Marseilles to Lisbon, 3 francs; Marseilles to Horta, 6.25 francs, and Marseilles to New York, 12.25 francs. The foreign rates are quoted per 10 grams [about 1-3 ounce] except the rate between Marseilles and Lisbon which is for 20 grams.

Collectors cannot send covers by steamship to Horta, Azores Islands, in time to be put abroad the plane. However, covers may be sent to Lisbon and Marseilles if they reach New York in time to connect with the S.S. Washington sailing May 17. Address packets of covers to Postmaster, Lisbon, Portugal, with American Express checks or bank drafts payable to "Receveur Postes Lisbon" and to Postmaster, Marseilles, with similar remittances payable to "Receveur Principal Postes Marseilles." Mark each cover to show service desired, as "Lisbon to New York," "Marseilles to Lisbon," etc.

In view of the difficulties involved due to shortness of time, Pan American Airways, Inc., 135 East 42d street, New York, will handle addressed covers, purchase and attach the necessary Portuguese and French stamps and mail at the proper foreign office for a nominal charge in addition to postage.

The total charges between points are as follows: Horta to Lisbon, 25 cents; Horta to Marseilles, 30 cents; Horta to New York, 47 cents; Lisbon to Marseilles, 30 cents; Lisbon to New York, 47 cents; Lisbon to Horta, 25 cents; Marseilles to Lisbon, 23 cents; Marseilles to Horta, 31 cents, and Marseilles to New York, 47 cents. Covers must be accompanied by money orders or cash and must reach the New York office of Pan American Airways, Inc., by May 16.

A special 30 cent airmail stamp has been authorized for the inauguration of the new service and should be available at New York City, although definite information to this effect has not been made public.

Stamp Notes.

The postoffice department has released figures indicating the total quantity issued of certain stamps which are no longer available at the philatelic agency. The stamps and quantities are as follows: Texas Centennial, 124,324,500; Virginia Dare commemorative, 25,040,400; Ordinance of 1787 commemorative, 84,825,250; 1c Army, 105,196,150; 1c Navy, 104,773,450; 2c Army, 93,848,500; 2c Navy, 92,054,550; 4c Army, 35,794,150; 4c Navy, 34,552,950; 5c Army, 36,839,250, and 5c Navy, 36,819,050.

The Army and Navy figures will be a surprise to many collectors for it has been the general impression that the Navy set enjoyed more popularity than the Army stamps. It may have been a purely local condition that gave a preponderance of Navy stamps on mail examined.

The March, 1939, list of plate numbers assigned many plates of various values to the new electric-eye series. Apparently the electric-eye perforating machine does not react properly to all colors and the following electric-eye plates have been canceled and the numbers have been reassigned to ordinary curved 400-subject plates of the same denomination: 1½c, 22339 and 22340; 4c, 22341 and 22342; 4½c, 22342 and 22344; 5c, 22345 and 22346; 6c, 22347 and 22348; 8c, 22349 and 22350; 10c, 22351 and 22352, and 50c, 22353 and 22354.

It will be interesting to learn whether or not the original plates were destroyed, or simply altered for ordinary use. Such alterations would include the removal of the characteristic dashes, etc., which actuate the electric eye, and the relocation of the plate number if the plates are to follow the standard practice. Undoubtedly, traces of any alterations made can be detected by the experts of the Bureau Issues association.

Superfluous Hair Problem Through Ages

How to attain beautiful hands is told by Antoinette Donnelly, Tribune beauty editor, in her booklet, "Handmade Hand Beauty." Get a copy at either of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 S. Dearborn street or Tribune Tower. Price, 5 cents. Postpaid, 7 cents.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

[Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

Contrary to our belief that superfluous hair was a modern day source of humiliation and suffering, we find that it has perplexed and anguished women since the dawn of civilization, that it has been considered always one of the most unwelcome gifts that nature may bestow upon one of the fair sex.

Our informant is Dr. A. F. Niemoeller, who has made the most complete study of this subject we have found to date and whose information he incorporates in a book recently published, "Superfluous Hair and Its Removal, [Harvest House]. In nontechnical language, Dr. Niemoeller tells what the foremost physicians and dermatologists recommend. He describes all known methods of superfluous hair treatment, including the painless, harmless, and permanent ones.

To illustrate how misinformed are women of today who think they have been particularly plagued with disfiguring hair, our authority tells of the queen of Sheba. When the queen came to visit King Solomon, the story runs, she was ushered into his presence in the great hall. She mistook the floor of gleaming glass for water and daintily raised her robes well up in order to wade through it to the king, revealing to the amazed wise men her hairy legs. Before Solomon would marry her he had his sages and alchemists devise a method for removing this blemish.

Only during the self-conscious middle ages and in the later tightlipped Puritanical eras, when personal beauty and adornment were held to be vanity and the work of the devil, did superfluous hair present little of a problem, Dr. Niemoeller's research shows.

Considering the causes of superfluous hair, Niemoeller attaches most importance to improper functioning of the endocrine glands. Heredity he accuses of almost equal influence. Then there is the racial leaning, with Latin peoples more prone to have excess hair than others. Skin areas that have been exposed to accident or injury, it is noted, are more likely to grow hair than others. Irritation of the skin from any cause carries the chance of promoting hair growth, Niemoeller contends. And also that such conditions as a prolonged and severe attack of acne is likely to leave hair growing where none grew before.

"It is maintained by some physicians," he says, "that careless treatment of acne is the cause of much superfluous hair. Changes in and the passing from one phase to another of the sex life quite often bring about superfluous hair, supporting the theory that the glands strongly influence the excess growth.

"The increasingly scantier and flimsier clothing of women, with resultant greater exposure of the skin to the sun, wind, and elements, and irritations in general, probably accounts as much as anything else for their growing problem of superfluous hair."

Excessive sun bathing is looked at askance by our authority.

We cannot go into all Dr. Niemoeller's findings on superfluous hair removal, as he has done in his excellent handbook. We can report, however, that in his able judgment electrolysis is to date the best and safest method of permanent hair removal. Nor is it wholly foolproof. In the hands of an inexperienced or bungling operator, he warns, it can disfigure. Its disadvantage is that it is long, tedious, and costly when applied to a surface of any extent. Absolute antiseptic conditions of the skin of the patient and the needle and hands of the operators is imperative.

The use of X-rays for the removal of superfluous hair is vehemently decried. "At present," Niemoeller says, "no ethical and properly trained physician or X-ray technician would consent to employ X-rays for this purpose or give it any recommendation."

Of depilatories, now current in powder, cream, paste, and liquid form, Dr. Niemoeller pronounces them temporary methods of hair removal. The requirements of a good one are: that it removes hair efficiently; that it acts on the hair and not on the skin; that it is fairly free from bad odor and that it keeps without spoiling. Many depilatories may be utilized with reasonable safety, he says, but caution must ever be exercised. Dr. Niemoeller recommends that before using, a new depilatory had best be tested on a small, inconspicuous area of the arm or leg and left on a minute or two longer than the recommended time so that any untoward results may be noted before it is risked on more sensitive skin. He advises strongly against the use of sulphide depilatories being put on the face, especially near the vicinity of the eyes.

Contrary to widespread belief that shaving [which our authority appoints "one of the cheapest and best all round means of depilation"] increases the rate of hair growth coarsening it, or changing its color we are told that as far as scientific proof is concerned, it is all pure superstition. "Shaving can have no more effect in this direction than any other method of depilation, and less than some."

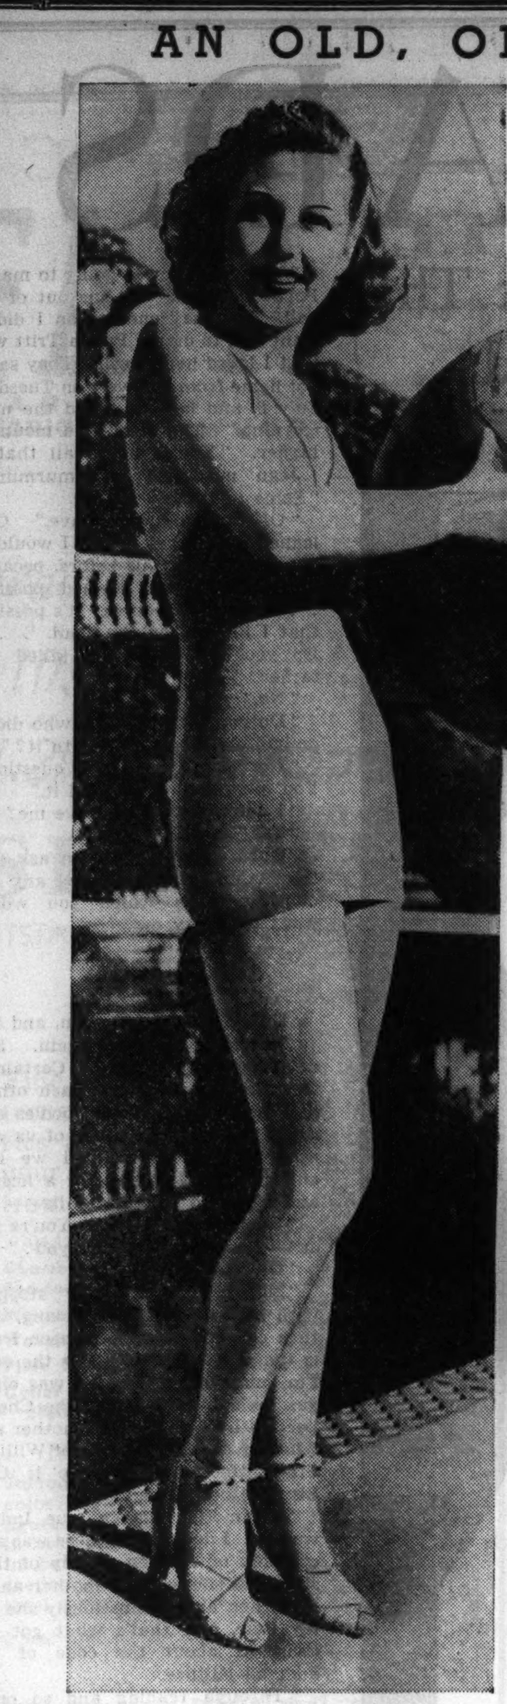
AN OLD, OLD PROBLEM OF BEAUTY



Left: It's fun to play and bask in the sun's rays, soaking up the warmth of Old Sol while garbed in scant attire. But the woman with a great deal of superfluous hair finds that brief sun suits are trying. Her problem is to keep this growth checked and, if she takes the advice of experts, she will not lie in the sun too long, since some authorities think excessive sunbathing stimulates the growth.

Below: The worst heartache of all is felt by the woman who has a growth of superfluous hair on her face. We've outlived the days when vanity could be called a sin, and you can't blame any one for wanting to have the beauty of Loretta Young. If you happen to be one of those unfortunate women who are determined to have the hair removed, do be sure of your method. Consult wisely and act cautiously.

Cabinet Opens to Reveal New Fold-Away Bed

How to furnish a home attractively at low cost is the subject of the helpful booklet, "Furnishing Your Home on a Modest Budget," by Edith Weigle, Tribune furniture stylist. Every bride-to-be, every housewife, should read this booklet. On sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower. Price, 3 cents. Postpaid, 5 cents.

By Edith Weigle.

In the not-so-old days it was a bit of a shock to see a bed emerge from a wardrobe, or fold up neatly against a wall. More recently its been an interesting slight of hand performance to watch a studio couch turn into twin beds. This season, however, there's an even more startling eye-opener. A bed appears out of a mahogany Chippendale cabinet!

And it's a bed that is equipped with a full innerspring mattress and that measures thirty inches in width. Its height from the floor is nineteen inches. When not in use this bed folds into a surprisingly small unit which is contained in the cabinet. You can keep the sheets and blanket tucked on the mattress, too, even when it is put away.

This clever invention is the design of a Chicago man and the bed is made here. It is intended for use in a one room apartment or in the living room of any small home where an extra place to sleep is occasionally needed. It can be placed in a hall, too, or in a dining alcove or a study.

For traditional rooms the Chippendale cabinet-bed is the one to use. But if you are fond of modern this same item is made in bleached mahogany and is sold with two supplementary side cabinets to form a small ensemble. The cabinet is simpler than the Chippendale one and is appropriate in any room done in the contemporary manner.

The cabinet measures thirty-three inches in height, thirty-nine in width, and twenty-one in depth. The wood used is five ply mahogany veneer.

The photographs today show the Chippendale model open and closed. You'd never guess from the exterior view of the cabinet that it contained a bed, would you? It looks like any handsome piece of living room or hall furniture. A Chippendale mirror in mahogany is hung above it.

The second picture shows the bed pulled out and made up for sleeping. Note that it is regulation size. The mattress rests on a spring frame.

The newest fold-away bed is surprising, indeed, as it is housed in a handsome mahogany cabinet of the Chippendale type. When pulled out and made ready for the night, this bed is equipped with an inner spring mattress.

Organizations specializing in the care and protection of crippled and handicapped children are doing excellent work in aiding such youngsters to train their particular abilities so that physical shortcomings will not necessarily make them dependent throughout life. Their talents are developed as far as possible, and thus a child who might otherwise be completely helpless, physically and financially, is enabled to prepare to earn his own living in later life.

Such an organization for crippled children recently sent the following request:

"Dear Miss Brown: We should like your interest and assistance in obtaining a piano, if possible, for a patient who has been under our care for several years. He has been hospitalized many times for treatment of a bone infection, and during his hospitalization we discovered that he had unusual vocal ability. Through the efforts of a committee, voice training was obtained, but the boy's progress is hampered because he has no piano for practice. Our efforts to obtain one for him have been unsuccessful, so we are seeking your help. We will arrange cartage if you can locate an instrument, and our patient would be made very happy.—Miss C."

The child in question is living on the extreme north side of the city.

A case worker is anxious to locate furniture for the S. family, which includes several small children. At the present time they are occupying several rooms of a large apartment, all very sparsely furnished. In the kitchen there are, in addition to the regular fixtures, a kitchen table and only three chairs. At meal time the children are seated on boxes and rickety backless benches. The agency will arrange transportation if chairs can be located.

A clergyman has made a request in behalf of a man who lives on the west side of the city. He has had both legs amputated and is badly in need of a wheel chair. The family is on relief and they are unable to purchase or rent such a chair. Transportation will be arranged if one can be located.

Mrs. P., on the northwest side of the city, presents her own plea for assistance. Her family is a large one, supported solely by her husband, who earns a very small salary.

Her letter says, in part: "His only suit, which was given to him as a discard two years ago, is a wreck. I have patched it four times and it just can't be worn any longer, but he has nothing. His overcoat is in the same condition, and he doesn't own a topcoat. Even though his salary isn't much, we always are afraid that he may lose his position because of his shabbiness. He works in an office, and his pay just about covers rent, food, gas, electricity, and carfare, and it doesn't always do that. We would be so grateful for a suit, size 40; a topcoat, 42."

This address is on the northwest side of the city.

Mr. and Mrs. C., on the south side, also are in need of furniture. They have one child, a 2 year old boy, but have had a difficult time financially this last year because the mother has had an extended and serious illness. During this time the family lived in furnished rooms. Mrs. C.'s health is now improved and they find they can live more economically in unfurnished quarters. They have bedroom furniture, but the living room is completely bare. Mr. C. is working, but his earnings permit only food and rent money.

Going to the Fairs? Here's What to Wear

Those who would like copies of the booklet, "Maid Service for the Average Household," should address requests to Helen Bartlett, Etiquet Editor, Chicago Tribune. Price, 7 cents postpaid; 5 cents at the Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower.

There are two great fairs to travel to this summer at both our eastern and western continental extremities. Many of you readers will be going to one or the other of them, and maybe to both. Letters from a few hardy travelers have mentioned their plans for seeing both New York and San Francisco while seeking information about the type of clothes required by their respective climatic conditions.

We're going into that today . . . clothes to take to the fair . . . either fair.

The temperature in New York is similar enough to ours in the central west to permit exactly the same type of wardrobe. Of course, simple tailored daytime clothes are the best choice for the actual traveling hours, much the same type of costume that you would be wearing for a shopping trip downtown. And for the time spent in doing the fair and seeing the city I would recommend the greater proportion of clothes to be of the spectator sports variety and tailored things. Knitted suits and lightweight woolens would be ideal for the cooler seasons, meaning right now and in the early fall. For the midsummer heat I suggest tailored sheers, little cotton suits, linens, jacket dresses. Consider comfort as well as fashion, and don't neglect comfortable shoes.

California is a slightly different proposition. If, when you go, you plan to see more of the state than just Treasure Island on which the fair is built you will find that it offers all varieties and all extremes of temperatures. The southern part of the state and the central valleys will be almost tropical from now on. Up in the mountains it will be cool. Along the coast in some sections fogs are common and frequent, especially during the first part of the summer. All of which means that if one's wardrobe is to be adequate for all sections of California it must include clothes that will be comfortable in both hot and cool temperatures.

The City of San Francisco itself is almost never hot. A suit of heavy silk or light weight wool is virtually a necessity. A variety of sweaters and crisp blouses will help to keep the costume new and fresh. You will find such a suit so comfortable you'll wear it every day in the city until it begins to feel like a uniform. Take a fairly warm coat with you, too. A good stout tweed coat is an excellent selection. Evenings on the Gay-Way are sure to be cool even at the height of summer, because the fair grounds are built on a charming little island in the middle of San Francisco bay and are a direct mark for the cooling ocean breezes that come in through the Golden Gate off the Pacific.

On the House

By Louise Bargelt

Small and useful air conditioning units are on the market which perform two functions in one. For example, one small utility stand does its bit toward cooling circulation of air in warm weather by housing a quiet, inexpensive air circulating fan at its base; another model serves to keep air moving in a room and yet affords a low, general utility table; still a third is a smoker stand in chrome and black finish tray top. Keeps the air moving by drawing it up from the floor and recirculating it upward and outward. All helps when the thermometer soars — and soars.

Home owners and builders are continually reaping the benefits of advanced wood technology. . . . Check on the advances made through modern drying of lumber which has had its moisture content reduced to a safe content. . . . Investigate the seasoned lumber available at the present time. This lumber fights the evils of expansion and contraction and its cost is little more than that of ordinary so-called "green" lumber.

Termites are more than a pest. They are a menace and can burrow into your house and literally eat the floor out from under you. They are hard to recognize, since if you glimpse them at a moment when they are one the wing, you can mistake them for flying ants. You can destroy these flying termites with an insect spray, poison the ground around your house with unburnable liquids, but once they have attacked a house, their point of entry must be found and their clay tunnels destroyed. This isn't easy. Hence, in new work or remodeling work, insist on some simple first aid precautions being taken against them.

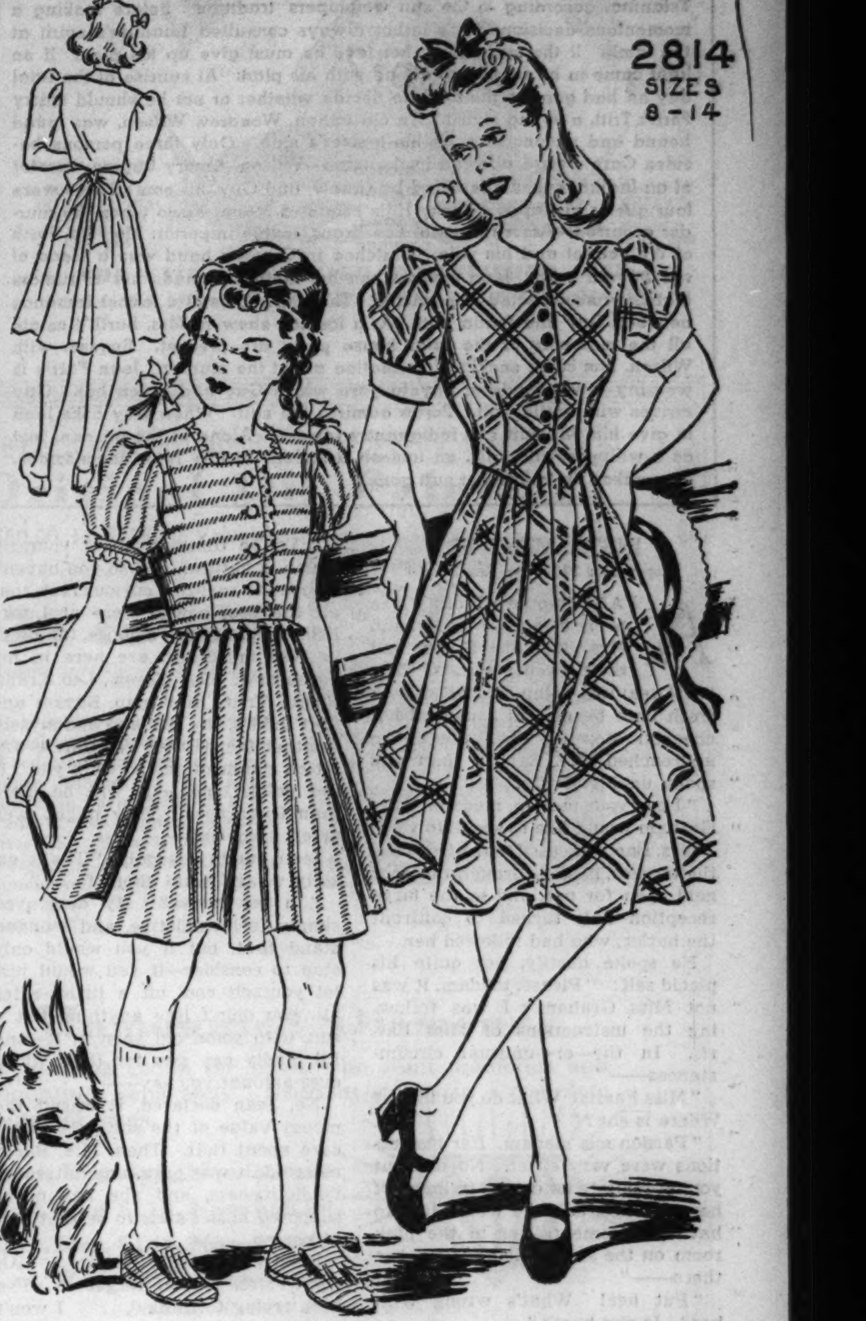
Clotilde Children's Patterns



The rather awkward figures of growing-ups are flattered by the lines of the basque dress. Such a frock lends an illusion of a rounded silhouette where, in reality, there are only angles. The pattern today suggests a basque dress in which your young daughter will look pretty all summer. It's an inexpensive model to make, because it is as lovely in economical cottons as it is in silks. It may be worn for school as well as for parties.

A striped material was used for the version at the left. Notice that horizontal stripes lend breadth to the bodice, while vertical stripes give grace to the shirred skirt. The neckline is square and the sleeves puffed, and both are trimmed with ruffled edging, more of which may be inserted under the seam that unites basque bodice and skirt, lending finish and a sort of peplum effect.

The other version, sketched at the right, is more tailored. It gives the dress a contrasting Peter Pan collar to match the cuffs on the sleeves. The basque bodice points downward into the shirred skirt in a Joan of Arc effect. Plaids are particularly effective for this design.

You may use plain, plaid, checked, striped, or floral materials, in silks, cottons, or linen.

Style No. 2814 is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12, and 14. Size 8 requires 2 yards of 39 inch material, with ⅜ yard of 35 inch contrasting for the version with collar. The pattern includes provision for both versions.

Address orders for Clotilde Children's fashions to Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Station, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred—wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be certain to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

Mrs. Barth Regards It as Unfortunate That She Invited Jean to Dinner, and the Girl Agrees

By Rex Stout

THE STORY TO DATE

● Jean Farris, owner of a successful fabric business, is in love with a half Indian, Guy Carew, whose American millionaire father had been murdered a month back in the tomb he had built for his Indian wife, Tsianina, according to the sun worshipers' tradition. Before making a momentous decision Guy's father always consulted Tsianina's spirit at the tomb. If the sun fell on her face he must give up his plan. If no light came in he should go ahead with his plan. At sunrise of the fatal day he had gone to the tomb to decide whether or not he should marry Portia Tritt, a young stylist. An old Indian, Woodrow Wilson, was found bound and unconscious by his master's side. Only three persons besides Carew were allowed in the tomb—Wilson, Amory Buysse, curator of an Indian museum founded by Carew, and Guy, his son. There were four guests at Carew's Lucky Hills estate at Mount Kisco when the murder occurred—Amory Buysse, Leo Kranz, textile importer; Melville Barth of Wall street and his wife. Clutched in Carew's hand was a piece of red bayeta yarn. Jean scoffs when her mother reminds her of rumors that Guy is suspected of parricide. There are tales of a former romance between Guy and Portia Tritt. At a fashion show at Mrs. Barth's estate all the members of the fatal house party are present. Buysse, with Wilson, has come seeking information about the murder. Jean Farris is wearing a suit made of bayeta yarn which Guy had given her. Guy arrives with Portia Tritt. Portia admires the suit. When Guy asks Jean to give him the suit she indignantly refuses. Alone in the garden, just as a whippoorwill calls, an unseen assailant knocks Jean unconscious. She wakes up to find her suit gone!

INSTALMENT III.

(Copyright: 1939: By Rex Stout.)

A FAIR amount of jollity was being displayed by Mr. and Mrs. Melville Barth and their twenty guests. The roast veal was being consumed, with fresh lima beans and a modest but cheerful Moselle, when the butler approached Mrs. Barth's chair and spoke unobtrusively:

"I beg your pardon, madam. Miss Graham would like to speak to you."

Mrs. Barth excused herself, crossed the terrace, passed through the door held open for her, and in the large reception hall turned to confront the butler, who had followed her.

He spoke hastily, not quite his placid self: "Please, madam, it was not Miss Graham. I was following the instructions of Miss Farris. In the—er—unusual circumstances——"

"Miss Farris! What do you mean? Where is she?"

"Pardon me, madam. Her instructions were very strict. No one but you, absolutely no one, is to know of her presence, and she would like to have you come to her in the pink room on the second floor. I put her there——"

"Put her! What's wrong with her? Is she hurt?"

"No, madam. That is, not——"

He was speaking to air; Mrs. Barth was on her way.

Upstairs, at the door of the pink room, Mrs. Barth entered without stopping to knock. The room was lit. In a chintz-covered chair by a window sat Jean Farris, bent forward, her brow resting on both her palms. As she slowly straightened up and slowly turned her head Mrs. Barth caught a glimpse of the garters and the bare legs. She hurried across.

"Good heavens, child, what's the matter? Where are your clothes?"

Jean said, with her head held rigid: "You asked exactly the right question. That's it."

"But what—where have you been? We couldn't imagine—we looked all over—your car was here—we decided you had gone off with some one——"

"A little after eight, about a quarter after," Jean said, "I went for a walk. In the grounds. I crossed a drive and some more lawn and went past the cutting garden and on across the meadow until I saw the fence of the estate. I lay down on the grass by some shrubbery and closed my eyes. After a while I sat up. Just as I sat up something hit me on the side of the head and knocked me out. Here"—she gingerly touched the side of her head above the left ear—"there's a bruise, and you can see the swelling. When I came to I was the way I am now. My clothes were gone."

"But——" Mrs. Barth gaped at her. "But what hit you?"

"How the dickens do I know? I didn't see any one or hear any one."

"But why should they take your clothes?"

"I don't know that either. They didn't take my watch or my ring, or my bag with money in it."

"But, my dear child——" Mrs. Barth got up and went to her and examined her head, peering at it, touching it with gentle fingers. "Knocked unconscious! You should have a doctor! How does it feel now?"

"Not very good. I don't want a doctor." Jean grimaced again, shut her lips tight, and then opened them. "I want to find out who it was. That's why I interrupted your dinner. I'd like you to notify the police and get them here before any of your guests leave."

Mrs. Barth was staring at her in horror. "You don't mean—the police!"

"I certainly do. I've been thinking it over, as well as I can think with this head. I want——"

"But, Miss Farris! It's impossible! Think of the publicity!"

"I don't give a damn about the publicity. I don't care how ridiculous it makes me, having the clothes stolen from my back and having to ring the bell and explain my panties to your butler. Don't you realize I'm good and mad?

"It must have been one of the guests—who else could it be? I am not going to let him drive gayly home with my suit under the seat of his car, and who can stop him except the police? Of course, he may not have it. As I say, I've been trying to think. He could have bundled it up and thrown it over the fence somewhere, intending to get it later. In that case the police should look for it. And every one here should have to answer some questions. I'm sorry, really, but I absolutely insist——"

Mrs. Barth had sat down again, with the expression of one having a job to do. She made no effort to interrupt, even permitted a lengthy silence when Jean had finished, and then spoke with no heat or acrimony:

"Listen to me, Miss Farris, won't you? I know you're a well bred girl and wouldn't dream of making unpleasantness in another woman's house without great provocation. I don't deny you've had the provocation, but just consider. You say you're willing to incur the publicity, but what about the rest of us? We're the ones who would really get it.

"You're thinking about yourself, which is natural, and so you haven't stopped to realize a curious fact, that all the people who were at Lucky Hills, in Val Carew's house, the night he was murdered, are here in my house now. Guy Carew, Leo Kranz, Portia Tritt, that man Buysse and that Indian, my husband and myself. Another fact is that Val Carew was hit on the head and so were you. If the police come—it will be more than I can bear. They might even arrest somebody——"

Jean put in savagely, "That's exactly what I want them to do."

"In my house? My dear, you simply feel vindictive, and I understand that, but if you would only stop to consider—if you would just let yourself cool off a little—after all, you didn't lose anything but a suit with some old yarn in it—and I'll gladly pay you for that, whatever amount you say——"

No, Jean declared, it wasn't the money value of the suit; she didn't care about that. Then, Mrs. Barth retorted, it was pure, unadulterated vindictiveness, and she has never supposed Miss Farris to be that sort of person.

Finally Jean said wearily: "All right, Mrs. Barth, forget it. I've been trying to think . . . I won't insist on the police. You'll have to take my word for it that I have a particular reason for not—just letting it drop."

"My dear, I knew you'd be reasonable—I do hope your head——"

"Wait a minute. I'll leave the police out of it provided you'll do something. You say all those people are here, even the Indian and Mr. Buysse?"

"Yes. I—I thought it would be only polite to ask them, since Mr. Carew——"

"All right. The point is, they're here. If you don't want the police, do exactly as I say." Jean sat up, grimaced, and held her head motionless. "Go down right now and give each of your guests a pencil and a piece of paper and ask each one to write down what he or she was doing from eight-thirty to nine o'clock, without any one discussing it with any one else. See that they do that, and that they sign it. Then tell them——"

"But what excuse can I give for such an extraordinary——"

"I don't know. Tell them it's a game. But after you have collected the papers, not before, tell them what happened to me, just as I have told it to you. I don't want to see any of them; tell them I've gone home. Then bring——"

"But good Lord! If I tell them it will be everywhere by morning! I can't tell them!"

"You certainly can. Whoever did it, that's what he was counting on, that you would do everything in your power to keep it quiet. I'm offering a compromise with you, and you'd better accept it. My head hurts, and I want to go home—and, by the way, I'll have to beg something to wear.

"The truth is, Mrs. Barth, I feel utterly nasty. My head hurts, and I'm madder than I've ever been in my life, and I have special reasons for special feelings that wouldn't interest you. So unless you do what I ask immediately, before any one gets away, I'll trot downstairs in this costume and phone the police myself. The phone there on the bed stand isn't connected."

Mrs. Barth gasped. "You tried it?"

"I did. I tell you, I'm a mean customer. And did I say you are to bring the signed papers to me at once? Then I'll go. You understand, no one is to be left out—not even your husband, for instance. Also, if it isn't done just as I've said, I'm sure to hear of it—two or three good friends of mine are down there——"

"Really, Miss Farris, you have no right——"

"I know I haven't, and neither have your guests got a right to bounce a club on my head and steal my clothes. So I say it anyway, and I mean it."

Mrs. Barth got up. "Everything considered," she said stiffly, "I regard it as unfortunate that I invited you to dinner."

"We agree on that perfectly. Will you go?"

Some time between eleven and midnight, toward the end of a long, level stretch on the Post road, a stern and handsome motorcycle cop leaned his vehicle against the highway railing and strode to the running board of the roadster which had pulled up at the curb in the rear and directed his gaze at the tired looking young woman behind the steering wheel.

"Would you mind telling me why you're in such a hurry to get somewhere?"

She started to shake her head, then stopped with a grimace that appeared to register pain. She tried to smile at him. "I'm sorry, I can't. I promised not to notify the police."

"O, good at gags? You're clever?"

"I am not." She sounded weary but emphatic. "It would be impossible to conceive of any one as dumb as I am. You could search the world over and in the end you would come back to me. I was probably going too fast, and I apologize. If you write out a summons I'll take it. If you don't write out a summons I'll dream about you."

The cop grunted. He opened his mouth, but apparently the comeback he had in mind wasn't good enough, for he abandoned it and, after another grunt, turned without a word. He was just straddling his saddle when the roadster whirred by in second.

In the room which represented chaos but not, as she had decided, disorder, Eileen Delaney stood at noon on Friday and, with exasperation tempered by concern, regarded her partner, Jean Farris, who was removing her hat with leisurely and unprecedented gentleness. When the hat had been disposed of on top of a pile of material, which was itself piled on a box of yarn, Jean turned to say:

"I know, Eileen. I'm sorry. You're nice to be nice about it. I couldn't drag myself out of bed. I have a headache."

"What! You never have a headache."

"I know. I'm out for a record. You'd better phone Muir & Beebe and tell them a week from Monday."

"I suppose I'll have to." Miss Delaney started off, then turned back. "Did Cora tell you about your caller?"

"No, I hurried through. Who was it?"

"Not was. Is. He's out in the big room; said he'd like to see the looms going. He's been here since ten o'clock. It's your Indian."

Jean slowly got onto the stool, rested her elbows on the table and her forehead on her fists, and closed her eyes. After a silence she said without moving: "Send him in here. Please!"

When the caller entered two minutes later Jean was quite busy.

"O, good morning. Miss Delaney tells me you've been here since ten o'clock. I'm sorry you had to wait."

"So am I." He came to the end of the table and stood gazing at her face. "You got hurt?"

"Yes, moderately. Apparently it takes quite a blow to crack a skull open."

"I know it does. That's what happened to my father. Have you had a doctor?"

"No, I don't need one. I just have a sore head."

"That's silly." He stepped forward briskly. "There might be a minor fracture. Let me see." He had his fingers on her head before she knew what he was doing "Which side? O! Not much of a bruise. Hold still."

"Stop, damn it! That hurts! Will you please let me alone?"

GUY CAREW frowned and with a deliberate forefinger rubbed the bridge of his nose. "You can imagine," he said at length, "how I have been . . . that I've been a good deal upset. I telephoned your apartment last night and got no answer. I phoned this morning gave my name and was told that you were sleeping. I called there at nine-thirty this morning and was told that you didn't feel like seeing any one.

"Now that I see you—I told you the other day, last Saturday, that you made me think of a Kiowan phrase, 'Your eyes are open to me.' But yesterday afternon—and now—I don't know how to say what I want to."

"Go ahead and say it. Because I'm pretty busy."

His gaze was concentrated at her, his black eyes narrowed a little. "There's another saying," he declared. "This one is Caddoan. 'When a woman grinds the corn with one hand, don't let it in your belly.' I'm not sure, but I think it means don't take a capricious woman for a wife."

"It seems to me," said Jean without smiling, "that you're wasting a lot of folklore. I am not capricious, and I don't think I've applied to any one for a position as wife. But if I did, and you're trying to tell me that you're sorry, I can't have the job——"

"Miss Farris! Please! You know very well what I'm trying to say. I thought we were pretty good friends. If you eyes were open to me, it's quite obvious that they aren't now. I want—I needed very much to see you and ask you some things—but I can't very well ask favors of an enemy."

Jean's brows went up. "Me an enemy?"

"Certainly. Your manner and your tone of voice—you might as well be wearing a war bonnet. So that's my first question. Why?"

"Well, since you ask it—in the first place, it seems quite possible that you hit me on the head last evening and stole my clothes."

"Me? Good God! You say I did that?"

"I said it seems possible."

"Then you're an awful fool." He got up without haste and walked to her. He towered above her, frowning down at her, the muscles of his jaw perceptibly moving. "Look here, Miss Farris. The only day we seemed to—no, I won't say that. I don't know how it seemed to you.

"But to me it seemed—what I said, that your eyes were open to me. I felt that there was no fear and no meanness between us, and no calculation. That was the first time in my life that I ever had that feeling. I thought—from the way you talked—that you felt the same way. Perhaps I was wrong."

"Perhaps." Jean wasn't looking at him now. As he had stood frowning down at her he had been unspeakably stern and darkly handsome, and now she wasn't looking at him. "Or perhaps I was. You really want to be frank, do you? Then for meanness, how about your asking me to give you that skirt and jacket, without any reason.

"Now, wait a minute! It was only the second time we were together, that evening at Lucky Hills two weeks ago. When I admired that jacket you told me it was real bayeta and you'd like to have me take it. You told me it wasn't in its original blanket form anyway, and even if it had been you wouldn't care, because you'd like to see what my art could do with it. And you said certain other things.

"So I took it, and I didn't even let one of my girls unravel it; I did it myself here in this room, and I spent hours selecting yarns to go with it, and I spent twenty more hours at one of the looms weaving it myself. Then I took it to Krone, and I wouldn't let his cutter touch it; I did the cutting. When it came yesterday I thought it was beautiful.

"This is what they call a sob story. When you showed up at Barth's you didn't even notice it; you barely glanced at it. That was all right; may be you had something else to do. But a little later you calmly came and asked me to give it to you because it was desirable for you to have it!" Jean's eyes flashed at him.

"I'll tell you one thing, Mr. Carew. I'm a well known designer, and where my work is concerned I'm conceited and jealous, and I haven't taken the time or the trouble to unravel any yarn or run a loom myself for years, and what surprises me is that I should bother to say anything to you at all except go to the devil! Except one thing: that I intended to send that jacket and skirt to you this morning by parcel post!"

Guy Carew was still frowning at her. "The trouble is," he muttered, "The chief trouble is the kind of a man I am. But I'm that kind. I don't know why, either; it isn't a Cherokee trait, the average Cherokee will tell you anything. Maybe it's the mixture. It isn't acquired, for I've always been that way. I was like that when I was a boy, and later at college and three years I spent in Europe, and since then among the tribes.

"I don't think I'm secretive exactly; it's just a lack if impulse to communicate my own affairs. And then there really was a reason for me to hesitate to tell any one why I wanted you to give me that jacket and skirt. Especially—I had no right to burden you with such a confidence."

Jean said dryly, "You thought knocking me on the head was better."

"I did not. You know very well I did not. And in any case I admit I had no right to ask you for it without saying why I wanted it. Another thing, I should have told you why I was sticking close to Portia Tritt."

"Not at all. That's none of my business."

"But you seemed to think it was. I mean, the remark you made. When I saw you were jealous——"

"Me? Jealous? My dear fellow——"

"But what you said——"

"What I said? O!" Jean laughed. "Now I remember. Maybe I was a little jealous, at the thought of her wearing that costume I had designed for myself."

"Of course. That's what I meant." Guy looked slightly bewildered. "Anyhow, I have an impulse now to communicate my affairs. To you. I want to tell you why I asked you to give me the skirt and jacket, and why I was with Portia Tritt—"

"It isn't at all necessary."

"It is to me. I want to find out who murdered my father. I've told you that much before, but I haven't talked about it. I'm not talking about it now except to you. It looks as if the police either can't do it or won't, and if they won't I will. Another thing. Look at me, Miss Farris. Please. Have you heard the—the talk that I killed my father myself?"

"Why——" Jean faltered. "I—of course, some people——"

"I know. Lots of people." Blood was at the surface of the smooth, tight skin over his cheek bones. "I'm surprised I can talk about it even with you. They say my father was killed with a war club and scalped, and I'm half Indian. They say he had been giving me half a million a year for my work among the tribes and had decided to stop it.

"They say he was going to marry Portia Tritt and cut me out of his will. They say one reason I didn't want him to marry Portia Tritt was that I loved her myself. They say I got home from the west on Tuesday, July 6, and he was killed the next morning." The blood had mounted higher. "You've heard all that?"

Jean nodded and murmured, "Some of it."

"Of course you have." Guy leaned forward at her. "I wouldn't have asked you this before, because it wouldn't have seemed possible . . . but now you say it's possible that I hit you on the head. . . . Do you believe that I killed my father?"

"No."

"Do you think I know who did it or had anything to do with it?"

"No. But—that's two questions. You might know who did it."

"I don't. Do you believe me?"

"Yes."

"Good. Now I have to ask you this: Can you conceive of any circumstances in which you would want to marry me?"

• • •

JEAN'S mouth fell open, and immediately closed again. She laughed a little. "Certainly. If we fell in love with each other, and we both had sound bodies and sound minds, and neither of us was otherwise entangled, and we had enough money to pay for a license and a trip to Niagara Falls——"

"I don't mean a joke. You're not in love with me now, are you?"

"Of course not."

"No, of course." He stopped, with his jaw muscles working, and then continued: "The reason I ask is that I'm confused about the code I'm living under. Until I was eight years old I lived among the Cherokees with my father and mother and with my grandfather, Chief William Straightfoot. My name is Guy Straightfoot Carew.

"My mother was a true Indian woman. I don't mean there was any complex or fixation or any of that stuff, but she was my mother and I loved her, and unconsciously she set my tone, and that's what got me confused about the code of my adopted culture.

"Through reading and so on I know what the rules are, but many of them don't seem natural to me. Still I would like to live up to them. That's what I'm getting at, that I'm trying to observe one of the rules. As I understand it a man isn't supposed to mention his experiences with women to any one, except his fiancée under certain circumstances. That's why I want to tell you about Portia Tritt——"

Jean put in hastily, "I'm not your fiancée!"

"Will you marry me?"

"No."

"You see." He was frowning at her. "One thing, I don't need to tell you that you can have any amount of fun with me; you see that yourself. I wasn't born for the kind of juggling you can do so well. But that doesn't mean I'm a fool. You know how clever Portia Tritt is. As near as I can judge, she's the cleverest woman I've ever known."

"She's plenty clever enough."

"Yes, she is. But, though it was eight years ago in Paris, when I was only twenty-three, it only took me a week to see that she—but I suppose I'm talking like a cad? It's next to impossible for me to tell. Since you were born to it, I suppose you can't realize how difficult it is to know what is being a cad and what isn't. The nuances are very fine. Is it all right for me to go on?"

"I don't think so," Jean brushed back her hair again. "Not that you're a cad, but it isn't necessary. Even if I were your fiancée I wouldn't require an explanation of anything that happened eight years ago. Just to lessen your confusion, I might add that it would be quite different if it were something happening now."

GUY regarded her. After a moment he said: "I see. You mean you would like me to explain why I was with Portia Tritt yesterday. That's what——"

"I don't mean that at all! You certainly could do with a little more understanding of women, Mr. Carew!"

"I know I could. Anyway, that's what I was going to do next, and I'm sure this isn't being a cad. I was with her yesterday, and I've been a great deal with her the past four weeks, because I want to learn who murdered my father."

Jean stared. "You don't think she knows!"

"I think she knows something, I don't know what. She was there in the house. She was going to marry my father. And on the morning he was killed, immediately after he was killed, she did something very peculiar, and her explanation for it isn't satisfactory And—I did something peculiar that morning myself. I said I'm not a fool, but I begin to believe that what I did that morning was foolish. I—I'd rather not tell you I'm sure it was foolish. So that's why I was with Portia Tritt yesterday."

"She didn't look——" Jean bit her lip.

"She didn't look what?"

"Nothing."

He gazed at her and shrugged. "All right. Then about asking you to give me the skirt and jacket——"

"You don't need to explain——"

"Pardon me, I do need to. Something happened yesterday morning and Wednesday afternoon. A newspaper reporter called on every one who was at Lucky Hills that night—Buysse, Wilson Kranz, Barth and his wife, Portia Tritt. He couldn't find me Wednesday, and so I was the last.

"He asked for information regarding a garment that had bayeta yarn in it—a jacket, sweater, anything; and he said that the police had found clutched in my father's left hand a piece of bayeta yarn which he had evidently pulled from the clothing of the murderer.

"I phoned my lawyer, Orlik, at once, and he went to see the district attorney. The district attorney was sore, but that wouldn't faze Orlik, and he got it that the reporter was right. The yarn had been clutched in my father's left hand, and the police had learned that it was genuine bayeta. In that case my father's murderer was wearing my jacket. The one I later gave to you."

"But you don't know that. One little piece of yarn—and you haven't seen it——"

Guy said grimly: "I don't need to. The police wouldn't make a mistake on a thing like that, and if it was bayeta it was from my jacket. Bayeta blankets are too rare and costly to make clothes from.

"I had it outdoors that afternoon, the afternoon of July 6, at the tennis court, but I thought I took it back to the house and put it in the closet in the side hall where the balls and rackets are kept. Not that I looked for it, for the next morning my father was found murdered. It may have been there all the time, but I suppose it wasn't, or the police would have found it; they must have been secretly searching for something with bayeta in it.

"Anyhow, the next time I saw it was the afternoon two weeks ago that I drove you to Lucky Hills. You remember when I was showing you the house and took you to my room to look at some Indian stuff, the jacket was there on a chair and I was surprised to see it? And we discussed it, and I gave it to you, and you took it with you that evening?"

Jean nodded. "I remember."

"All right; the murderer wore that jacket. I don't know where it had been those two weeks. I don't know who put it on the chair in my room."

"Who knew it was yours?"

"Buysse and Wilson. I had to show it to them, with other things I had brought. They are my friends and, of course, wouldn't tell the newspaper reporter. I don't think Barth or his wife could have known, if they saw it on that afternoon, or they would have told the reporter—unless——"

He stopped. In a moment he went on: "But I think not. If that was it, Barth would be after me. I don't know about Kranz and Portia Tritt; they had seen it, and they know textiles. I don't know. Anyhow, you see why I wanted to explain. I had to; and, besides, I have to ask a favor of you. Three of them. The first is, have you any of that bayeta left, any at all?"

"Take it all if you want to."

"No, thanks, I just want a piece."

"You said three favors."

"Yes. The second is this. It is extremely important—that is, important to me—that no one be told a word of this—the jacket, the yarn——"

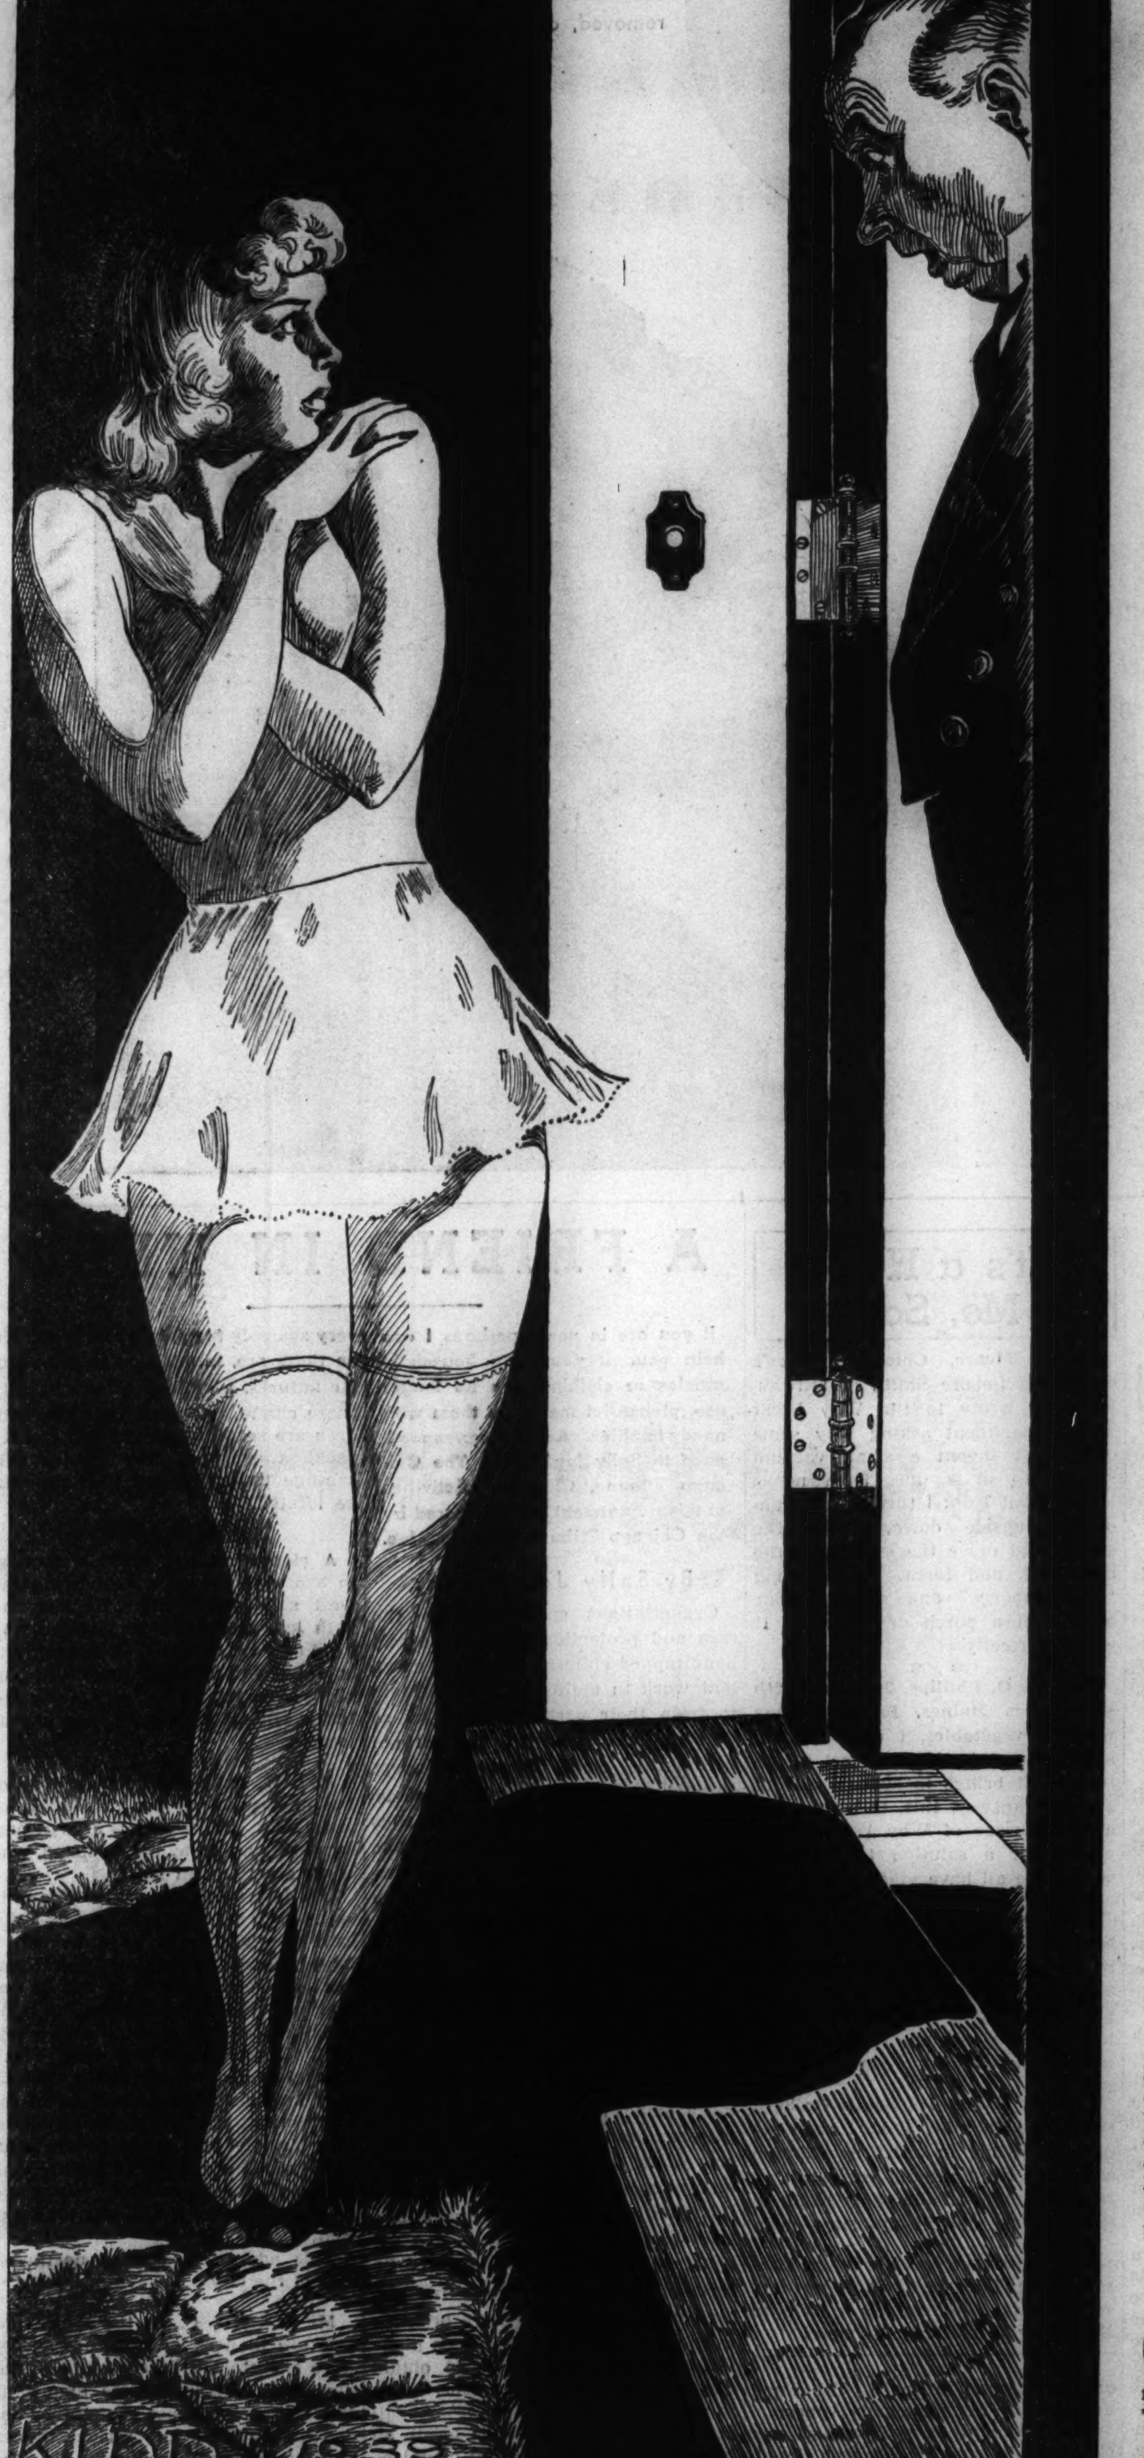
"I'm not quite a fool either," Jean said shortly. "No one will be told by me. What's the third favor?"

"That's what I'm coming to. The police may come to you and they may not. But there were twenty people at that dinner table last evening. Mrs. Barth told us, after we had signed what we had written and she had collected the papers, that she was going to give the papers to you. Did she? And may I see them?"

She stopped and gaped at him. She jumped from the stool and took two steps toward him.

"Good God, Guy! Whoever knocked me on the head and stole my clothes—that was the murderer!"

(To be continued.)



"Having the clothes stolen from my back and having to ring the bell and explain my panties to your butler. Don't you realize I'm good and mad?"

Sunday, May 14

Generally a favorable day, but don't spank the babies just because it's raining outside and a few people and ideas may have to get along in close quarters. This goes whether it is actually raining or not. Be peaceful; plan ahead.

A Big Proposition.

What is meant by morality? Different people have different definitions, some of them quite narrow—not including the philosophical picture of what morality is. In the highest sense morality is equivalent to the highest ideal of which spiritual man is capable; it is related to the seventh sphere of his consciousness. It includes all ethical conduct—not merely the local rules.

Civic Theater Opens Run Tonight

By Cecil Smith

Thanks to a new and promising project over at the Civic theater, the legitimate stage will not be allowed to die its usual death in Chicago this summer. Tonight a fifteen week season of summer repertory will be introduced with Mark Reed's comedy, "Petticoat Fever," with Guy Robertson in the starring rôle.

During the summer the Civic theater season will pursue a policy of presenting distinguished guest stars in the midst of a well chosen and capable permanent repertory cast. The bills will be changed every three weeks. Popular prices will prevail, with a top scale of $1.50 for the best seats. Since the house is small, even the 50 cent balcony seats are in good contact with the stage. Needless to say, the theater will be air-cooled.

When "Petticoat Fever" was first given in Chicago, Dennis King was its star. Guy Robertson, whose previous assignments have included such diverse pieces as "The Great Waltz" and "Of Mice and Men," now takes over Mr. King's rôle. He is seen as a wireless operator in an isolated polar spot. For months he has not seen a woman or heard the sound of a feminine voice. The sudden entrée of an attractive young lady is the beginning of a pleasant light romance in the course of which Mr. Robertson's catty society fiancée gets ditched in favor of the choice newcomer.

Such a rôle as this should be smooth sailing for Mr. Robertson. Before he came to Chicago last fall in "Of Mice and Men" we were all skeptical about his versatility, since we had known him only as a musical comedy hero. His success with John Steinbeck's grim play dispatched all such doubts. Since he has a chance to sing a song in "Petticoat Fever," his musical admirers will welcome another chance to hear him.

Two featured players in supporting rôles are known to a wide public. Donald Brian has been associated with the American stage ever since the première of "The Merry Widow," in which he was the first hero on this side of the water. Esther Ralston has won most of her fame in motion pictures. The rest of the cast, including several prominent radio actors and actresses, consists of Guey Hope, Ellen Hogue, Boyd Crane, Betty Hannah, Tom Post, and Arthur Van Slyke.

J. Charles Gilbert, himself an experienced actor and the present manager of both the Civic theater and the Civic Opera house, is producing the repertory season. The second play, due to open June 4, will be "The Thirteenth Chair," starring Margaret Wycherly.

A second opening will take place at the Studebaker theater Tuesday evening, when the Yiddish production of "Who Is Who?"

Above: Judy Garland, who sings—and acts!—plays tennis, too. She's been taking lessons between pictures for years and now is recognized as an expert at the game. "Wizard of Oz" is Judy's next picture. She plays Dorothy.

Right: Gail Patrick wears this luscious outfit in "Man of Conquest." The film is based on the life of Sam Houston, and Richard Dix plays the role of Sam.

Civic Theater Opens Summer Season Tonight

begins an engagement of eight performances. The drama, staged and produced by Maurice Schwartz, deals with the struggle of a Jewish-American mathematician to keep the knowledge of his Jewish origin from the public and from his children. H. Leivick, the author, is well known here from "The Golem."

Jacob Ben-Ami heads a cast containing some of the outstanding players of the American Yiddish stage. The players include Bertha Gersten, Isadore Cashier, Lazar Freed, Luba Kadison, Michael Goldstein, Maurice Silberkasten, Wolfe Goldfarden, Ben-Katz, Sam Lehrer and Ethel Cashier.

Beginning tomorrow subscriptions will be received at the Erlanger theater for the 1939-'40 season of the Theater Guild and the American Theater society. The season will consist of six plays, of which the first to be announced is Philip Barry's "The Philadelphia Story," with Katharine Hepburn. The 1938-'39 list consisted of "Dame Nature," "Amphitryon 38," "The Sea Gull," "Golden Boy," "Of Mice and Men" and "Our Town."

With three stars of absolute first rank in three of the loop's chief theaters, the Chicago stage is in rosy condition this mid-May. John Barrymore and his admirable associates launched "My Dear Children" at the Selwyn theater last Monday with lots of hoop-la, and with Mr. Barrymore replying to a tremendous ovation by means of a curtain speech invoking memories of his famous grandmother, Mrs. John Drew.

Meantime, Gertrude Lawrence enters upon what is announced to be the last week of Samson Raphaelson's "Skylark" at the Harris theater. Those who wish to see the volatile, vivacious Miss Lawrence in her new vehicle and her new and beautiful clothes will do well to step lively, for business is bound to be brisk between now and Saturday night's closing.

Likewise "Knickerbocker Holiday," Maxwell Anderson's and Kurt Weill's distinctive musical with Walter Huston as star, enters its final stanza. The play has found a warm welcome during its four weeks at the Grand Opera house, and has sent its customers away a bit daft over Mr. Huston's way with the "September Song" and full of merriment over the battle with the "Indians" from Harlem.

The Uptown players close their 1938-'39 season with performances of Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" in the Woman's Club theater Friday and Saturday evenings. This play, for which the acting rights have only recently been released to little theater groups, looks like an admirable choice. The original engagement of "Our Town" in Chicago was suddenly interrupted part way through its course. There must therefore be many theatergoers who were denied a chance to see the Pulitzer prize drama of New England life and death.

J. Bradley-Griffin, director of the Uptown players, will be seen as the stage manager, the rôle originally played here by Frank Craven. Others in the cast are Brooke Seamans, Ray McLaughlin, Helen Williams, Linus Olson, Juliet Barker, Wilms Herbert, Marjorie Walker, Mary Hayden, Kurt Proud, Robert Lesaar and Donald James.

When George M. Cohan is not working he becomes restless. Right now he is mulling over the idea of a musical comedy for next season. Three or four songs have been written, but nothing else has yet been done.

The Chicago Catholic Theater Cycle continues with its presentations of plays by outstanding Catholic amateur groups this week at Loyola Community theater, 1320 Loyola avenue. The remaining bills are as follows:

Tonight—Paul Claudel's "Tidings Brought to Mary"; Rosary college.

Tuesday evening—Four one act plays: Thornton Wilder's "The Happy Journey," by the Tower players of Winnetka, Norman McKinnell's "The Bishop's Candlesticks," by the players of Notre Dame de Chicago; Lady Gregory's "The Rising of the Moon," by the Cathespians of Oak Park and Austin; Doran Hurley's "The Old Parish," by the Barat college players of Lake Forest.

Thursday—Emmet Lavery's "The First Legion"; Chicago Catholic Men's club players.

Next Sunday—Maxwell Anderson's "Mary of Scotland"; Loyola Community theater players.

Kay Ewing, director of the Repertory group's "One Third of a Nation," received her first professional training under Hallie Flanagan at the Vassar experimental theater. After her graduation she spent a year on a world tour, studying the directing and producing methods of leading theaters abroad. Later she studied with Marie Ouspenskaya. When Miss Flanagan left Vassar to take over the direction of the Federal theater project, Miss Ewing took over her work at Vassar. Leaving Vassar to come to Chicago, she directed "Rip Van Winkle" and "Little Black Sambo" for the local Federal theater. "One Third of a Nation" is given every Friday, Saturday and Sunday evening at the Repertory theater, 29 East Balbo street.

At the end of the week Ian Keith will leave for Australia, to make the circuit of Australian cities in repertory with Pauline Lord. The Federal theater's version of Shakespeare's "Hamlet" will therefore close Saturday evening at the Blackstone theater. "As You Like It" is in preparation, and will be vouchsafed to the public on or about June 7. Meanwhile the Yiddish performance of Clifford Odets' "Awake and Sing," also under Federal theater auspices, continues at the Great Northern theater until Sunday, May 28.

Recent dramatic publications of Random House include "Family Portrait," the play about the family of Christ in which Judith Anderson is now appearing in New York; and two plays by Ernst Toller, "Pastor Hall" and "Blind Man's Buff" [the latter written in collaboration with Denis Johnston].

Last week a University of Wisconsin production at the Bascom theater in Madison brought forward a new farce comedy entitled "So I Took a Chance." The play was written by J Russell Lane, professor of speech at the university, and Cy Howard, one of his students. The theme bears some resemblance to Anne Nichols' "Abie's Irish Rose." Both authors were members of the faculty-student cast.

Riverview Opening.

The past popularity of Riverview park's 2 cent days and 5 cent nights has prompted the management to continue them when the amusement park opens Wednesday. Children will be admitted Monday, Wednesday, and Friday afternoons for 2 cents. Five cents will be the admission for all patrons on Tuesday and Thursday nights.

Notes of Music and Musicians

One of the oldest existing Scandinavian male choruses in the United States, the Chicago Swedish Glee club, will give its annual spring concert in Orchestra hall this afternoon. The organization has in its fifty-two years of activity toured not only this country but also Sweden, and is already planning a return trip to the Scandinavian countries in 1941.

Harry Carlson is the present conductor of the glee club. His afternoon will be busy, since he will accompany the soloist, Esther Hart, in her two groups of solos, besides directing the chorus. The soprano, surely one of the busiest in Chicago this year, will join the men in singing Schubert's "The Omnipotence." Three groups of Swedish songs and one of English will be sung by the glee club. Stanley Martin and Richard Vikstrom are organist and pianist for the outfit, and Roy Johnson will supply two incidental solos.

The unusually fine series of string quartet concerts at the University of Chicago's Mandel hall will be brought to a close this evening. On this program Bartók's Fifth quartet and Beethoven's last, op. 135 in F major, will be played by the Kolisch quartet. The Bartók composition was commissioned by the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation for a Library of Congress festival. It was given its world première on April 8, 1935, at the festival in Washington, D. C., on the occasion of the Kolisch quartet's debut in this country. The composer has dedicated the work to Mrs. Coolidge, whose generosity has made possible the present cycle of programs.

On Saturday night in Orchestra hall the Freiheit Gesang Farein of Chicago will celebrate its 25th anniversary with a Jewish music festival. "Biro-Bidjan," an oratorio by Jacob Schaefer, will be performed by some 275 singers and a symphony orchestra under the direction of E. Malek. Joining the Chicago organization in this presentation are similar groups from Detroit and Milwaukee and the Jewish Mandolin orchestra of Chicago.

"Siegfried," third of the Wagnerian cycle of music-dramas, "The Ring of the Nibelungs," will reach the stage of Kimball hall this afternoon, in a presentation by the Fine Art Opera company. Zerline Muhlman Metzger continues as the conductor-accompanist.

On its next to the last concert of the season the Beaux Arts salon at the Medinah club will today present the Akely trio and Marjorie Day, soprano. Ernau Akely, pianist, and her daughters, Frances, violinist, and Blythe, cellist, compose the trio, a Wilmette organization. Both the cellist and the violinist will play solo groups. Miss Day will sing several of her numbers accompanied by the trio, which will open the program with one of the Haydn compositions for this combination of instruments.

The Modern Musical guild will present Ruth Kaufman, pianist, and Fritz Siegal, concert master of the Illinois Symphony orchestra, in a joint recital at the Woman's Club theater, tonight. Besides music by Beethoven and Brahms the artists will perform compositions by Bernard Brindel, a young Chicago composer.

This afternoon at 4:30 o'clock a service of festival evensong will be sung at St. James' church, Wabash avenue and Huron street, by the combined mixed choirs of the following churches: St. Luke's of Evanston, Holy Spirit of Lake Forest, St. Chrysostom's, and St. James'. Three organists, Herbert Hyde, Alice Emmons McBride, and Leo Sowerby, will participate in the service.

The combined choir schools of the St. James Methodist and Second Presbyterian churches will hold their second annual commencement concert in the former church, 4611 South Ellis avenue, today at 4:30 o'clock. With few exceptions all the music for the program has been composed and will be conducted and performed by members of the choir schools. Bethuel Gross directs these educational projects, which are open free to the public.

Clare Gronau will play the free organ recital in Kimball hall at noon on Friday. The Illinois chapter of the American Guild of Organists is the sponsor of these weekly concerts.

Hans Wiener, German dancer now teaching in Boston, Mass., will give summer courses in his art in Chicago and Winnetka. Chicago classes are under the supervision of the American Conservatory of Music, North Side branch. Mrs. Mitchell Dawson, 552 Elm street, Winnetka, directs the other series of classes.

Omega chapter of Sigma Alpha Iota will hold its annual MacDowell silver tea today at 4 o'clock at the Woman's University club in the Fine Arts building. Artists participating include Paula Belding, soprano; Marjorie Boye, violinist; Ruth Phillips, pianist, and Florence Boydston, contralto. The public is invited.

Contrary to the report made in last Sunday's opera story, Hilda Burke and not Muriel Dickson will have the rôle of Maria in the revival of Smetana's "The Bartered Bride." Miss Burke sang this part at its last performances at the Civic Opera house in 1936.

Transit Firms Overdo Job of Plans for Fair

By Burns Mantle.

New York. — [Special.] — Nobody knows, nobody cares to predict just what this here world's fair is going to do to New York. It has not made any great difference to date, nor altered any living routines except those of the fair employés and the transportation companies. The transportation companies overdid the job of preparing to take care of crowds that have not yet gathered. You can ride to the fair on any one of half a dozen subways and railway trains and take your pick of seats. The allotment is about eight seats to the passenger up to now, I'd say. But already there is a faint trace of writing on the walls.

There is, by any reasonable analysis, no possible way of beating this particular world's fair. Before the summer is over it is going to be the most talked of eighth wonder this world of ours has known. That much is already in the cards. And the reason for it is the natural competition stirred up among the chief exhibitors. American corporations that would question and cut to the minimum their appropriations for any other similar fair, have gone, and will continue to go, the limit for this one. Why? Because their competing pals are doing the same thing. Because there is just as much vanity in corporations as there is in humans. None of these major exhibitors is going to take a back seat for anybody. And they are the richest corporations in the world.

There is a reason for the modest attendance to date. First, the weather was discouraging up to last weekend, when there was a rush of late starters. Second, the town is chock full of Simple Simons. They are going to the fair, yes, but they are going to wait until it is finished. My eye! There is more of it finished now than they could see in two weeks of steady attendance.

All world's fairs are alike in the atmosphere they breed and in the human reactions they stimulate. The first crowds at this one are making exactly the same mistakes the first crowds made in Chicago and in San Francisco. Mrs. Simple Simon arrives in high heel shoes and wearing a fur collared coat, even when the weather is promising. Mr. Simple Simon decides to quit the office at four and take in six or eight exhibits before dinner. Mrs. S. begins to wilt before she has walked from the gate to the perisphere. Mr. S. quits half way through the first exhibit and begins inquiring his way to a drink and the amusement area. If they are lucky enough to get in, neither of them gets out of the first eating place they find.

The amusement area, in which I assume my customers are most interested, is still the most unfinished section of the 1,200 acre playground. Workmen are still hammering away at Merrie England, Morris Gest's Midget City, and a half dozen of the other major shows. Only Billy Rose's "aquacade" has had a formal opening at this writing. The "aquacade," happily, has lived up to both the Rose-smeared promises of its promoter and the expectations of its patrons.

There is first the amphitheater. This is New York state's contribution to the fair and is a permanent structure. It seats 10,000 persons and faces Fountain lake, the last body of water within the grounds. The tank in which the water sports of the Rose show are held is an all steel and cement affair that rests on a foundation of 200 piles driven into the bottom of the lake. The water is, of all things, fresh city water, made fit for the swimmers by first passing through a purification plant that cost a lot of money. There's an item for you: A fresh water swimming tank floating apparently on a salt water lake! The pool is 275 feet long. The other side of it there is a floating stage with a depth of 200 feet and a width of 311 feet. And at either side there are diving towers 75 feet high.

I give you these figures, not because I think you may be particularly interested in them, but because they do emphasize this point: That although every feature of this aquatic entertainment has probably been duplicated in other centers, notably at the Great Lakes exposition in Cleveland two years ago, such a show has never before been given in similar proportions. It is the same way with the fair itself. There have been other world's fairs, but never one boasting either the number or variety of exhibits or the cost of this one. Which, I admit, is a typical New York statement.

Mr. Rose will tell you that, during the performance of his tank show, which is a combination of water and stage ballets, there are 500 people on the stage. Perhaps there are. If so, I'd say 150 of them are stage hands, electricians, and other back stage workers. Sixty swimmers take part in the water ballets. Probably forty of them are girls. They are, as you might expect, the shapeliest of youngsters and the healthiest.

They rim the tank, dive on signal, and swim in perfect rhythm to the music of a blaring orchestra, following a series of geometric designs as perfectly as dancers on a stage, and with a grace equal to that of the ice skaters in Sonja Henie's troupe. These are sexless ballets. Once the swimmers are in the water, you cannot distinguish boys from girls, except by the color of their swimming caps. The thrill is in their grace and precision, their heads bobbing, their arms rising and falling as the violin bows of an orchestra rise and fall in unison to the beat of a leader's baton.

Then there is a diving interlude, with six titleholding champions doing an assortment of twists and turns, jackknives and other diving tricks that serve to startle the crowd. And finally the individual exhibits of Eleanor Holm and Johnny Weissmuller, champions in their particular classes. It is, I think, a perfect exhibit of its kind.

The first crowds were quick to find the American Telephone and Telegraph company's long lines exhibit, not only because it is interesting but also because it is free. Here they have a sort of combination bingo and quiz game. You put in your name and await the spinning of a huge bowl of numbered marbles. If your number is drawn it is posted on an electric sign and you are called to make your choice of the distant friend or relative with whom you want to talk.

Shortly the connection is made and your fellow watchers are privileged to hear not only what you say to your cousin or your mother or your best girl in distant parts, but also to listen to their replies to you. Which makes for mixed entertainment.

Most of the conversations, reasonably enough under the circumstances, are pretty dumb and pretty human. "Hello, pa." "Hello!" "Is that you, pa?" "Yes. Who is this?" "This is Tad. You know—Tad. In New York." "Yeah?" "Yeah!" "Well, how are you, son?" "O, I'm all right. How are you?" "I'm all right. Where are you?" "I'm in New York—I'm out at the world's fair." "Yeah, so the man said." "Well, I guess that's all, pa. Give ma my love." "Sure. Good-by, son." "Good-by."

The guides are my greatest disappointment to date. Evidently Grover Whalen was too busy to instruct them properly when they were hired the last week in April. In fact by that time I suspect the fair had also grown beyond Grover himself.

Nice guides, they are, in appearance and manner. Courteous and patient. But ask them the way to the nearest bus station and they look as mystified as you feel. They don't know. Ask them what bus to take to reach a particular section of the grounds and they don't know that. At least the first half dozen I struck did not know. I gave up after that and kept on walking. Pretty soon a bus honked me out of the way, but it wouldn't stop to take me on. I had to follow it to the station, a couple of blocks farther on. But the guides will learn. So, too, I hope, shall I.

LUPE NORTH OF LOOP

Lupe Velez takes command of Chez Paree Friday night, when the Mexican movie star makes her first Chicago night club appearance as headliner of a show featuring the Vincent Lopez orchestra.

Recordings

Columbia has released the fifth and final volume of its history of music "by ear and eye." Like the four preceding releases, this one consists of an album of recordings and a generous sized explanatory booklet.

The series that began in the mists of the middle ages is ending now with the works of Elgar, Strauss, Debussy, Ravel, Vaughan Williams, Bax, Mahler, Schoenberg, Milhaud, Casella, Hindemith, de Falla, Strawinsky, Bartok, Varese, and Haba.

It will be noted immediately that no narrow taste is responsible for the choice of selections. On the contrary, exponents of most of the principal "schools" of modern composition are represented. The fact that the insurgent Russians, who are turning out musical imitations of iron foundries and river dams, find no place in the album may be due either to the probability that their productions have no genuine significance or to the possibility that England, where these recordings were made, is not yet conversant with their works. Slightly puzzling, however, is the complete absence of Shostakovich from the album.

Except for such performers as Charles Kullman, tenor, and Emanuel Feuermann, cellist, the recordings have been made by musicians virtually unknown in this country. Bela Bartok plays some of his own piano pieces. Paul Hindemith joins Emanuel Feuermann for a performance of his scherzo for viola and cello.

The illustrated 72 page booklet which accompanies the record album is the work of Percy Scholes, distinguished English musicologist.

Vaudeville

Vivian Della Chiesa, lyric soprano of the Chicago City Opera company, heads the Chicago theater stage bill this week. On the same bill are the Twelve Aristocrats, the Fonzells and Frakson, Eddy Duchin and his band. The film, "Union Pacific," starring Joel McCrea and Barbara Stanwyck, is being held over from last week.

At the Palace theater the stage performers are Melissa Mason, the Oxford Boys, Tommy Trent, Milton Douglas and company and the Roxyettes. "East Side of Heaven," with Bing Crosby and Joan Blondell, is the picture.

"Stuff" Smith and his Onyx club band are playing at the State Lake theater. Roscoe Ates, stuttering screen comedian; the Selandias; Mimi Rollins and Chester Dolphin are other entertainers. "Never Say Die," with Martha Raye and Bob Hope, is the motion picture.

Herman Timberg heads an all-comedy vaudeville revue at the Oriental theater. Other players are George Freems, Audrey Parker, and Three Wiles, Marc Ballero, Don Ford and company, Hashie and Osai, Verne Buck and his orchestra. The screen features are "Risky Business" and "Zero Hour."

Marnee and Marion Miller are to be seen at the Rialto theater this week. On the screen is "Outside These Walls."

Swann's Song: No Horse and Buggy Magic

Russell Swann, a magician with a sense of humor, and a Chinese assistant named Patrick Murphy, is lifting legerdemain to new entertainment heights at the Colony club. The suave swami approaches the great arts of the ancient Merlin with his tongue in his cheek and an ace up his sleeve. Where a Houdini would by great exertion get himself out of some dilemma, Swann, with much less effort gets himself into the most hilarious sort of complications. Witness the case of Max, the card sleuthing cobra. If there is a funnier bit than le affair Max, it has not yet hit Chicago. Second only to it in popularity is Swann's conversation with his own recorded voice.

Swann's sleight of hand performances are always accompanied by a persistent whirring sound—the mortal remains of all the great magicians of the past turning rapidly over in their forgotten graves, for in many of his tricks, Swann is subtly and amusingly inept. Yet between shows, in the proximity of a ringside table, he will baffle diners with card, rope, and pencil tricks. Five years ago Swann got his start in Chicago, and his return to the city proves that despite half a decade in show business here is one young man who still has his illusions about him.

The Colony's tradition of vocal entertainment is carried on by tall, charming Marjorie Gainsworth, an Iowa girl who as Marge Gilliam made a name for herself in Chicago and New York opera circles, and then found a new career in night club circles. Although Miss Gainsworth in song tells of her desire to sing modern swing, she wins her greatest ovation with selections from light opera.

Lupe Velez makes her night club debut on Friday at the Chez Paree. The little Mexican actress has carried star billing for many years on stage and screen, but this is her first venture into the more intimate atmosphere of the cabaret world.

It will be Lupe and Lopez at the Chez. Vincent Lopez brings his new orchestra in to carry on the popular pace set by Russ Morgan. With him comes his nominee for the queenship of swing—Betty Hutton.

For a touch of fragile artistry, Harriet Hoctor brings her widely acclaimed ballet routines. For fun, Romo Vincent, the portly gentleman who sings "Lonesome Road" like no one else ever sang it, and whose "Captain Bligh" is a tour de force of able mimicry, will take over Bob Hannon's spot as master of ceremonies.

The Knight sisters, with their control dancing, round out the new show. Fred Evans has his Adorables set for a new program of his famous ensembles—with tropical costuming getting a big play.

When he was singing and playing trombone for Paul Whiteman, he was popularly known as "Mr. T." Now he is Jackson Teagarden, maestro of the country's newest big name swing band. He will bring his "Sixteen Men and a Girl" into the Blackhawk Thursday to take up the difficult task of following Bob Crosby. One of Crosby's former players, Charlie Spivak, trumpeter, is with Teagarden.

Bon Air Country club, on Milwaukee avenue north of Wheeling, will open its enlarged theater restaurant May 25 with Tony Martin, singer of stage and screen, in the headline spot. Tony is no newcomer to Chicago night life, although when he was appearing in Century of Progress clubs and other spots it was as a much more anonymous member of an orchestra. Today he still plays his saxophone as part of his act, but his voice is the chief attraction.

Ray Herbeck's band is off duty this week while decorators, under the direction of Marie Stosskopf, transform the famous Marine dining room into an entirely new show place. On Saturday night its modern Venetian baroque decorations, its crystals and bronzes, its fluorescent lighting and its new seating arrangement will be unveiled formally along with Herbeck's band and a new show.

An extension of the new room will permit outdoor dining during the beach walk season. Plans for the "walk" now include Sunday matinée daincing.

The "Symphonic Strings," a group of musicians under the direction of Anthony Dongarra, have been signed as the entertainment feature of Henry Malgren's new Walton street restaurant, Henry's of New York. Dongarra, like all good musicians, has never ceased being a student, and has developed his string ensemble along lines that blend the teachings of the past with the trends of the moderns.

The Empire room's new revue, opening Thursday, will feature Glen Gray and his Casa Loma orchestra. With Gray will be a new group of acts, including Milton Douglas, whose singing won him a ten week run in the Empire room in 1937; Gil Lamb, eccentric dancer; Kenney and Burke, acrobatic clowns; Staples and Cerny, singing team, and the Merriel Abbott dancers. Phil Dooley continues as alternate band.

Night notes:

Comebacks are planned for Orrin Tucker, late in the summer; Bob Crosby, in about ten weeks; Stuff Smith, next fall. . . . It looks like Henry Busse for a favorite suburban summer spot late in June. . . . Add nominations: For comedy merit, Red Ingle doing anything, but particularly his chorus of the song that gets in your hair, "Three Little Fishes"; also Buddy Fisher's "Nut Club" burlesque on quiz games. For the most spectacularly staged orchestral number, Eddy Duchin's "Stormy Weather" which never fails to get real cheers at the Palmer House. In it Eddy does his most spectacular piano playing. . . . Eddy, incidentally, explains his regimen of careful eating and scientific exercise as being the country's only "sympathetic diet"—friend Tony Owen being the real patient. . . . Is it true that Saxie Dowell is tooting no more on the old Kemp grounds, having left Hal's band to form his own? . . .

Two Stars in Color

Hedy Lamarr was born in Vienna. Her movie career started over there as a script girl in a studio in Vienna. Her lifelong ambition was soon fulfilled when she was given leading rôles in numerous European pictures. After the release of the film "Ecstasy," in which she was starred, she was asked to go to Hollywood to appear in American movies. She remained out there for a year without doing any acting. Walter Wanger finally borrowed her to play the feminine lead opposite Charles Boyer in "Algiers." Miss Lamarr is an expert swimmer and is a lover of sports. Skiing is one of her favorites. She's 5 feet 7 inches in height. Hedy was divorced from Fritz Mandl, munitions manufacturer. On March 4 of this year she was married to Gene Markey, motion picture writer and producer.

Basil Rathbone was born in South Africa, June 13, 1892. He's 6 feet 1½ inches tall. His wife is Quida Bergere, scenarist and playwright, and they have one son. Basil's theatrical career started in 1912, in Shakespearean rôles. He played in "Romeo and Juliet," "Othello," and the title rôle in "Peter Ibbetson." After playing an important part in "He Who Gets Slapped" for a season he came to America to appear in films. One of his first pictures was opposite Mae Murray in "The Masked Bride." Later, in New York, he appeared in the stage productions "The Captive," "The Command to Love," and "Judas." Mr. Rathbone's favorite movie rôle was opposite Norma Shearer in "The Last of Mrs. Cheney." His current film production is "The Hound of the Baskervilles," in which he plays the rôle of Sherlock Holmes.

Ears of Music World Turn to Evanston Fete

By Edward Barry.

This week Evanston abandons its rôle as suburb and becomes the music capital of the district. The North Shore Music festival will bring to Dyche stadium the Chicago Symphony orchestra, huge festival choruses, and some of the world's most brilliant soloists. Frederick Stock, Hans Lange, John W. Beattie, and Max T. Krone are to share the conducting duties. There will be four concerts—Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday evening and Saturday afternoon.

To house this thirtieth anniversary North Shore festival [the first one was held in 1909] an indoor choral theater, constructed of canvas, has been erected over a portion of the stadium's west stand and a section of the field itself. Seating capacity is 6,500, a substantial increase over Patton gymnasium.

Fully aware of the vagaries of our climate the sponsors of the festival have arranged to heat the theater to 70 degrees even though the outside temperature should fall to the freezing point. The decorative scheme will be built upon a garden motif. A great improvement in the means of ingress and egress is in prospect, with much less of the conflict between pedestrian and vehicular trafic which made the gymnasium arrangement so maddening. Parking space for 1,000 cars will be provided.

Course tickets are $4 to $10, single seats $1.25 up. They may be obtained at Northwestern university [Lunt Administration building, third floor] in Evanston and at the following places in downtown Chicago: Orchestra hall, Auditorium theater, Lyon & Healy.

To get to Dyche stadium you take the elevated or the North Shore Line to Central street, Evanston, and walk west. From the C. & N. W. Central street station walk east. Driving, turn west on Central street from Sheridan road or Ridge avenue.

Thus there will be heard in the course of these four concerts two of the towering masterpieces of musical literature, a rarely performed choral work of the early twentieth century, and a miscellany of attractive short songs and instrumental pieces.

The two large scale masterworks are, of course, the Bach Passion and the Beethoven symphony. If the first stands at the top of all choral literature the second occupies a corresponding position with regard to the symphonic répertoire. The symphony in fact, unites the two types of music, for its monumental last movement is a setting for chorus and soloists of Schiller's "Ode to Joy."

The Bach Passion, based on the story of Christ's sufferings and death, was composed for the service of the Thomas church in Leipzig. It was performed for the first time in 1729, certainly by what we would consider indequate forces. After Bach's death [1750] the Matthew Passion, like nearly all of his other works, sank into obscurity. Mendelssohn deserves much of the credit for the Bach revival which began a little over a hundred years ago.

The Ninth symphony of Beethoven is a work of the last decade of his life. It was finished, in fact, only four years before his death and is almost the last of the composer's widely intelligible works. The chamber music which followed it is still the property of a relatively small circle.

The early twentieth century choral work is "The New Life," by Ermanno Wolf-Ferrari, a contemporary Italian composer best known for his opera, "The Jewels of the Madonna." He was quite a figure in Chicago back in 1912, coming here for the first and second American performances of "The Jewels" [Jan. 16 and 18], and incidentally conducting the second Chicago performance of the oratorio, "The New Life" [Jan. 21]. The Apollo Musical club was augmented for this occasion by other choruses, and the total number of persons on the stage of the Auditorium theater was said to be 900. Soloists were Carolina White and Mario Sammarco. The first Chicago performance of "The New Life" had been given a year before by the Apollo club under Harrison Wild, with Mable Sharp Herdien and Marcus Kellerman serving as soloists.

IN NORTH SHORE FESTIVAL

Kirsten Flagstad, soprano, will sing at the concluding concert in Dyche stadium on Saturday night. She will be heard in excerpts from Wagner's operas, "Lohengrin" and "Die Goetterdaemmerung."

Current Music News

Izler Solomon, who will fulfill his usual duties as conductor of the Illinois Symphony orchestra in the Great Northern theater this afternoon, has been signally honored. For on Aug. 6 and 13 he will conduct no less an organization than the NBC Symphony orchestra on two of its Sunday broadcasts during the summer.

On today's program he will be concerned with three works—the first performance of Rossetter Cole's "Heroic Piece," Robert Russell Bennett's "Abraham Lincoln" symphony and Dohnányi's violin concerto, in which the soloist will be Herman Clebanoff. The first item is not to be confused with the Chicago composer's other piece of the same name for organ and orchestra, first performed in 1924.

The annual May festival of the Chicago Dance council will take place in the Goodman theater on Friday. Performers on this concert are local dance groups and soloists selected by the council through auditions. They include such ensembles as those from Northwestern university, and those directed by Frances Allis and Ana Kurgans. This event will bring the council's 1938-'39 season to a close.

At the Auditorium recital hall Grace Judd Zapel, lyric soprano, will give her annual recital today. Her extensive program includes arias from Haydn's "The Creation," and operas by Massenet and Ponchielli, and a standard array of German, French, English, and Italian songs. Robert Childe is the accompanist.

A benefit concert for European refugees will be given tonight in Kimball hall by Lillian Levinson and Eleanor Edelheit, duo-pianists, and Jacques Amada, tenor. The two-piano music ranges from Scarlatti and Rameau to Chabrier and Lecuona. Songs by Giordani, Secchi, Tosti, Handel, and Denza are listed in the tenor's groups.

On Monday night in the same hall, Kimball, the Van Dusen Organ club will present Edward Eigenschenk and William and Edith Barnes in a program of organ solos and organ and piano duets. Proceeds of the recital will go to the scholarship fund of the club.

An employé organization of 60 mixed voices, the Milwaukee Road Choral club, will sing in Kimball hall on Tuesday night. Clemens A. Hutter and Gladys Lund are director and accompanist for the group. Assisting artists on the program are Naomi Johnson, soprano, and Adrian Da Prato, violinist.

The Chicago Woman's Symphony orchestra will desert the Auditorium theater for Orchestra hall next season. They have already leased the latter place for four Tuesday nights [chosen so as not to conflict with the Tuesday concerts of the Chicago Symphony orchestra], the first of which is Oct. 17. Izler Solomon will conduct the orchestra for a second season, Mrs. Royden J. Keith will continue as president of the board of directors, and Mrs. James G. Shakman as vice president heading the associate board. The orchestra will soon begin rehearsals for participation in the summer concerts at Grant park.

La Verne Becwar, Richard Feinberg, Oland Gaston Jr., Jackie Davie, Harriet Fingerhut, Shirley Madeline Effenbach, pianists, and Raymond Niwa, and Marvin Ziporyn, violinist, will appear under Bertha Ott's direction in concert at Kimball hall on Friday, June 2. They are winners of the student contests of the Society of American Musicians.

A piano recital by Hannah Shaykin is scheduled for May 23 in Kimball hall.

Concert Today to Give Faure a Place in Sun

By Cecil Smith.

In Rockefeller Memorial chapel out on the University of Chicago campus this afternoon and tomorrow evening a great choral work will be performed, most of which has never been heard in Chicago. This work is the "Requiem" of Gabriel Fauré. The participants in the performance will be the University of Chicago choir; the Chicago Teachers' college choir, David Nyvall Jr., director; the University of Chicago Symphony orchestra, Siegmund Levarie, conductor; Homer Ulrich, assistant conductor, and Frederick Marriott, organist. Agatha Lewis will be soprano soloist both times. Claude Smith will sing the baritone solos Sunday afternoon, and Arlan Baillie Monday evening. Mack Evans, director of the university choir, will conduct both performances. Admission is free.

Although occasional songs find their way onto recital programs, and on rare instances one or another of his chamber works is brought forward, Fauré is still virtually an unknown composer in Chicago. If he were some relatively obscure or provincial French second rater, this situation would be understandable.

In point of fact, however, the passage of time may establish Fauré as the greatest composer of late nineteenth and early twentieth century France, even surpassing such popular favorites as Franck, Debussy, and Ravel. In France he has long since been regarded as a national hero. His funeral in 1924 was a state occasion. Two years before his death he received the unusual honor of a national homage at the Sorbonne. In 1910, when he was 65, he was elected to the Legion of Honor. From 1905 to 1920 he was director of the Paris Conservatoire, the leading music school of France.

Fauré was born in 1845—ten years later than Saint-Saëns and twenty-three later than César Franck. By the time he was thirty he had already gained a reputation for some gracious salon pieces for pianoforte, some songs, and two or three lyrical chamber works. From this time until nearly the day of his death he worked quietly, unsensationally at composing. There was no drama in his musical career, and very little in his personal life.

But always Fauré set for himself a high standard of perfection, of clarity and transparency, of economy of means and sincerity of matter. From beginning to end he seemed to follow a single straight line of artistic development, as though he had known early in life what he wanted his mature music to be like.

The music of Fauré does not force itself upon the listener by startling or aggressive effects. Rather it depends upon a purity of musical line more like that of Chausson than of any other French composer, and upon subtly insinuating devices of harmonic color and rhythmic flexibility. His style has been illuminatingly characterized by Emile Vuillermoz in a passage translated by Edward Burlingame Hill:

"For, let us not deceive ourselves. Fauré was not a simple precursor, a pioneer whose path was enlarged by better equipped explorers. He was a musician who, a quarter of a century in advance of other composers, spoke freely a prophetic language with an ease, a virtuosity and an elegance which have never been surpassed. He possesses so strong a personality, in spite of his discretion, that he could escape all the influences from which his contemporaries did not always succeed in freeing themselves.

"In the midst of the Wagnerian epidemic, when Saint-Saëns, Franck, Massenet, d'Indy, Chabrier and Duparc did not actually succumb, but were all affected by the contagion, he remained refractory toward the virulent romantic microbe, and preserved all his intellectual independence and all his racial sanity. During the epoch when the pupils of César Franck, notwithstanding their demonstrative nationalism, were ingeniously Teutonizing our art, Gabriel Fauré, without professions of faith, without dogmas and without a catechism of industry, was the veritable guardian of our national traditions."

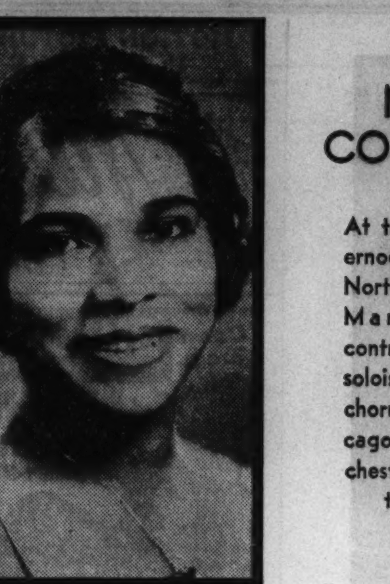
The general description of M. Vuillermoz applies to the specific case of the "Requiem." In 1887, when the work was completed, French music was in the grip of the Teutonism mentioned in the last paragraph. The witty, sparkling Emmanuel Chabrier had just fallen off the deep end with a stolid, uninspired grand opera in the Wagnerian manner, replete with leading motives and heavy orchestration, called "Gwendoline." Within two years Vincent d'Indy was to follow suit by beginning work on his ponderous "Fervaal." In 1888 the famous César Franck symphony was to appear, with its Wagnerian brass and super-Teutonism of intellectual structure.

Yet in the face of so wholesale a desertion of a Gallic style, Gabriel Fauré almost alone retained his interest in purity of lyric line, in simplicity of workmanship, and in reticence of harmony.

The artistic supremacy of the Fauré "Requiem" would have been impossible, of course, if the composer had not been possessed of one of the rarest melodic gifts in the history of music. The score contains page after page of the most seraphic melodies, exquisite in contour and immediate in emotional appeal. I am inclined to think that the soprano solo, "Pie Jesu," and the closing chorus, "In Paradisum," are not merely two peaks of French musical achievement, but rather two of the most beautiful pieces of music ever written by any one in any time or place.



NOTED CONTRALTO

At the Saturday afternoon concert of the North Shore festival Marian Anderson, contralto, will be the soloist. A children's chorus and the Chicago Symphony orchestra are also on the program.

How to Bolster Democracy Is College Theme

Dr. Evans' booklet on methods of selection of a college or university may be purchased at Tribune Public Service offices for 10 cents, or 15 cents by mail. He will answer questions concerning colleges and universities, but will not recommend any specific institution.

By the Rev. John Evans.

Two leading educational institutions in this area have announced summer sessions to uphold and strengthen the principles of American democracy in every branch of education.

Northwestern university will hold an institute, June 19 to Aug. 12, on the general theme, "Contemporary Problems of Democracy," and at the University of Chicago, July 17 to 21, the administrative officers of public and private will meet in a conference whose keynote is "a sound rooting of democracy in the nation's schools."

"One of the most important parts of educational administration today," said Dr. Willliam C. Reavis, in charge of the latter event, "is to utilize all talents and abilities in administration. This isn't done when you have a dictatorial plan of administration."

Dr. Reavis explained that the conference is designed to help principals and superintendents to see the possibilities inherent in drawing fully upon staff members under democratic principles and at the same time getting pupils to assume responsibilities under democratic plans.

The institute at Northwestern university is under the ægis of the social science departments. These departments have coöperated to select visiting professors whose researches in the problems of democratic government are universally accepted in the academic world.

"To assume that the democratic forms of government will automatically persist," reads the institute's preliminary announcement, "despite the efforts made by opposing forms of government where vastly different ideas and ideals prevail concerning the functions of government, appears to be nothing short of folly."

To substantiate the folly of this assumption, the announcement quotes Dr. Rosenberg, editor of the Völkischer Beobachter, "The allies' main objective in the world war was the preservation of democracy. They won the war, but they lost the intellectual struggle."

It may be conceded that democracy is a relatively inefficient form of government, but it is for America the most desirable. It is, therefore, the intent of this Institute of Democracy at Northwestern university thoroughly to explore the apothegm "Eternal Vigilance Is the Price of Liberty."

About Women

When he was down in Washington watching President and Mrs. Roosevelt and others pay tribute to Rachel Crothers, whose most recent success was "Susan and God," John Golden had this to say about women playwrights—Miss Crothers, naturally, excepted:

"Women cannot write great plays. Great in the sense that the fundamentals of life are employed to develop the characters. I'll grant them the essentials of brilliant dialog—of frequently flashing humor—and it is the most natural and beautiful thing in the world for a highly cultured, intellectual woman to reveal the one great emotion of which she is capable—love. But underneath all their artistry a distinguishable weakness is the feminine touch of softness and frailty of purpose—the unconscious leaning toward sympathy with her own villain, however black his mustache may be painted."

Good Morning!

Well, you should just see Bing Crosby's new co-star!

Only 10 months old, but WHAT a he vamp! Sandy Henville is the name. He and Mischa Auer just about steal the show . . . which fact seems perfectly agreeable to Mr. Crosby, who meanders through the action singing lullabies, giving good advice, and making merry but effective love to the always glamorous Joan Blondell.

When the story opens Bing is seen as a singing telegraph messenger who croons personal greetings. . . . His buttings-in on the affairs of a certain rich man, that rich man's playboy son and a daughter-in-law about to leave same son result in Denny Martin's being fired. But he lands on his feet—or his seat?—for he becomes a singing taxi driver. As such he finds himself with a bebby on his hands—deposited there by none other than the aforementioned daughter-in-law.

The adventures of Denny, Nicky, his temperamental astrologer roommate, and the chee-ild—before the last is returned to his rightful habitat—are amusing, especially when Master Baby elects to make himself seen and heard. . . . He IS a lamb! Utterly camera unself-conscious. This fact is probably due to the Crosby handling—for Bing, you know, is the papa of four—and his technique OUGHT to be good!

Then, of course, there's Joan, who's a real life mamma. As Bing's hotel switchboard sweetie she is snappy and charming.

Irene Hervey is appealing as the baby's mother. Jerome Cowan portrays a narsty man [gossip columnist] narstily. All other players are tops.

The piece, if brief, has several hummable tunes, a number of laughs, and is, all in all, crisply acceptable spring filmfare.

See you tomorrow.

Berkshire

One of the best and most active of the summer theaters, the Berkshire playhouse of Stockbridge, Mass., has an interesting lineup for the coming season, opening June 26. There will be Thornton Wilder in his own play, "Our Town;" Florence Reed in "The Circle;" Jane Cowl in one of her successes, "First Lady;" Fred Stone in "Ah, Wilderness," and Whitford Kane in "The White Steed." A pair of tryouts may be made, although none is as yet scheduled. William M. Miles is directing the productions, and Al Ward is designing the sets. In the troupe are Helen Brooks, Ann Mason, Ethel Wilson, King Calder, Emmett Rogers, and Judson Laire. The theater has been renovated and enlarged.

Duchesse de Talleyrand to Make Residence in America

By May Birkhead

PARIS.—"In less troubled times this item would have had more attention."

Such is the comment often made these days in the Parisian press concerning some well known figure. What a lot of reflections come to mind with the announcement that the Duchesse de Talleyrand is quitting her residences in France and going to live in America! For nearly two decades before the war, and during another ten years after that cataclysm, few persons received more publicity about their public and private ways. As one of the earliest American heiresses to make a striking international match, when she married the already famous Boni de Castellane in the mid-nineties, she seemed fated to attract the limelight.

With her millions Boni cut a tremendous swath around the turn of the century. Those who know her realize how little she relished this perpetual chronicle of her doings, but the stage was set in a way that made escape impossible. In time the duchesse became a sort of legend to the public. It was figured that she would dine only off gold plate and that she thought only of leading an existence compatible with the glamorous background that had been built up around her.

In reality the duchesse was only too glad to escape from this burdensome rôle of an overpublicized personality. To be sure, she appeared at the opera in Paris on Monday nights, one of the fashionable subscription occasions of the week, but that was because she liked good music. By her second marriage, to the Duc de Talleyrand, she had a chance to enjoy a simpler existence than as the wife of the sensational Boni de Castellane. She often invited persons of no particular celebrity simply because they had expressed to her friends a wish to see the marvelous interior of the pink marble structure on the Avenue du Bois. There her dinners, while simple, would be served on gold plate, but the quality of the food reached the ultimate, for the Duc de Talleyrand knew from what place in Europe the best could be had, and his cellar, which he had had placed very deep under the house, was acknowledged to be one of the finest in the world. There seemed to be no secret of food or wine which the duc did not know.

Until his death a few years ago he and the duchesse spent a great deal of time at the Château du Marais, about fifty miles from Paris. Its remarkable gardens and its historic mirror pond caused it to be visited each summer by a group of French chatelains and chatelaines who constituted a group for making the rounds of the best kept properties. There the duc exercised his gift for château decoration and discreetly modernized the residence while maintaining all its old cachet.

During the last few years the duchesse has spent a great deal of time at her place on the Riviera. The death of the duc was a great grief to her. With the repute of her wealth, she was constantly besieged for charitable aid. During the war and afterward she took special interest in those who had been blinded in battle. And no one ever will know the extent of her private charity. Many gifts she made on the express condition that the donor never should be known, and she took great care that help should be conveyed with great delicacy to the unfortunate victims of the war.

Miss Helen Chancellor is another debutante of last season whose good work as a charity worker has caused her to become a member of the board of directors of the Service club. She, too, is a worker at Emerson house. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Justus Chancellor III. of Winnetka.

Miss Katherine Littlefield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Littlefield of Winnetka, made her debut only last fall, but her work for the Service club has resulted in her election to the board. She also is active at Emerson house.

Susan Roessler, left, and Betsy Nance are glad that summer is on the way, so they may spend all day playing out of doors. Their mothers, Mrs. Ernest C. Roessler and Mrs. Willis D. Nance, are on the large committee in charge of a dinner-dance to be given at the Skokie Country club on June 9 for the benefit of the Gads Hill settlement.

City's Leading Citizens Fete Norse Royalty

By Cousin Eve.

The dinner for Norway's royalties, Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha was beautifully done. At the Palmer House, in its silver ballroom, transformed for the time into a royal banquet hall with gorgeous royal red velvet background, the prancing gold griffon of Norway's shield over the royal heads, and masses of spring's brightest flowers on the sea of tables, it went forward in the liveliest way. First there was a reception where a hundred leading citizens were asked to meet the handsome royal guests. Mrs. Sigurd Maseng, wife of Norway's consul general made the presentations, first to the princess, a gracious brunette, lovely as a story book queen in white crêpe shimmering with diamante, a little tiara of diamonds, a necklace of diamonds and cluster ribbons and decorations at the left of her corsage, and then to the prince. The crown prince, blond, with regular features, and like his wife, of medium height, wore the broad red ribbon and shining star of some order over his uniform. Prince Olav is the only son of the late Queen Maud, an English princess, and therefore is a nephew of the late King George V., and first cousin of the present British monarch, George VI., now on his way to the beautiful old French Canadian capital, Quebec, with Queen Elizabeth.

Standing opposite the royal couple were William Morgenstierne, Norwegian minister at Washington, who looked as if he had stepped out of an old picture, and members of the suite: Maj. and Mrs. Ramm Ostgaard and Capt. Nils Ramm, all distinguished and elegant types, speaking perfect English. With them stood Mrs. Gosta Oldenberg, beautiful wife of the Swedish consul, in sapphire blue tulle with wrap of blue feathers.

White was the favorite, however. Mrs. Edward Kelly, wife of the mayor, wore the simplest of white crêpe frocks, and Mrs. Admiral Ellis and Mrs. Gen. Ford, flowered prints. The speaker's table was very grand with much goodly company including the mayor, the army and navy with all their gold lace and decorations, the new senator from Wisconsin, Alexander Wiley of Norwegian descent, a true orator, Hon. J. A. O. Preus, who was a clever toastmaster, the Norwegian minister, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Andersen, and the royal suite.

The music was confined to a fine symphonic group which was an excellent idea, as they tactfully softpedalled their tunes during dinner. Several arias were sung by an interesting blonde, Jean Tennyson, said to be of Norwegian descent. Laughs were many during dinner. Chairman Preus in describing the crown prince said he was the grandfather of King Edward VII. of England, which was an amusing thought. And at the sublime moment of the parade of the ice creams, headed by the American eagle and Norway's griffon in ice, each borne by a smiling Negro in splendid livery and sash, one boy stumbled on passing the crown prince and nearly lost his frozen cargo. However he executed a clever quick step and even saved the knife from the floor without losing his place. This brought smiles to the royal couple, who were beating time for the parade with 1,500 other guests. The speeches were good. Mayor Kelly proved he was of Norwegian descent, and the crown prince reviewed the early settlers of North America of the Viking race, who seem to have been many. Among the guests at the tables in front of the royal party were Dr. and Mrs. Riemund Baumann, the Gosta Oldenbergs, Dr. and Mrs. William F. Petersen, Edward Petersen, Commander and Mrs. Thomas Binford, aid to Admiral Ellis, and Maj. and Mrs. Lloyd Besse, aid to Gen. Stanley Ford.

The fashionable clubs are folding up these days in tar paper and moth balls. The most sportive of May day celebrations was "the Scribblers" at the Arts club. It was called "First Night at Grand Opera." As no men are ever present, members don't care how they look or what they wear, and the results are marvellous. Wigs were many at this party. Some of the guests were got up as Chicago's leading music critics, and the exotic finery worn was a credit to the thrift of the Scribblers who evidently remember posterity and save outstanding gowns from various epochs.

The Fortnightly closed its season last week with one of its delectable May day meetings, when members bring from their beautiful suburban gardens branches of flowering fruit trees, jonquils, and purple iris. Several members had large luncheons in the private rooms of the old house. Among these members, none more distinguished than Mrs. William Hubbard, whose latest book of poems, "Twelve Moods in Rhythm," in sea green jacket is now upon the ways. Not being much of a hound for poetry or even verse, it startled me to find such fascination in Mrs. Hubbard's writing moods, which are far from the beaten track of mere rhyming, and fling themselves gorgeously into life.

They say that all of us have a romantic novel concealed upon our person, but how many can turn to account and so wittily "The Traveler's Lament," an incident of continental travel?

"Rows of stockings and lingerie,
Discreetly hung on a balcony.
A considerable task and neatly done,
Swinging and drying in the sun. . . .
Madame, madame, qu'est-ce que c'est?
Votre linge, she all fly away."

The May day program which wound up the season was a song recital by Kathryn Witwer, so often heard in recitals of John Alden Carpenter's songs. And indeed she sang that day two songs of his with words, from the Chinese. Mrs. Allyn Warren, president of the Fortnightly, introduced Miss Witwer as a member of the Chicago Opera company, and the singer showed her versatility in singing from the French, Russian and German as well.

The usual large, smart audience filled the small Goodman theater for the next to last of Georges Cauuet's "Little Mondays." There were three comedies expertly given by American men and women who speak perfectly the French language. Alfred de Musset's "May Night," a sort of rhapsody, was presented by Olive Moore arranged in Greek draperies playing opposite M. Cauuet. The second act was a group of sketches written and performed by Mrs. Laird Bell. The first was a marvellous picture, to the life, of a French caretaker in an old château, acting as a guide. Next came an American woman living in a Paris boarding house or pension. "No, madame, we do not eat rabbit in American," was a classical line.

The third was a wordless sketch called "At the Symphony." In this a woman, impersonated by Mrs. Bell, sitting with her back to the audience, is fussily preparing to take her departure from the concert. The most exalted of Wagner's music, the love music from Tristan, comes surging forth from a hidden orchestral record behind the curtain, and the actress makes her exit after dropping her furs and purse and pushing by her neighbors. The last was an old favorite "la Couturiere," a clever satire.

In fact they were all the best of fun, a delicate humor that made the audience rock, for after all, they knew their France. René Weiller was in the audience, and Mrs. Howard Linn, president of the "Petits Lundis," who made a graceful French speech, and John Root, who had come to see his daughter, Denise, in a farce "La Ménagère Apprivoisée." This was a pocket edition of Taming the Shrew and included also Monique Storrs and William Hawkins. The two girls have spent their lives in France so their excellent diction carried their lines through the theater.

The Red Cross luncheon at the Blackstone was a beautiful, vibrant party, if highly emotional. Besides being an annual meeting, with James B. Forgan reëlected to a third term as chairman, supported by a board of eminent citizens, it was the beginning of farewells for James Nicholson, filched from our local chapter by Norman H. Davis, no less, national president of the Red Cross. Mr. Davis is, according to Mr. Forgan, a clever man who was not long in discovering that our Mr. Nicholson was the very head he needed for the National Junior Red Cross in Washington.

To describe the color of this luncheon, the gray ladies in crisp veils, the blue and red veiled ladies, the red and white flowers and flags, the tears after James Nicholson had read his report with faltering voice at the end, were a long and detailed story. The speakers' table was replete with personalities. Under red veils were Mrs. Frederic Upham, Mrs. Richard T. Crane, Mrs. C. Garfield King. Shrouded in gray was Irene Sidley, and others in the high seats were Mr. and Mrs. James Forgan, the Rev. Dr. Dudley Stark, Gilbert Scribner, and James Nicholson, with two juniors who addressed the meeting in high young voices.

There was a surprise hidden in this meeting, however, sprung towards the end by Roger Holden, who announced that a gift from the workers of the Chicago chapter was in the offing. Every one was thrilled and guessing: A watch, a clock, a desk set, maybe? But no. In marched two junior members carrying two magnificent flags, the Stars and Stripes and the Red Cross emblem. This was a signal for more near tears, and the meeting was adjourned in the sad sense of our local loss, but of a splendid future for James Nicholson.

Sitting near me was a very charming blue eyed matron, pretty as a pink, almost new to Chicago, Mrs. John Fennelly. She was once Martha Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Davis, who have roamed Europe of late years as the President's envoys at large. The Davises are now sur la branche in a lovely old house in Alexandria, where the Red Cross delegates were received last week at a charming garden party, with tables set out upon a deep veranda, and guests strolled in an ancient garden. Mr. and Mrs. Fennelly have a house in Lake Forest.

Not so very long ago the three beautiful Frost sisters were belles of Chicago, daughters of the late Mr. and Mrs. Albert Frost. Aerielle married first, becoming Mrs. William Grosvenor of New York. Then Marie became Mrs. Valentine Bartlett of Chicago, and Lucille Frost while visiting the Grosvenors met and married Joseph Frazier, living mostly at Newport since.

Now Aerielle, a lovely daughter of the Fraziers, is about to marry into the titled set of English society. Her fiancé is Michael Strutt, brother of the young duchess of Norfolk, première duchess of England, who was before marriage Lavinia Strutt, a daughter of Lord Belper and one of the hunting set of the north.

Miss Kay Goodman was up to the eyebrows the other day in things red and white for her new kitchen-to-be. She, like all the other presidents of the young set of the Alliance Française, is being married. There seems to be a fatality about it, but hardly does a girl take the high executive office of "les Jeunes" than she gets engaged. Cynthia Cleveland is now taking over, and we may soon be rushing out to buy potato mashers and pie tins for her.

The presents for Kay were portentously piled up on the stage, and she was wearing a chic housewifely apron and a hat over the right eye looking like a head of lettuce. Mme. John Storrs was a helper at opening the gadgets and naming them in French as they popped out of their wrappings. The batterie de cuisine of the Garfield King new menage is certainly very chic. After all this excitement before a large audience sitting enthralled at such opulent kitchen ware, Mlle. Joan Alizier, one of the infant prodigies of the society, favored it with piano numbers. Present also with La Presidente Mrs. Ralph James was her youngest daughter, Margaret Smith of England, and her daughter Jane, a gay little lass of 5. The Storrs family leaves in a fortnight for their old house in France, Chantecaille on the route of Joan of Arc to Orleans.

John Storrs, eminent sculptor and premier student of Rodin in days gone by, has been doing interesting things in the portrait line this spring, little heads in terra cotta, to be set on small pedestals in the boudoir, heads of women of high fashion, with charming faces full of verve and dreams. One or two may be shown in a few days.

Nobody quite knows why the Antiquarians burst forth in such numbers Tuesday at the Art Institute. There wasn't room enough for such popularity; not enough chairs to seat the audience for Daniel Rich's lecture, and streams of ladies in gay spring hats were promenading in the little English street. This memorial room of beautiful doorways had been banked with potted flowers and fragrant hedges, in the manner of an English spring. And the chef d'œuvre was a florist's window with an arrangement of geraniums, daisies, and fuchsias, designed by Suzette Dewey prior to a trip to Poland. This was cunningly contrived, and the whole scheme of the street filled the air with May, while out in the formal court young trees were budding and the Milles fountain splashed noisily.

Curator of Fine Arts Dan Rich spoke on the progressive stages of the Art Institute, illustrating with slides so that all could see. There were the oldtime rooms of the Antiquarians with cases of fabrics for reference and study. Then more recent rooms with glass cases and palms to break their monotony. Later on the rage for complete rooms furnished in periods, and the amusing comment of a critic at seeing a galaxy of dinings rooms in an Ohio museum with, however, only one bedroom setting forth an early American house. Said he, "Whatever did the early settlers do with so many dining rooms and only one bedroom?"

Mr. Rich's last picture was one of our beautiful museum galleries with its magnificent purchases ranged according to period and the dictates of good taste.

Pouring tea, Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick, Mrs. Kersey Reed, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick. Receiving very graciously: Mrs. Phillip Miller, and wearing the very same chic spring tailleur of black and white silk, Mesdames Reed, Patterson, Clive Runnells, Alden Swith. Present among the beaux: Charles Worcester, Walter Brewster, Potter Palmer, Charles F. Kelley, Dudley Crafts Watson.

ENGAGED TO MARRY

Card Party Is to Aid Service Council Work

Mrs. Frank W. Specht.

The Service Council for Girls will give its annual card party at 1:30 o'clock Friday at the Southmoor hotel. There will be prizes and tea will be served. Clothing and summer recreation for the young girls in the council's care will be provided through proceeds of the event.

In 1925 this Protestant Big Sisters' organization was formed at the suggestion of Judge Mary M. Bartelme of the Juvenile court. She is honorary president of the council. Between fifty-five and sixty-five girls, most of them orphans or from broken homes, are afforded educational opportunities, recreation, and necessities such as school books, carfare, and clothing through the council's efforts. They are members of a club which meets twice each month and includes publishing a newspaper among its activities.

Mrs. Frank M. Specht recently was elected president to succeed Mrs. Burnett D. Warner, who headed the council for two years prior to her election this spring as president of the Chicago Woman's club. Mrs. Specht has appointed Mrs. Franklin C. Wagner chairman of the card party.

Assisting with arrangements are Mrs. Albert Held, Mrs. Milton S. Yondorf, Mrs. Guy Phelps, Mrs. Walter D. Krupke, Mrs. R. James Larsen, and Mrs. James Brinn.

Rest Haven Convalescent home, 1919 Prairie avenue, and its affiliated organizations will hold their annual Silver Plate banquet next Sunday in the grand ballroom of the Palmer House. The event will climax the earning fund drive of these organizations. Proceeds of the dinner also will be used to maintain the home, which each year helps more than 500 adults and children to regain their health. Mrs. H. W. Solomon is in charge of the banquet, with Mrs. Jacob S. Pohn among those assisting. Mrs. Ralph H. Sherman is chairman of the home.

Plans for a bridge luncheon, to be given Oct. 24 at the Congress hotel, will be discussed by the board of directors of the Martha Washington Club and Home for Dependent Crippled Children at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow at the Blackstone hotel. Mrs. Edward J. Marum, ways and means chairman, will be in charge of this benefit.

The Daughters of Jacob will give a luncheon and card party for the benefit of their day and night nursery Tuesday at the home, 6401 South Peoria street. Mrs. Anna Weinthal will be hostess.

REMODELING

IF YOUR FUR COAT IS STILL GOOD . . . BUT THE STYLE PASSE

The new saucy shoulders and tiny almost non-existent collars on the coat you put on next fall will make your friends think you horribly extravagant for buying a new coat when your old one had so much good wear in it. (You needn't tell them the truth).

A miracle! that's what you'll say when you see how our skilled fur designers can transform your outmoded Persian Lamb or Hudson Seal coat into a vision of up-to-the-minute smartness without the addition of new skins. The price? Just $90.00, including an individually designed canvas and new lining.

Chicagoans in Federation's Music Contest

By Betty Browning.

Two young Chicagoans will have a chance at fame—and $1,000—this week in Baltimore, Md., where the National Federation of Music Clubs will open its biennial convention tomorrow.

Miss Elizabeth Brown, singer, and David Molt, violinist, each will compete with 13 other district winners from all parts of the country in finals of the national young artists' contests sponsored by the federation. An award of $1,000 goes to the outstanding entrant in each of three divisions, voice, violin, and piano.

In addition, the outstanding instrumentalist will be presented in concert with the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra in both Philadelphia and New York. For yet another winner a concert tour will be arranged without expense to him.

The winning artists will be presented at the final banquet Monday, May 22. This program will be broadcast. Other interesting events on the convention program will be a concert by the mammoth national chorus of men and women singers, who have been practicing the same songs in sectional groups from coast to coast. Junior members will present Edgar Stillman Kelley's cantata, "Beauty and the Beast."

Six former young artist winners, among them Alexander Gray, baritone, also will appear on the program.

Two days after the convention closes, on May 24, the federation will have its official day at the New York World's Fair. The national chorus will sing under J. Warren Erb's direction.

Representing Chicago at the convention will be Mrs. Frank P. Whitmore, Chicago district president of the Illinois Federation of Music Clubs; Mrs. Louis Yager, Mrs. Samuel V. Robuck, Mrs. James Moore, Mrs. John Hattstaedt, Mrs. Henry Date, Mrs. Alma Anderson, Mrs. Mary Fowler, and Miss Irene Coffin.

Iota Alpha chapter of Mu Phi Epsilon, national music honor society, will hold its anual spring luncheon and musical at 12:30 o'clock Wednesday at the Cordon club. Alec Templeton, patron of the sorority, will be a guest. Linda Sool, violinist; Elizabeth Olk Roehlk, cellist; and Elva Gamble, soprano, will give a program. De Paul Settlement Opens Its New Day Nursery This Week

The formal opening of the new De Paul Settlement and Day Nursery will be held next Wednesday in the nursery's beautiful modern building at 2141 North Halsted street. The present building will be the third home of the nursery, which was established in 1915 by the Very Rev. Francis X. McCabe, at that time president of De Paul university and pastor of St. Vincent's church.

For several years Father McCabe had realized the need of a day nursery in his parish, so that women who were obliged to receive charity could support themselves if they had a place to leave their children while they were at work. The nursery was started in a frame building belonging to St. Joseph's hospital. Later this house was torn down and a new and larger building put up, which was opened and blessed in 1923.

So that there would be no interruption in the work done by the nursery, the Sisters and their charges occupied a vacant police station just across the street while the second home was being built. In addition to caring for children, the Sisters visit the poor in their homes and distribute necessary clothes to those applying at the settlement.

Portulacas Give the Best Blooms in Fall Season

Portulacas, although they like a sunny, well-drained position, are never finer than during the fall when cooling nights give the plants an opportunity to develop flowers of large size. Often the double forms come single during the hot weather but, with the arrival of the cooler season, the flowers show their typical double characteristics.

Art Institute Publishes New, Amusing Quiz

By Eleanor Jewett.

The Art institute has published an amusing "Art Quiz" which should prove a fascinating after dinner game. Miss Helen Parker, head of the educational department of the institute, wrote the questions and answers. They are very clever and not too difficult.

If you do not happen to know the answers it is just as well, because in looking them up [they are printed at the end of the booklet] you will learn them and then if your friends have not played the game how you can astonish them by your cultural knowledge! It is a grand thing for children and young people as well as parents and all those interested in art, no matter what their family relations.

Offhand, do you know what President of the United States was an architect? [Neither do I]. "What is the most famous hour in art and who made it so?" My guess is the hour of midnight because of Rembrandt's "Midnight Watch." Now here is a hard one: "What is it that is first bitten and then bathed?" You will have to know about prints to get that right. "What architectural structure sounds like a snake?" Neither do I. "Take 'd' away from a color and what great architect's first name have you?" I should have to think a bit first on this.

"What kind of a picture gallery will you find at Altamira, Spain?" Well, what kind? "On what cathedral is the "Butter tower"? [Doesn't Miss Parker know any easy ones?] "What famous watch was painted and who painted it?" Goodness! Does she mean Dali's bent watch or is this the time to drag in the "Midnight Watch"?

Twenty years an art critic and Miss Parker stumps me. But the thing sounds like a good idea and if you want to give a party there is a lot of fun in this kind of question; you will sharpen your wits and enlarge your fund of useful knowledge at the same time. The quiz is on sale at the Art institute for 15 cents. The money will be used to further the activities of the department of education.

This venture by the Art institute is the kind of popular step that if continued through other activities can develop in our minds that personal ownership feeling in the museum which is so necessary for the best coöperation between it and the public. Instead of a smoldering hostility which lies latent in many breasts, the Art institute could inspire friendly sentiments with just a little change on its part. It could become not THE Art institute, but OUR Art institute.

The merest gesture on its part could arouse an ever growing trust and enthusiasm. For instance, what but good would be done if each year the Art institute held a small invited show in honor of a veteran Chicago artist? There are not so many painters and sculptors over sixty that it would strain the institute's gallery space if even there was a progressive "courtesy" exhibit through the year.

And in the contemporary shows, would it be too much to ask that the radical paintings be hung apart from the modern work of good quality? There is not a reader but knows what the distinction signifies. Could not the students be limited while they are students to their student show of June? Could not the Chicago show be by jury only, so that we would not find repeated that unfortunate kindness of last February when a WPA picture from Milwaukee was present by invitation? Chicago and vicinity: How far does "vicinity" reach? Milwaukee seems to us rather far away when there are as many painters as there are nearer home who do not find representation in an exhibit which is primarily felt as a home show.

The vital question of the appointing of a jury is being thrashed out now from various angles. The Art institute is trying to learn the opinions of the different artist organizations. The Association of Painters and Sculptors, of which Charles Sneed Williams is the new president, has outlined a series of interesting thoughts on the subject. Undoubtedly the Chicago Society of Artists will have its opinion. Some way must be found out of the impasse which is now giving us unrepresentative shows year after year.

Probably enough suggestions already have been submitted here today, but we wonder what would be the reaction on the part of those interested in good art if the institute should arrange a series of American exhibits in which various great [we use the adjective deliberately] American artists were featured? In the current Sanity in Art exhibit at the Stevens hotel there are two outstanding paintings—a magnificent landscape by Chauncey Ryder and the "Old Mexican House" by Fechin. Fechin shows another startlingly fine canvas, too—a landscape of decorative quality. Would it not be worth while to arrange a Ryder show? And a Fechin show? As a start we limit our suggestion to these two names, although the list could be lengthened in a flash.

Just as a change from the eternal round of French pictures, the Picasso shows and the Matisse, Derain, Segonzac, etc., etc., etc., try putting the best of American painting before Chicago! If this is too radical, run an American and a French show simultaneously, but watch the caliber of the American show. It should no longer be enough that the artist is long on color but short on drawing to put him over; splashy, inconsidered bursts of paint should be based on something more serious than their appeal to the eye; bad painting should not be an asset; stupidity and triteness should be barred no matter how exotically they are concealed. In fact radical painting should be put on its guard and forced to improve its quality; we know its quantity is beyond improvement.

At the Drake hotel the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts is sponsoring a memorial exhibition of paintings and portraits by Carl Olsen. It is a worth while show; a number of the still lifes are very lovely.

The Arché club of Chicago made a gift of $1,000 as an endowment fund to be used for the department of education of the Art institute, in commemoration of its fiftieth anniversary. Mrs. Walter E. Johnson, president of the club, presented the money to Mr. Rich, director of the institute. Some 25 years ago, the late Mrs. Herman J. Hall, a member of the Art institute staff, was the Arché club's first president and through her efforts the department of education at the institute was founded. After her death in 1924 Miss Helen Parker became head of the department and has since greatly broadened its activities and usefulness.

The Art institute has suffered a tragic loss this spring through the death of Miss Bessie Bennett, curator of the decorative arts department, an endless fund of strength upon which all drew. Her enthusiasm and her knowledge made her invaluable as a worker. Her department increased in value and interest immeasurably under her intelligent direction. The exhibitions of ceramics and handicrafts which she planned for and installed long will be remembered as among the finest and most beautiful exhibitions the museum has ever held.

As a connoisseur, as a friend, as a person, Miss Bennett will stand in the memories of all who knew her, unchanged and unchanging as the years go on—a splendid, inspiring figure. With Bill McKee Miss Bennett will epitomize for us the fine human element which enlarges the institute from a building of stone and theories into something personal, intimate, jolly and great—where everything works together for good. Through their deaths the institute has lost two grand people. And those who knew them have lost two irreplaceable friends.

Mother's Riches

By Eleanor Jewett.

She thought to hide behind a frown,
She thought to hide behind a tear—
Our little laughing five-year-old—
But Mother only held her near
And kissed away the ugly frown
And dried with kisses the small tear.
"I dare not lose you," Mother said,
"You are a treasure much too dear!"

When Chicago Was Young:

Emma Abbott's funeral left city saddened.

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Jan. 9, 1891.

Dear Julia: I suppose you have often heard Emma Abbott, the opera singer, who did much to popularize light opera in this country. I attended her funeral this afternoon, in Central Music hall. She died two days ago in Salt Lake City, but the funeral was held here, as her family lives in Chicago. The final interment will be in Gloucester, Mass., where she had just erected a magnificent mausoleum for her husband, Eugene Weatherell, who was her manager and whom she married in 1878.

Chicago mourns her comparatively early death, for she was born here on Kinzie street, not far from where we live. I was amazed to learn that she has left a fortune estimated at between two and four millions, though she started life as a poor and unknown girl, her father having been a music teacher here.

The flowers at the funeral today were truly remarkable in their profusion, a perfect bower being made of the platform. In the center stood a lyre made of flowers, the design being the musical symbol which indicates a "rest." Harrison Wild played Schubert's mournful funeral march, and the crowd was much affected by it.

Prof. Swing and Dr. H. W. Thomas, two of our prominent independent pastors, conducted the services. Dr. Thomas' eulogy was eloquent. He said of Miss Abbott that she would not play on the Sabath, but used the day for rest and worship. She was warmhearted and generous and did much to aid members of her profession who were in need. She lived, said Dr. Thomas, a life of faith and prayer and her last words were: "I shall sing my next song in heaven. I am not afraid to die."

I am writing this in the back room of a fine tailoring establishment on Dearborn street, at the corner of Madison street, where Will is selecting material for a new suit, to be made by James Conlan. Very well dressed is my husband, if I do say it, and Mr. Conlan may take the credit for this, because he has a good shop, with excellent goods to choose from.

I feel a little out of my sphere in a shop devoted to men's wear, but I grew cold waiting outside in the carriage and so I sent Michael to a nearby livery stable, where he and the horses can keep warm and accepted Mr. Conlan's invitation to sit in a small room where I could be by myself. I brought my letter paper inside with me. From the other side of the wooden partition, which comes up about six feet, and beyond which the masculine mind is supposed to be debating the respective merits of broadcloth and tweed, I hear many personalities, for Will and Mr. Conlan have mutual acquaintances, several of his customers being clients of Will's.

Mr. Conlan, a devoted parishioner of Holy Name cathedral and head usher there, knows every one: E. O. Brown, who married a Miss Eagle; the Daniel Gallery family, prominent in the parish for many years; M. O'Brien, our famous art dealer; J. B. Inderrieden, wholesale grocer; the Mulligans, children of the beloved Col. Mulligan, who died heroically in the civil war; the Michael Kerwins; R. M. Hooley, theatrical manager; the Prindivilles; the W. J. Quans; the Hesing family, prominent in politics, the father being editor of the Staats-Zeitung . . . all of these are members of Holy Name parish, the largest Catholic church, I suppose, in the city. It is, at any rate, the most fashionable of that faith. I don't know when I can get Will to leave, for he enjoys hearing the latest news of his friends just as much as if he were a woman, though men do like to pretend disdain of personalities.

O, now I hear them finishing their conversation. Mr. Conlan will send a boy to summon Michael, he says. So I must close.

Lovingly yours,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOT NOTES.

Emma Abbott [1850-1891] was born in Chicago and made her debut in Peoria as a guitar player and singer, before an audience of coal miners. Henry Ward Beecher and his Brooklyn congregation financed her study in Europe and she returned to America, where she made a great success.

James Conlan, who had a merchant tailoring business on Dearborn street, where the Boston Store now stands, lives at 18 Bellevue place. His long connection with Holy Name parish renders him an encyclopedia of its members. Many of the names mentioned in Martha's letter are still familiar in the Chicago of today. Edward Eagle Brown, son of E. O. Brown, is president of the First National bank; the Gallery family in the fifth generation is still connected with the cathedral; Charles C. Kerwin, a son of Michael Kerwin, is president of the Catholic Charities; the O'Brien art gallery continues in business.

Collectors' Corner.

You can hardly name an article in use in the past which is not being collected today. Here are some hobbies of our readers:

Muriel Hanley, Blue Island, writes: "I collect bookmarks and paper knives. I'm really most interested in old bookmarks, but they are hard to find. One of my favorites is of wood from a house where Washington had headquarters. Another is made of four strands of ribbon, on each of which is printed one of the following lines:

Not mine to say
If the book be good;
I keep my place
As a marker should.

Mrs. J. T. Luscombe, La Grange, collects buttons and has some old and interesting ones, brought from England.

It you have a collection, let us hear of it. Address Herma Clark, The Tribune.

LE GANT*

"This is what gives you a slim waist, Mother—'Sta-Up-Top'!"
"And it's so comfortable, too!"

Daughter knows that Fashion's highlight today is the slender waist. And she has found that "Sta-Up-Top" Le Gant hugs and slims her waist like an extra set of muscles! There are girdles and pantie-girdles, many with "TwoWay-OneWay" for back hip flatness. Like all Le Gants, "Sta-Up-Top" is the corset that's different, because it has the comfort of elastic with the control of cloth.

Both wear A'lure, the s-t-r-e-t-c-h-a-b-l-e bra with "Sta-Up-Band" $3.50. Other A'lures for all figures $1.50 to $5.

"Sta-Up-Top" and other Le Gants—$5 to $35

Paris in Bloom as Springtime Reaches City

By May Birkhead.

PARIS

Every one knows how springtime in Paris has elicited, for generations, the enthusiasm of the writer and the wayfarer. The best thing about it is that it is true. Recent weeks have seen a combination or, rather, an alternation, of winter and summer, instead of a gradual rising of the vernal temperature. But the outward result is what spring always brings to Paris, the trees and flowers budding in the garden of the Tuileries and along the Champs Elysées and the former Avenue du Bois, now Avenue Foch, on the way to the Bois de Boulogne. The warmer days bring out the slow moving crowds who seem to forget all their anxieties when the early splendor gives the great thoroughfares of the city that mantle which, with its architecture, makes Paris unusual.

Recently many of the flâneurs, those who promenade for pleasure, might have been seen within the vast enclosure of the Louvre, and, more particularly, near the famous Arch of the Carrousel. The horses that now surmount it are copied from the statue which Napoleon sent to Paris from St. Mark's, Venice. Some years ago, when it was evident that the arch needed repairs, Thomas Cochran gave half a million francs to have it shored up. But the great attraction in that neighborhood, at the moment, is the mass of glowing tulips, many of brilliant cyclamen shade, that were given to the city of Paris by Holland.

Nearly every one who goes that far in his walk continues to the Seine, where the new Pont du Carrousel, after several years of widening, is almost complete. This bridge is almost double the width of the old structure and is quite as wide as the revamped Concord bridge. The old Pont du Carrousel was thrown across the Seine a hundred years ago, while the Pont Royal, the next one to the west, goes back over 250 years to the middle of the reign of Louis XIV.

The duke and duchess of Windsor, the Marquis and Marquise de Polignac, Comte René de Chambrun and his wife, and other notables attended the reception given at the Plaza-Athénée for James Roosevelt and then went on in the evening to the Biarritz cinema for the first showing in Paris of "Wurthering Heights." In spite of this showmanship the picture is bound to create much interest in Paris, for nearly half a dozen translations of Emily Brontë's novel have been made in Paris in the last few years.

On May 11 Miss Berenice Higgins, the Chicago protégée of Harold McCormick and of Mary Garden, who has been studying operatic rôles in Paris for three years, made her debut in a recital at the Salle Chopin.

BRIDE-TO-BE

Miss Ruth Lever, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Lever of Superior, Wis., will be married on July 12 to Lieut. Donald C. Felton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Felton of Chicago. The ceremony will take place at St. Alban's Episcopal church in Superior.

Porter House Is Link to Past of Lake Geneva

By Rose Cour.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS.

The oldest of the lake shore homes at Lake Geneva and in fact one of oldest buildings in the territory is the charming Henry H. Porter house, which, while designated a summer home, is actually a comfortable year-round structure.

Built in 1848 as the farm homestead of one of the county's early settlers, Guerdon Montague, the house was constructed of white oak, without nails, being put together with oak pegs, and while it has been much altered, enlarged and modernized, the old rooms are still an integral part of the house and in everyday use.

The old living room, a small, cozy room with low ceiling, has a white tile fireplace and the old fashioned bow type windows looking down the grassy slopes to the lake. On top of the bookshelves in this room stand many of the silver cups and other trophies won by the Porter family in the yacht races on Lake Geneva. Henry H. Porter, father of the present owner, won his first yacht race for the General Phil Sheridan trophy in 1891 and won it ten times thereafter, the last time being in 1931.

During the same year the latest addition was made to the house. This included another living room, several bedrooms, dressing rooms, and baths.

The new living room is one of the most unusual rooms to be found anywhere. It is nearly fifty feet long and half as wide, beamed and panelled in cypress, with large doors displaying long wrought-iron hinges, and furnished for the most part in a style to make any man of a mechanical turn of mind catch his breath in sheer joy.

For here there are not only the customary deep cushioned chairs, lamps, tables, books, soft rugs, and great open fireplace of the conventional attractive living room, but taking up at least half of the room is a remarkable collection of fine precision machinery, all set up and ready to operate at any moment, including two lathes, drill presses, grinders, milling machinery, and two practical work benches with their incidental tools. Mechanical engineering is the hobby of the present Henry H. Porter, as it was of his father.

This room, like the billiard room and living room in the old Montague section of the house, is adorned with many models of sailboats, pictures of old clipper ships, and colored pictorial maps.

Outside the wide velvety lawns shaded by fine old trees show no sign to remind one of the Montague farmyard, the vineyard, orchard, kitchen garden and stables. Instead there are conservatories, tennis courts, flower gardens and beyond, the beach and lake.

On the same grounds and part of the estate is the large summer residence of the Henry Porter Ishams. This house is the first of the lake shore summer homes to be built by Chicagoans and dates back to 1870, when the annual trek to the lake began. During that year the Chicago banker, Shelton Sturges, purchased the land from Montague. The farm, a government grant, included not only what is now the Isham Porter estate, but the L. Z. Leiter, W. G. McIntosh, and Hubbard Carpenter properties, bordering on Butternuts, the Kellogg Fairbank estate.

The Sturges estate was purchased by Henry H. Porter, grandfather of the present Henry H. Porter and Henry Porter Isham, in 1894, and while the interior of the big Isham house has been remodeled to some extent it has not lost the charm of the best of the Victorian period and outside it appears unchanged. One can picture the stately barouche of the eighties, with high stepping horses, liveried footmen and coachmen, passing along the winding carriage drive across the wide lawns to draw up with a flourish at the impressive porte cochère of the big brown mansion.

The third generation of the Isham and Porter families are, like many of the old Chicago families, still maintaining their fine homes at Lake Geneva. Largely due to the effort of these families the natural beauty of the lake and the surrounding country has remained through the years almost unchanged.

As an example of this care of the lake, the Lake Geneva Lake Level Protection association, founded in 1895 by H. H. Porter, S. B. Chapin, R. T. Crane, Henry Bartholomay, F. R. Chandler, Hubbard Carpenter, Otto Young, and W. S. McCrea, is still actively engaged in protecting the waters of the lake and its shoreline with Mr. Chapin still acting as president, Mr. Bartholomay and Mr. Carpenter interested officers, and the third generation Henry H. Porter a most active secretary.

Sisters' Visit to Pasadena Is Party Signal

By Ruth Billheimer.

PASADENA, CAL. Four days on a trip isn't very long to see your friends, but Mrs. William Waller and Mrs. Robert Wheeler, popular Chicago sisters, made the most of four days last week when they were house guests of a third sister, Mrs. Ada Thatcher Huntzinger, in San Marino.

Mrs. Huntzinger gave an attractive luncheon for twelve at her home as soon as the two visitors arrived and on the guest list were a number of Chicago names: Mrs. Paul J. Pitner, Mrs. William Moller, Mrs. Armour Morris, Mrs. James A. Harvey, Miss Leota Cotter, Miss Jane Hoge, and Miss Katherine Lefens. The same night Mrs. Huntzinger gave a gay dinner party at Earl Carroll's in Hollywood and included also Miss Virginia Waller, who came west with her mother and aunt; her own daughter, Elizabeth Huntzinger, and sixteen other guests.

Miss Lefens, who also played hostess briefly to her cousin, Mrs. Bartholomay Osborne, entertained Mrs. Huntzinger's sisters at a luncheon which included Mrs. John T. Abbott Jr., Mrs. J. Findlay Torrence, Mrs. D. Herbert Hostetter Jr., and Mrs. Allen Withers. At a dinner party she gave for Mrs. Osborne, the guests included the Harlan B. Eldreds and Fred Ridgways.

Dr. and Mrs. James Alexander Harvey invited to dinner in honor of the Chicago sisters, Chester Ericson, here from Winnetka, Mrs. Armour Morris and the Abbotts. The Pitners gave a dinner for six and Capt. and Mrs. Max Ritterrath were hosts at tea Sunday evening before Mrs. Waller and Mrs. Wheeler left for San Francisco.

Mrs. Robert H. Ripley, who is residing in South Grand avenue, is just back from San Francisco where she attended a regional meeting of the garden clubs and stopped for a little rest on the way back at Santa Barbara's Hotel El Encanto.

Mrs. William A. Magie, president of the Pasadena Garden club, also was at the meetings and is now looking forward to May 19 when her club will be guests of the Robert Ladd Giffords for a buffet luncheon at their Laguna Beach summer home and will study an unusual variety of seaweed which grows near there.

The Magies leave June 5 for their usual summer sojourn in Chicago and will be followed two days later by their granddaughter, Billie Eilersgaard, who will make the journey in company with her much traveled west highland white, Jumbo, who has seen the intervening country through canine eyes eight times!

Others at the Regional Garden club meeting were Mrs. Oakleigh Thorne of Montecito, honorary vice president of the Garden Club of America, and Mrs. Sellar Bullard, president of the Garden Club of Santa Barbara and Montecito.

Springtime engagements are coming thick and fast and among them is that of Miss Flora Elena Burkhard, daughter of the John Frank Burkhards of San Marino, to Thomas Favill Gladwin, son of the Harold Sterling Gladwins of Santa Barbara and formerly of Chicago. She is a junior at Mills college and he a senior at Harvard.

Seen at the Curtis Peck's housewarming at their Casa Antigua [inspired by the house in Antigua of which Adamic wrote] were a number of Chicago and near-Chicago faces: The Robert Rowans [Louise Hunter], Charles Lawrence Washburns, Mrs. Joseph M. Hixon, Miss Jane Pond, Miss Helen Hunter, and Edward H. Groenedyke Jr.

Pasadena society was treated to a pleasant "scoop" on other circles who read of the Jean-Marie James and George Palmer Putnam engagement a few days ago in their morning papers. The night before, Mr. Putnam and his fiancée, an unusually attractive young woman, attended the première at the Pasadena Community playhouse of "The Great American Family," written by Lee Shippey, columnist, and dramatized by Charley King and Robert Frayne Chapin. The news was being unofficially buzzed about all evening.

The première drew a squad of Hollywood play and studio scouts and a number of celebrities, including Rupert Hughes, whose name came across the footlights several times in the lines of this gay, wholesome comedy of American life. Alice C. D. Riley, formerly of Chicago, was one of the members of the California Writers' guild to be present and to honor Mr. Shippey and his dramatists afterwards when the guild gave a reception in the green room. Pasadena is getting a special thrill out of the fact that Broadway already has taken interest in the play, based on Mr. Shippey's novel.

Charles F. Scott of the Hotel Vista del Arroyo, who was O. Henry's original "Man About Town" when he resided in Chicago, attended the première, too, as did Jed Harris, the Clifford Knights, Sam Marsh of New York, Harlan Ware, Scott O'Dell, and other nationally known writers, stage, and studio personalities.

Jumping Men Inhabit This Far Off Isle

By Quentin Pope.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NIAS, NETHERLANDS INDIES.

This little island, eighty miles off the coast of Sumatra in Netherlands Indies, is the home of the jumping men. In every one of the sixty villages of Nias you will find a "jumping stone" and at every stone the natives will provide amazing feats.

The place is easy to locate on the map if you rule a line due west from Singapore, at the tip of the Malay peninsula, straight through the island of Sumatra. The line will bisect Nias, standing rather like a minute Scandinavia in reverse, the third of that chain of islets which runs down the western side of Sumatra.

Stone appeals to the people here. All about the island run narrow roads of paved stone and there are broad stone steps leading up to the villages which—a breathless traveler is inclined to decide—are all perched on mountain tops. Before the houses in these villages are stone pillars and benches of carved stone. The jumping stone continues the pattern.

For jumping is the sport of the men. From an early age every boy is trained to jump. He is taught not merely to clear the stone, but to do it with style—to exhibit grace as well as strength and skill. There is a classical method of jumping in Nias, and the man who would win the applause of his watchers must adopt it.

There seems no fixed height for the stone. Many of them, however, are more than 72 inches; 80 inches seems to be an agreed limit. At the age of 10 boys begin training for the day when they will attempt to clear these stones. They start jumping a rope stretched between two bamboo sticks set beside the stone columns, and they have some of the most skilled jumpers as their instructors. From the first they are forced to adopt the approved technique, with their legs drawn up, arms widely spread for balance.

As the boy's skill grows the rope beside the stone is gradually raised. Finally it is placed from four to eight inches higher than the stone itself. It is only after the jumper has mastered this leap, which may take him many years of effort, that he is allowed to attempt the stone. Even after he customarily clears the higher rope, it is not certain the young man will be able to leap the pillar. There is usually a feeling of fear, or at least of excitement, when the stone is faced. This means a further course of training.

The best jumpers are drawn from the men of medium height; they are rather slender in build to western eyes, and have sturdy legs. They may be anywhere from 17 to 30 years old. They take a run of from 12 to 15 yards, and about 6 feet from the stone they launch their effort. In front of the column there is a flattened bowlder, about 16 inches high, from which the jumper takes off. Usually he makes his final thrust with the left leg. The right leg is then stretched forward, and after the takeoff the left leg is pulled up to a similar position. The arms, outstretched, preserve balance.

It is the attitude in which a man makes the leap that counts. If he fails to strike just the right pose as he goes over the stone he will never be considered a jumper.

Not even the best leapers succeed in clearing the pillar at their first effort. Mostly they will not attempt it. Their winding up for the jump is done by twice running up to the stone and flinging themselves against its smooth side. Then they will make the real jump. If they succeed they will repeat the effort six or eight times, winning praise according to the grace of their performance.

There are no matches between the villages, as far as I could discover, but every village is anxious to have a number of good performers and there is thus a kind of undercover competition between them to reach the standard they have set themselves. In the old days no man would have been able to become village headman unless he was able to clear the jumping stone.

Efforts of this correspondent to discover records of this strange sport were unsuccessful. The people of Nias have no script, it seems, and consequently no written histories, but in their heroic poems, handed down from ancient times, they have passages which do honor to famed jumpers, who are invariably heroes. Only a few decades ago the people were head-hunters. Their walled villages, confining them between expeditions, may have created a need for strenuous exercise of this type.

Today the champion of one village, Sanawo Hiti [He That Jumps Over the Hills] has as his most valued possession a rotogravure picture of a high jumper in action in another country.

The picture was left by some tourist. It dumfounded the natives. They have still not recovered from the shock of surprise and delight that people of the outside world also practice high jumping, even though they do not use the island style, with the legs drawn up.

TIPS TO TOURISTS

What's your travel problem? Address queries regarding where to go, how to get there, costs, and accommodations to the Travelers' Guide, Chicago Tribune, enclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Please give me a description of Mont St. Michel. We are going on a cruise to western Europe this spring and we are told that that scenic marvel will be one of the highlights of our trip. F. G. M.

Just off the coast of France lies a rocky islet, so small and so near the mainland that it is hardly noticeable on the world maps. This mass of granite is only 3,000 feet in circumference and rises to a height of 165 feet. Insignificant as it may be from an area standpoint, Mont St. Michel stands out like a beacon in the annals of ecclesiastical and lay history. Around it have swirled the tides of time. Founded in the eighth century as an oratory or place of prayer, it soon became a resort of pilgrims from France, Great Britain, Ireland, and Italy. In 966 Richard I., duke of Normandy, established a Benedictine monastery there. The year of 1203 found it ruined by fire by Philip Augustus, but it was restored soon after by the destroyer. During the last thirty years of the hundred years' war the abbey withstood the onslaughts of the British forces. In the 18th and 19th centuries it served as a political prison. Today, as one approaches Mont St. Michel on the causeway that leads out from the mainland, there comes the realization that perhaps the place deserves the title, "the eighth wonder of the world." It is majestic and awe inspiring with its spires seemingly touching the clouds. To browse along its ancient streets flanked by 13th century dwellings, to loiter in the shadow of its 15th century gate, to linger in the hush and quiet of the abbey, is to experience the thrill of living in another day.

What is called "the most interesting manuscript in England" can be seen by visitors in the library of Corpus Christi college at Cambridge. It is the copy of the gospels which Pope Gregory sent with Augustin when he made his first missionary journey to convert the English to Christianity in the year 597.

British Propose Disraeli Memorial

Plans are being made for a permanent memorial to Lord Beaconsfield, better known as Disraeli. The present owner of his estate has donated the house, heirlooms, and more than 100 acres of land for that purpose. The house is full of memorials of Britain's former prime minister. Among them are Angeli's lifesized portrait of Queen Victoria, presented to Disraeli by "his grateful sovereign and friend."

Diorama Shows How Man Lived in Ancient Days

Recently installed exhibits in Zion National park in Utah are resulting in record crowds at the museum there.

Of major interest to visitors is the new Pueblo Indian diorama, recalling how man lived in Zion canyon more than a thousand years ago.

The construction of a village and a ceremonial room is the theme of the scene which includes twelve human figures, from 5⅓ to 6 inches tall, depicting posed actions in construction work. Three dogs, miniature pottery, ears of corn, chunks of building material, and other objects are shown. A painting of the Parunuweap canyon, in the southeast corner of the park, serves as a background for the diorama.

A second diorama, installed this spring, exhibits natural size wax models of eight different species of cacti found in Zion canyon. Colored open flowers, buds, and fruits have been reproduced against a background painting of Oak creek.

Bible Scenes Come to Life in Jerusalem

By Frederic Babcock.

JERUSALEM We come at last to the goal of travelers throughout all history. Palestine has been the holy land of Jewry ever since the days of Abraham. It has been the mecca of Christian pilgrimages ever since the time of Christ. And it has been hallowed ground to Moslems ever since the time of Mohammed.

Today the members of the three faiths meet—and clash—in this, the city of brotherly hate. But that is nothing new for Jerusalem. It and its surroundings were bridges over which crossed the world's conquerors from the days of Nebuchadnezzar to those of Napoleon. Measuring only 150 miles by 50, Palestine has been the arena for more military events than have most countries ten times its size. Its historic background is one long tale of strife and bloodshed.

William Wrigley's Catalina Island off Los Angeles used to have the advertising slogan: "In all the world no place like this." The slogan would apply even more aptly to Jerusalem. The city of David and Solomon and Herod certainly has no counterpart—not even a close rival. Here the Bible comes to life, its stories and parables and allegories become realities. Here the visitor is literally overwhelmed when he tries to comprehend some of the mysticism, some of the religious significance, that surrounds every spot, every street, every building. Here he is stunned by the spectacle of religionists battling for control of their various churches' sacred sites, and at the same time worshiping almost side by side and standing guard over the city's treasures.

But it is not an unmixed emotion. The faithful, treading the ground that—they are convinced—is the same that Jesus trod, get the preëminent experience of a lifetime as they think back to a scene of 1,900 years ago, when a man of the people, facing suffering and death, stumbled along a road toward the most sublime event in history. The cynics, realizing that the Jerusalem of the first century lies far below the Jerusalem of the twentieth century, and that many of the so-called sacred places are not regarded as authentic by present day experts, have no such experience. They are inclined to agree with Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick's observation; "The thoughtful visitor soon makes up his mind that nothing in Palestine under a roof is much worth seeing, and nothing in Palestine out of doors is not worth seeing."

Thus the Holy Land, already torn with warfare among the various sects and creeds, is the scene of controversy between two schools of thought: those who want to believe and those who don't want to. For the believers it has everything; for the doubters it has much less than that.

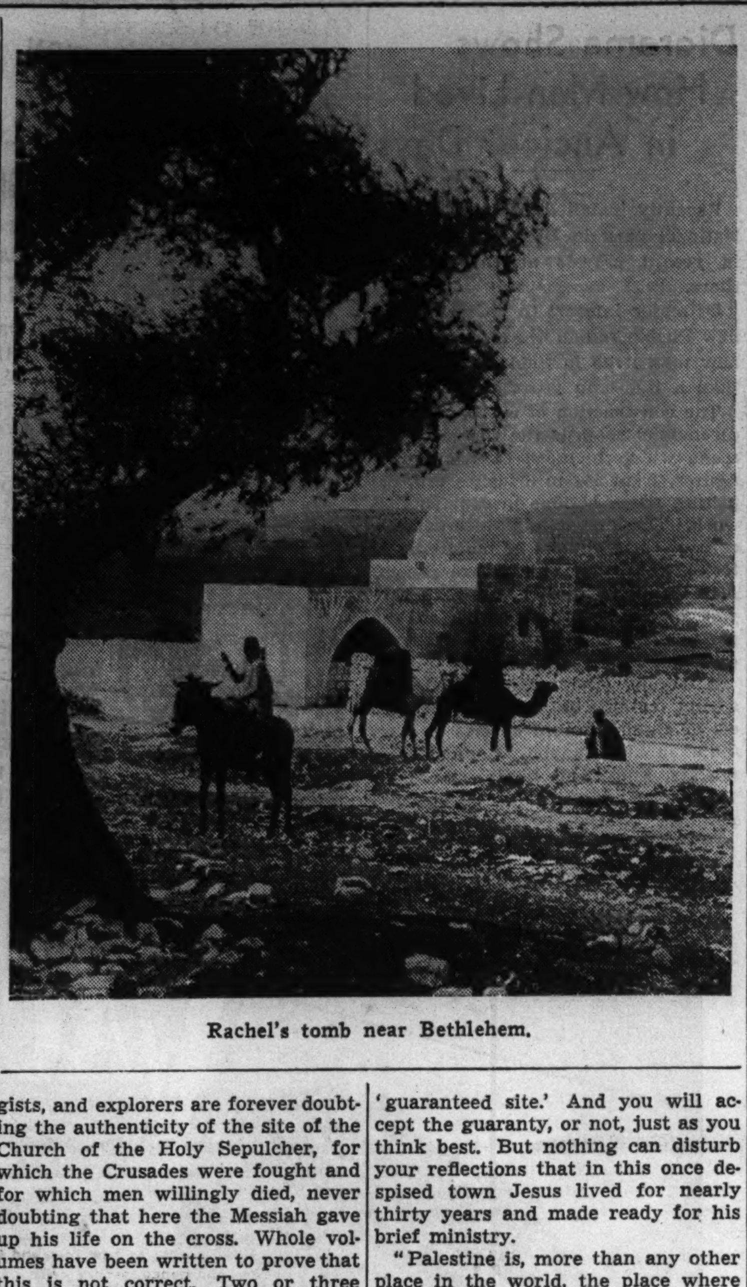
It would require years of research for a traveler to determine, to his own satisfaction, which school is right. The average traveler has only a few days here, so all he can do is listen to the voices of authority. Here, for instance, are the views of two travel writers who have made exhaustive studies of the subject:

E. M. Newman: "It is touching, as one wanders through the maze of narrow streets in the midst of confusion, bustle, and the secretive reserve to be found only in an oriental city, to see the groups of passing pilgrims, many of them moved to the very depths of their nature, listening, gazing, weeping, and adoring. They have come across the lands and seas to stand in these alleys, to see, to hear, and to accept. Would it not be cruel to tell them the plain truth, that the Jerusalem of the time of Jesus is buried far beneath the mud, the stones, or the dust to which they press their trembling lips? Is it not enough to know that somewhere within these walls Jesus taught and preached—that somewhere in these hills he was crucified?



Rachel's tomb near Bethlehem.

"The scientific historians, archæologists, and explorers are forever doubting the authenticity of the site of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, for which the Crusades were fought and for which men willingly died, never doubting that here the Messiah gave up his life on the cross. Whole volumes have been written to prove that this is not correct. Two or three other 'exact spots' have their enthusiastic sponsors for the honor of sheltering the remains of the Nazarene and having been the scene of his execution. But the world clings tenaciously to the traditional spot, as it has done for at least sixteen centuries.

"What matters it if Titus did destroy the city and even plow up the grounds? The site of Jerusalem remains the same, and man cannot destroy that."

Chicago's Clara E. Laughlin: "In its thirty-three centuries of history Jerusalem has endured more than twenty sieges and blockades, about eighteen reconstructions, and two periods of desolation. 'Her valleys have been filled and her hills leveled, her streets and buildings destroyed, and her people slain and exiled. But Jerusalem has remained. Her spirit is eternal.'

"For those who are satisfied with the evidence presented it is a very sacred place indeed. Nineteen centuries of vicissitudes have piled up some thirty feet of successive strata above the ground level of Jerusalem in Jesus' day. But in the deep basement of the Convent of the Sisters of Zion the nuns show a section of a street, undoubtedly Roman, which may have been the street that Jesus trod on his way to Calvary. At any rate, millions of pilgrims have venerated this Via Dolorosa. It is picturesque; it is probably the Way of the Cross.

"In Nazareth they will show you where Gabriel appeared to Mary, and the precise spot where he stood and she stood. They will show you where Mary lived, and where Joseph's carpenter shop was, and many another 'guaranteed site.' And you will accept the guaranty, or not, just as you think best. But nothing can disturb your reflections that in this once despised town Jesus lived for nearly thirty years and made ready for his brief ministry.

"Palestine is, more than any other place in the world, the place where one needs a spirit that's eager to understand and slow to condemn."

And what was this observer's reaction to all this? Our trip to and through Palestine was by far the most dramatic thing that has happened to us in our twenty years of traveling. We came here a skeptic and shall go away a skeptic, but that's only a small part of the story.

That story will be told next Sunday.

England to Preserve Half a Million Acres

England is planning to preserve a half million acres of some of its finest countryside. The areas lie in the lake district in Wensleydale of Yorkshire, and along the North Yorkshire coast. All building and industrial activities will be controled so that these districts will not be despoiled. Similar projects in the last seven years have put almost two-thirds of the total acreage of England and Wales under planned supervision.

THE VOICE OF THE TRAVELER

Letters regarding travel conditions and experiences are welcomed. Address: Travel Editor, Chicago Tribune.

THAT'S MEXICO.

Chicago, May 8.—To the Travel Editor: Suppose you have been nearly everywhere in the United States . . . then try Mexico.

Imagine the thrill of a foreign country, the excitement of having to go through the customs, and, most diverting of all, to be in a land where the language is different. You are entirely on your own, with your only prop those fifty words you learned in Spanish. We spent a month there and would jump at the chance to do it again, but let's be truthful. You can be perfectly comfortable and can coddle yourself by hopping from one big city hotel, where all the employés speak English, to the next, but how much more fun it is to stop in the smaller villages and really see Mexico! Mexico City is, of course, like hundreds of other big cities, and if you are a "softy" you can make this your focal point, returning each evening to a lovely room with a private bath.

Our first experience with Mexican food was quite a shock. We were disappointed in the butter, and even in an "American" restaurant the fried chicken had a "Mexican" flavor, the vegetables had a peculiar earthy taste, and the coffee, resembling a poisonous mixture of iodine and liquid asphalt, was served along with a small pitcher of hot water, just as we serve tea . . . hopelessly un-American and enough to bring homesickness to the bravest heart. But don't falter—Mexico is worth it.

It looked to us as if the country had fallen asleep centuries ago and had recently awakened. Everything is either very old or very new. The people are just becoming aware of sanitation in the rural districts, and are taking such big doses of "advanced science" that they overlook the A B C's. For example, many small town restaurants have electrical refrigerators, but no screens on the windows. There is a tidy bowl in which guests may wash their hands, but often there is just one grimy towel for all comers.

We found the peon humble, modest, and extremely polite. Truly such humbleness and modesty made us self-conscious, and when at Taxco we visited a church hundreds of years old and stood beside a peasant, patient and submissive and deep in his devotion, it struck us that, to him, the tourist must look like a hopeless clod, a brainless intruder. Since then we have been convinced that we all could temper our Yankee cocksureness with a little humility and not suffer any. I know, too, that we shall use the expression "dumb foreigner" with a great deal more care in the future. We know now how it feels to be confused, misunderstood, and alien.

Don't miss Taxco, Pueblo, Xochimilco, or Cuernavaca. Stop along the way and see the narrow cobblestone streets in the small villages, the cactus fences and grass huts. The idea of whole families eating, sleeping, and quarreling in a one room grass shack, with a dirt floor, and the nearest water a possible half mile away, is quite a jolt to any privacy loving, plumbing-conscious American, but keep your chin up—that's Mexico, and after all that's what you came to see.

If you are fortunate you may meet a boy like José, who offered to show us the town of Cuernavaca for two pesos. Sixteen years old, he was to us typical of Mexican youth today. His father, he told us, was a Spaniard and his mother an Aztec Indian. He spoke both English and Spanish, and, in exchange for information about his people, he asked us much about Americans. It was definitly a "swap." He told us things with the idea in mind that we must give him exactly the same amount of information in return.

Whether it was because of the boy's age we couldn't tell, but so many of his questions seemed to touch on affairs of the heart. What he wanted to know first was why we Americans take two honeymoons. We explained that we took one when we were young and one when we were older. He seemed satisfied, but his private opinion on the subject we were unable to guess. "Why do all Americans marry?" "Why can't they just live together as the Mexican Indians do?" "Why can't an American girl marry a Mexican Indian if she really loves him?" We knew he was proud, almost defiant, and we stumbled around for a suitable answer. Our explanation that she could, but would have no friends, seemed pitifully weak and inadequate, and especially so with his penetrating eyes upon us. We had that uncomfortable feeling that we, as Americans, were being critically appraised. "How is it that there are some white and some black Americans?" Our synopsis of the slavery question and the civil war [which, by the way, had us both doing mental handsprings trying to remember dates] seemed sufficient.

José worked in a bakery [panaderia] at night. During the day he helped tourists to see the town. He was saving his money to go to the United States, where he would learn French and German in addition to his English and Spanish, after which he would come back and help to educate his people—an ambition worthy of any man.

We spent days tramping around and thrilling to Mexico, its jungles and its mountains, its people and their customs, but when we came back across the border into Texas we stopped the car less than a block from the customs house. We wanted to feel American soil under our feet, and for two pins I would have kissed every brick in the street.

Nevertheless, see Mexico if you can. See it now, before it becomes too aware of its tourist trade, before hot dog stands and souvenir counters clutter up the scenic roadways and push into the background that lovable individual—the burro.

HELEN ANNE EVANS.

THEY LIKE HER LETTERS.

Gary, Ind., May 7.—To the Travel Editor: I have found recent contributions to your columns by Mae Blacker Freeman very interesting. In typical tourist style I have visited many of the places she mentions, and, like her, I have encountered interpreters, couriers, baggage men, and sometimes annoying fellow travelers who are glued to you for the balance of your so-called vacation. Mrs. Freeman's recommendations for free lance travel are unusually good. That form of touring certainly has many advantages.

MRS. SAMUEL STANTON DUBIN.

Chicago, May 3.—To the Travel Editor: Please let me tell you how much I enjoy the letters appearing in your "Voice of the Traveler" column over the name of Mae Blacker Freeman. Reading them is the next best thing to traveling yourself. Please print more of them.

MARION STEELE.

Chicago, April 28.—To the Travel Editor: The other day "The Voice of the Traveler" had a letter from Mae Blacker Freeman, pointing out how persons in modest circumstances can enjoy the wonders of travel. This was highly interesting to your readers, since 95 per cent of them have a pocketbook about the size of Mrs. Freeman's. I should like very much to see some more letters from her, giving a detailed account of how she travels and what she spends for food, lodging, etc. In the possession of such facts maybe more of us could see Europe, instead of being frightened away by the cost of luxury travel. JOHN BLASOVICH.

MAIL FOR SHUT-INS.

Racine, Wis., April 21.—To the Travel Editor: Please put the following name on your list to receive mail from travelers: Edward Bobeck Jr., 1433 N. Main street, Racine, Wis. This boy is 18 years old and has never walked in his life. Has spastic paralysis. Loves to receive mail and also likes to read. Is very cheerful in spite of his handicap, and I am sure he would be pleased to receive cards from your various travelers. Anything you can do for him will be greatly appreciated. MRS. H. REIDINGER.

Urbana, Ill., April 29.—To the Travel Editor: I have been in a sanatorium for twenty months. As time passes slowly here a little mail from your readers would help greatly.

Your section of THE TRIBUNE brings many pleasant minutes to us shut-ins. We talk and dream about the lands far away. Some day, maybe, we can travel and see the wonders of the world.

KARL WILLIAMS,
Outlook Sanitarium.

Stevens Point, Wis., April 26.—To the Travel Editor: Will you be kind enough to put this name on your list: Betty Eggleston, 410 4th street, Stevens Point, Wis.? Betty has been obliged to give up school and is now a complete shut-in. Her hours would be shortened by receiving mail from travelers. She is 16 years old. MRS. GENE EGGLESTON.

Eureka, Ill., May 8.—To the Travel Editor: Little Betty McFarland, aged 9, has been ill some months and would be so happy to see the mailman stopping at her house with cards or notes. Her address is just Eureka, Ill.

The easiest job in England, that of ringing the old curfew bell of Stogursey, West Somerset, has recently been filled. The bell is rung only twice a day, and the bell rope is so arranged that it hangs down into the bell ringer's bedroom. He need not even stir out of bed in order to carry out his duties. For his efforts he is given $6.50 a year, a joint of meat, about two tons of coal, free rent, and a garden.

STEAMERS—PLANES

Haiti: Land of Voodoo, Ruins, Ebony Bodies

By Anson Brown.

JACMEL, HAITI. Voodoo drums, ebony bodies, strange crumbling ruins in the midst of the jungle are all in the makeup of Haiti. The visitor can lie in his bed at night listening to the droning beat of the distant drums until the rhythm becomes almost a part of a delirium madness. He can wander among the black people in the deep, green valleys until he wonders if there was ever another white person in the world. He may stumble across the ruins of an old French château covered with the heaviness of moss and tangled vines which all but obliterate the remnants of history; how the black fury, more than a hundred years ago, swept over the island and destroyed everything that was white.

Except for the former tyrannical rulers, Haiti is today as of a century back. Most of its inhabitants are still uneducated [less than 1 per cent can read or write], indolent, slow, perspiring persons whose black ancestors were brought from Africa in chains aboard the slave ships.

There are many ships stopping at Haiti every month, and the people are becoming more and more accustomed to the frequency of American visitors, for the republic is not far from the United States. It is situated down behind Cuba, a day and a half run from Santiago, and composes one-half of a tropical island roughly about the size of Illinois. The other half is Santo Domingo, Spanish speaking, and the language is the only real difference between the two. The Haitians speak a garbled French comparable to pidgin English, but both countries have the same towering mountains, the same palm trees, the same characteristics.

Disembarking in Haiti.

My jaunt from Cuba was too short. There's something about water travel that is never tiring. By day, after you've watched the land fade out of sight, you may settle down in a deck chair with one of those books you've been intending to read for the last three years, such as "Gone with Anthony Adverse." Likely as not you'll get the first three pages scanned and then it slips to your lap, and you sit there until the lunch gong crashes.

The horizon dips up and down, flying fish scuttle over the tops of the waves, and you're too placidly content even to bother about the latest invasion in Europe. Then at night there may be a new moon, a mere slice of a crescent spearing its way out of the sea, and phosphorous globules churned up on the surface as the ship pushes onward through the water. It's a tough life. Some fellow passengers are playing bridge or reading, but more of them, such as myself, are satisfied to loaf in a deck chair, gazing at nothing, dreaming about nothing.

The reverie was ended at Jacmel, where I disembarked for Port Au Prince. No doubt some of these names are baffling, so, naturally, the best solution is an atlas. Truth is, though, I had never heard of Jacmel before I left Cuba. But I soon found it was on one side of a peninsula opposite Port Au Prince, which meant a four hour drive through the Haitian jungles.

Jacmel is a dirty place, with flies and filth and bellowing Negroes. The ship anchored out in the harbor, and it took almost an hour to unload the seventy-five Haitians who had come across from Cuba, steerage class. Almost every one of the men carried a new pair of shoes and a belligerent rooster. Cock fighting is their national sport. If one can afford a fighting cock and a pair of shoes at the same time he is a man of means.

I was rowed ashore by two Haitians in an oversized boat, with bag and baggage piled around me. I tried talking to them in French, but their answers left me mystified, for their Creole jargon can scarce be understood by even a Frenchman. It was a hot day, as is any day in Haiti, and the incessant sun glared down on the iron roofs of the squalid little town. My two oarsmen dripped in the heat as they rowed, their shining, chocolate colored bodies making a strange contrast to the blue of the water around us.

At the custom house my carefully packed clothes were thrown asunder as the black officer looked for guns, dope, and objectionable literature. All he found were dirty socks and reams of typing paper.

When he began to question me about how much movie film I had and what it cost I subdued him with a package of cigarets. So I was dismissed with an understanding smile and guided on through the gates, followed by five black boys carrying baggage that two could have handled.

Here was Haiti at last, land of voodooism and black magic; where darkest Africa brought here centuries ago has gained a foothold to the tune of 125,000 Negroes in Port Au Prince alone. Socially, the white man is an outcast here. The blacker you are the better.

"Old King Cole" Actually Ruled in Ancient England

"Old King Cole" of nursery rhyme fame actually lived, and the site of his residence, at Colchester, England, is becoming a minor shine for American visitors.

To find the scene of his dwelling place tourists follow the city walls, which still form a rectangle about two miles in extent, and arrive at the Balkerine gate, near St. Mary's. Any native will give his word that here dwelt the "merry old soul" and his court. The city walls were built in the reign of the Emperor Vespasian, but were extended and strengthened subsequently.

Tradition says St. Helen, mother of the Emperor Constantine the Great, was the daughter of "Old King Cole." Thus Colchester, a city whose existence antedates the Christian era by at least two centuries, holds an attraction for the lover of historic lore. The city was stormed by the spectacular Boadicea, queen of the Iceni, now seen in her chariot of bronze on the Thames embankment, London. Historians agree that Cunobelin [Shakespeare's Cymbeline] moved his capital to this city when leaving Verulamium [St. Albans] in the first century.

Colchester castle was built in the eleventh century. The keep is the largest in England, resembling somewhat the white tower in the Tower of London.

Eiffel Tower Has Had Its Troubles

Paris' Cinderella, the Eiffel tower, has had a stormy career. When it was built it was called indescribably ugly. Later a few began to recognize the beauty of its slender and transparent outline. Not until after the war, however, did it come into its full glory. Then it was hired as a gigantic billboard, and the whole of it was brilliantly lighted each night, dazzling Parisians and foreign visitors alike. In 1937, when it was made a part of the exhibition, its place as a decorative part of the landscape of Paris was recognized.

More Guests Than Hosts.

Munich, the capital of Bavaria, is said to be the only large city in the world which annually has more visitors than inhabitants. It has been playing host for a thousand years so that its population of 800,000 has learned how to entertain a million tourists a year.

Prairie du Chien Sets Clock Back to Century Ago

PRAIRIE DU CHIEN, WIS. Third annual formal opening of the Villa Louis, ante-bellum baronial mansion built by the west's first millionaire, will be celebrated in Wisconsin's second oldest city next week-end. Citizens are to dress in costumes of the 1840 period and guests will be driven about the city in carriages used first when the Villa Louis was built nearly a century ago.

Prairie du Chien, on the Mississippi river at the mouth of the Wisconsin, was first a Fox Indian village, then a halfway camp on the fur trade river route from New Orleans to Quebec, later a British military outpost, and finally an American city. In this region some of Wisconsin's most dramatic history was made.

The Villa Louis was built by Col. Hercules Louis Dousman, an agent of John Jacob Astor. He acquired his riches in the fur trade. He placed his mansion atop a historic pile left by the mysterious ancient mound-builders, and he furnished it with all the elegance that the wealth of New York and New Orleans could supply. It was so magnificent a show place that it was called "Château de Brilliante"—and outside, on the banks of the Father of Waters, Indians camped in their tepees and wickiups.

Three years ago the mansion was completely restored with nearly all of its original furnishings, deeded to the city, and opened to the public. More than 8,000 travelers visited it last year.

Visitors here see some of Wisconsin's finest scenery—the great valley of the Mississippi, palisades, and a coulee country.

Yellowstone Opening Is Advanved One Day

The official opening of Yellowstone National park has been set for Monday, June 19, this year, a day earlier than usual. The one day advance was made for the convenience of vacationists wishing to leave Chicago Saturday, June 17.

Door County to Greet Blossoms

Sturgeon Bay, Wis., May 13.—Springtime explorers from Chicago are heading for the Door county peninsula, land of the flowering cherry. Already the cherry buds are unfolding and next week-end their display will be at its full. More than 850,000 trees will spread their blossoms over 8,000 acres.

As usual, Door county will celebrate the cherry bloom. At Sturgeon Bay next Saturday there are to be parades—of dolls and boys and girls and the candidates for cherry queen. Saturday night county folk and visitors alike will dance in the streets in masked Mardi Gras fashion. On Sunday there will be band music and the crowning of the queen.

"Home of Great Spirit" Invokes Spirit of U. S.

Manitowoc, Wis., May 13.—In this city, with an Indian name meaning "Home of the Great Spirit," the spirit of America will be invoked Sunday, May 21. After five months of study and preparation, every young man and young woman turning 21 years of age in Manitowoc county will join in a Citizenship day ceremony, officially embrace his American franchise, and declare before the chief justice of the state of Wisconsin his allegiance to the constitutions of his nation and his commonwealth.

Clarence A. Dykstra, president of the University of Wisconsin, will speak. Gov. Julius P. Heil is to present to the 700 and more voters personal certificates of citizenship. A unit of Wisconsin's National Guard will fire a salute to citizenship—probably the first such salute ever fired.

Many visitors are expected for the ceremony in the sports bowl overlooking Lake Michigan. They will see Terry Andrae state park, just south of Sheboygan; Pine Point park, just north of Manitowoc at Two Rivers, and the Kettle-Moraine glacial region, the "pot hole" country a few miles west of the lake.

ESCORTED TOURS

Follow These Tips for More Travel Joys

How do you rate as a traveler? Do you get the fullest possible enjoyment out of the journeys you make, or do you return as mad as Donald Duck and determined to stick to the home fireside at any cost?

Travel is what you make it, and if you would find it the most pleasant and broadening experience in life, check over your mental as well as your actual baggage before you start. When you make that trip this summer leave behind your worries. Say to yourself, "I'm away from home, away from the job, and no matter what happens there, it will all be over before I can do anything to help. So, why worry?"

Leave behind your class consciousness. Start out with the idea that every one you meet will be interesting to you. Leave behind the feeling that you must have every single creature comfort you are accustomed to. Say instead, "I'm out to enjoy myself and I don't give a hang whether I need a shave, whether my nose is shiny, or whether the water is hot or cold."

Leave behind the details of your travel arrangements by taking care of them in advance. If you get steamship accommodations, hotel rooms, and railroad tickets beforehand you will save a quarter to a third of your available time in foreign countries and, therefore, increase your hours of enjoyment.

Leave behind the feeling that because you are going on your first trip to a certain place no one else has been there ahead of you and that transportation and hotel employés feel your trip is as important as you do. It is only human to expect others to enjoy things as much as you yourself do, but temper that expectation with the knowledge that your trip can be a novel experience for you and yet a routine matter for the people who serve you.

Leave behind your haziness about the cities and countries you intend to visit. Acquaint yourself with them by reading up in advance and know so much about them that castles, walls, and monuments will each tell a stirring tale of man's endeavors.

Leave behind the belief that the mores, the etiquet, and the moral codes all over the world are universally modeled after your own. Remember "different countries, different customs; different countries, different manners; different countries, different moral standards." Finally, pack up with your mental baggage the conviction that one of the great benefits of all travel is pleasure and enjoyment, and whether you travel for business, culture, education, or any one of a score of other objects, keep that conviction throughout your journey.

A Six Weeks' Song.

When the carnival comes to Nice on the French Riviera there is a custom of launching a new song whose melody is played daily by every orchestra and street band until every one is whistling or humming it. When King Carnival dies the song dies too, and the following season another takes its place.

Leaning Tower of Pisa Unchanged After 600 Years

PISA, Italy.—Whatever opinions may exist concerning the leaning of the Tower of Pisa, the tower was built leaning and has not wavered a fraction of an inch in the 600 years since it was finished, say historians at the University of Pisa.

Although popularly believed to have leaned some time after the fourteenth century—due to the sinking of the earth under the monument—records show, the scholars assert, that when construction reached a height of about thirty-three feet the foundation had ceded to one side by seven inches.

The tower was then under the supervision of Bonanno Da Pisa, architect and sculptor who had carved in bronze the great door for the Duomo in Pisa. It is believed that Bonanno decided to preserve this lean, both from a desire to attempt a new application of statics and because of the fame that would come to him if he succeeded.

In defense of this explanation it is pointed out that towers similar in design to the one in Pisa were common throughout northern Italy in the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth centuries, and that Bonanno might have wished to be distinguished for something more than a bell tower to supplement Pisa's new cathedral and chapel. Although he did not live to see the tower completed, he had so far advanced its construction when he died that his successors, Guglielmo d'Innsbruck and Tommaso Pisano, had no choice but to continue in his footsteps.

Today the first flight of steps leading to the monument are at least four feet below the original plane of the square on which the edifice stands, and this shows that the increased weight of construction brought about a misplacement and sinking of the massive foundation.

Scaring the Evil One.

The Buddhist temples of Siam are usually guarded by grotesque images of giants, expected to scare off the Evil One. The outstanding temple is that of the emerald buddha, in the royal palace inclosure.

A Museum of Sculpture.

Probably the most visited cemetery in the world is the Campo Santo or Holy Field of Genoa, Italy. Its memorial sculptures are finer than can be found in many well known museums.

Dragon Heads Still Decorate These Churches

Dragons still flaunt the sky from Christian churches, not in China, but in Norway.

Carved centuries ago, dragon heads even today leap from the gable ends of the "stavkirker" or wooden churches and form one of the few remaining links between modern Norway and its past.

For centuries the dragon was one of the favorite emblems of pagan Norway, especially as a figurehead for the prows of its Viking ships, and the men who built the ships and decorated them with dragon heads also built the country's first churches. The church structure allowing them more exercise of imagination, Viking carpenters not only put dragons on the gables, but also carved the emblems into the columns, the capitals, and even the door frames.

Twenty stavkirker may still be seen in Norway. They display the same building principles used in the 1,000 year old Viking ships preserved in Oslo. The word "stav" itself was an early one for "mast"; planks in the churches were locked together as they were on the vessels and "knees" were used to strengthen the structures.

The largest stav church, the Hitterdal, has windows, but they were added in the nineteenth century. The buildings originally had no natural lighting at all, the priests and the choir depending on candles and the church-goers kneeling in the darkness.

Fantoft church is about six miles from Bergen, gateway to the fjord country. It once stood at the end of the Sognefjord, but was taken to its present location in 1848.

The best preserved stav church is the Borgund, near Laerdal in the fjord district. Two of the most accessible are the Gol and the Garmo churches, both now museum pieces. The Gol is a feature of the Norsk museum at Oslo, while the Garmo is a highlight of the Sandvig collections at Lillehammer.

FAR HORIZONS

Scotland's railways arrange walking tours known as "Out by Rail—Hike Across Country—Return by Rail." Cheap day return tickets make the tours ideal for those whose legs are in better conditions than their pocketbooks.

Highest waterfall in Europe is the Cascade de Gavarnie in the French Pyrenees. It makes a single leap of 1,385 feet without touching the rock wall over which it springs.

At any important railway station in Italy the tourist can have put on the train for his journey the Cestino di Viaggio, which is a "travel basket" full of hot veal cutlet, or roast beef, vegetables, hot macaroni, bread, cheese, oranges, chocolate, and a bottle of wine—all for less than 50 cents.

Pedestrians and cyclists are provided with separate parallel paths in many places in Denmark—one marked for Cyklesti, the other for Gangsti.

Bread and a horn of ale—a medieval charity known as the wayfarer's dole—are given to any one who asks at the hospital of St. Cross, Winchester, England. Tourists from America often stand in line to be able to tell friends back home that they have shared in this relic of the past.

Visitors to the Netherlands in the spring express astonishment at a Dutch custom which requires that all automobiles shall be decorated with wreaths of daffodils hung over the radiator caps.

Edinburgh visitors are surprised to learn that the esplanade in front of the castle is legally Nova Scotia. It was so made three centuries ago, so that newly appointed barons of Nova Scotia might take possession of their lands without crossing the ocean.

One of the things which astonish visitors to the Dome church, oldest church in Tallinn, Estonia, is that the family pews are inclosed with windows which apparently were opened or shut according to whether the sermon was interesting or dull.

The beaches of the Baltic riviera at Riga, Latvia, are as hard as billiard tables. The firm white sand makes pleasant automobile driving for miles between the sea and the pine-fringed shore.

Although Conscience square is near the cathedral in Antwerp, Belgium, it has nothing to do with the inner monitor. It was named for Hendrik Conscience, author of "The Lion of Flanders."

Seville, Spain, lives on its roofs. They are the gardens, and the gardens are the living rooms of the family. To walk the streets below is to be unconscious of the real life of the city. Visitors who "go indoors" really go to the roof, which is "outdoors."

At Krynica, a Polish resort in the Tatra mountains, there is a new hotel where guests with an ear for music are said to ask for rooms near the landlord's bathroom. The owner is a Polish tenor of the Metropolitan opera.

Ibanez, the Spanish novelist, was so impressed with the wonders of the aquarium at Naples that when he had occasion to introduce it in his "Mare Nostrum" he left his characters behind for fifty pages while he described its fish.

The bugler.

The R. O. T. C. teaches respect for the flag. Here are the colors—the national emblem and the official flag of the city of Chicago.

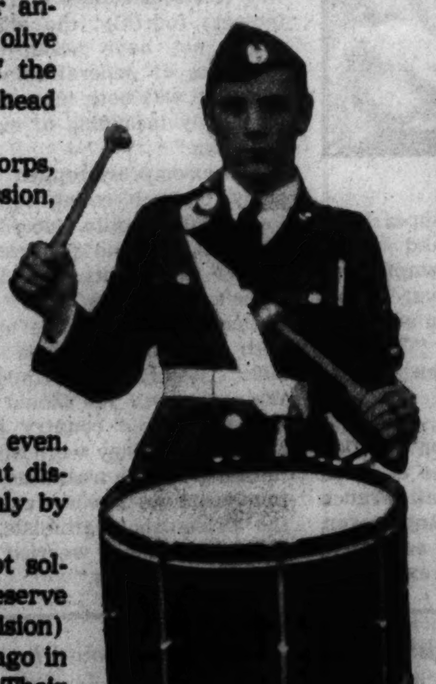
Our R. O. T. C. Builds Character!

By
JOHN A. MENAUGH

DRUMS BEAT a staccato prelude! Cymbals crash! The foremost band bursts into a glorious marching tune! Our boys begin parading by! Company, battalion, regiment, one after another they swing past. Every lad in olive drab steps along to the rhythm of the march, body straight as a ramrod, head erect, eyes to the front.

● Bands and drum and bugle corps, spaced at intervals in the procession, blast the air with martial music that echoes back from the tall buildings that line the street. Brightest spots in the parade are the flags, national banners and each school's own colors. The boys step lively and proudly. Their lines across the street are straight and even. They sweep by with a precision that discloses expertness in drill eclipsed only by that of professional soldiers.

● But these boys, of course, are not soldiers. They are members of the Reserve Officers' Training corps (junior division) of twenty-eight high schools in Chicago in their annual get-together parade. Their counterpart may be found in approximately seventy-five cities and towns in America. There are in round numbers in the country 50,000 R. O. T. C. high school cadets.



Military training is timed to the beat of the drum!

● They are not a part of the United States army. They are not obligated in any way, because of their membership in the R. O. T. C., ever to enter the army. Moreover, it is doubtful if more than relatively few of them ever will take up the profession of arms unless, within their time as young men, the country becomes involved in a major war.

● They are not regimented, in the odious sense of the term, and their membership in the R. O. T. C. is purely voluntary.

● The plaint of the pacifist and the accusation of the radical that the R. O. T. C. is an insidious scheme to militarize the youth of the nation do not hold water. They are founded upon an utterly false conception of the whole matter. The R. O. T. C. is nothing more nor less than an important branch of education, a character builder and developer of leadership for future civil life. This shall be gone into in more detail further on.

● That boys trained in the R. O. T. C. are better prepared for taking up a military career later in life if they choose than boys who have not thus been trained, however, cannot be questioned. America is more than likely to need competent military leadership in the years to come. Competent military leadership is one insurance of peace.

● The Reserve Officers' Training corps as constituted today dates from a 1920 amendment to the national defense act of 1916. Before that time, however, there had been military training in educational institutions in this country, even to a limited extent in some high schools. Almost as far back as Washington's time students of certain colleges and academies were being drilled in the manual of arms and taught military subjects.

● Colleges and universities that became beneficiaries under the land grant act of 1862 were obliged by terms of the act to introduce military training into their curricula. The act was originated in a bill proposed in the house by Representative Justin S. Morrill of Vermont and finally approved in the form of a bill presented in the senate by Senator Benjamin F. Wade of Ohio. Thus a number of educational institutions have been teaching students the fundamentals of soldiering for many years.

● It was the creation of the present-day R. O. T. C. nineteen years ago, however, that standardized military training in the universities, colleges, and schools and put it on a businesslike basis.

● The R. O. T. C. is divided into two general groups, known as divisions, the senior and the junior. The senior division is further divided into three classes, as follows:

● Class MC—Comprising purely military colleges and universities, such as Norwich university at Northfield, Vt.; Pennsylvania Military college at Chester, Pa.; Virginia Polytechnic institute at Blacksburg, Va.; and Virginia Military institute at Lexington, Va.

● Class CC—Civil colleges and universities which are not essentially military, but which provide four years of military training, the first two years of which are compulsory in a number of Omaha dresses up for its premiere of the picture "Union Pacific."

Film Stars Learning About America from the Fans

By ED SULLIVAN

Hollywood.

PREVIEWS such as that of "Union Pacific," held at Omaha, and that of "Dodge City," held in the dust bowl area, are most important because they have taught Hollywood something about the American way of living and thinking.

The film colony finally is going out to meet the people it seeks to entertain, and the net result should be of advantage.

In a vague way Hollywood has known that there was a vague public. Hollywood knew it because of box office receipts. If the public liked a picture the box office receipts were great; if the public disliked a picture the box office receipts were less. But until the introduction of previews at cities throughout the middle west Hollywood had not had the opportunity to dramatize box office receipts in terms of flesh-and-blood people.

At Omaha the movie people stepped down off the silver screen and met movie fans—thousands of them, tens of thousands of them, hundreds of thousands of them. I'll never forget the stunned look on the face of Barbara Stanwyck when she alighted at the Omaha station, converted into a stockade for the occasion. As far as her eye could see Miss Stanwyck saw faces, waving hands, babies sitting atop their fathers' shoulders. "So this," said Barbara weakly, "is America." George Raft nodded. "These are the people who decide when we are to be a movie star—and who decide when we are all washed up."

I was on the Omaha trip, and also the trips to Dodge City and San Francisco, where "The Life of Alexander Graham Bell" was previewed; and the reaction a reporter gets to the tremendous enthusiasm of the movie fans is that of pride in being associated with Hollywood. Surely any medium which can so stir people is important in a mighty way. Complementing that feeling of pride is a realization of the obligation that goes along with it.

You feel a particular awareness of that obligation because these hundreds of thousands of people who turned out for a preview essentially are decent, nice people. They're not fresh or scornful or sophisticated. They're eager—eager enough to stand in line for hours to see their movie idols close up. When Barbara Stanwyck, in response to the shouts of the milling thousands in the Omaha streets, leaned out of the Hotel Fontenelle window and tossed her flowers to them, they cheered the gesture to the echo. "Only a nice girl would do that," a white-haired old lady said to her companion, and the elderly gentleman nodded. They're appreciative. They're quick to see the good in everything.

How do the movie stars react to all of this? Do they get a laugh out of midwestern naiveté? Do they pass through such an experience bored and blasé?

Well, let me tell you what was Errol Flynn's reaction. We sat next to each other at the Basil Rathbone party and fell to talking about the "Dodge City" trip. "Ed. that's the most amazing thing that ever happened to me," said Flynn. "You know, I'm not an American. I never knew this country very well. That trip was the first time I've ever met a lot of Americans close up, and the thing that impressed me most strongly was their decency. They're grand people. So help me, I'd do anything to please them."

Barbara Stanwyck . . . "So this is America!"

This preview business is in its infancy. It will grow and grow until a preview in Hollywood will be the exception to the rule. I'll tell you why. The studios are getting tremendous value from the practice. Not only in the box office sense, but also in emotional and inspirational values. They find that performers after one of these trips are easier to handle, more alive to the job at hand. It has taken the movie fans to take the temperament out of the movie stars.

Perhaps had it not been for the war situation in Europe none of this would have happened. The war scares and Hitler's raids narrowed the European market, so the producers set about the task of catering to the domestic market with films frankly American in theme. "Union Pacific," "Alexander Graham Bell," "Dodge City," "Brigham Young," "Stagecoach," "Jesse James," "The Oklahoma Kid" were the result. Each of these was keyed around a certain town or city, so it followed naturally that those films should be previewed at these cities or towns. That is how it all started.

As a result Hollywood is learning about the American way through direct contact instead of from the pages of a script. The movies have gone back to the idea of the circus parades through the streets of cities, and the result has been electrifying.

War Minded Empress

Eugenie Put France Into Conflict

By EDMUND TAYLOR

(Copyright: 1939: Chicago Tribune.)

Paris.

SIXTY-NINE years ago this spring Europe, as today, was experiencing a war scare. But the motivating figure then was a woman—the beautiful and ambitious Empress Eugénie, consort of Napoleon III. of France.

Today the French generally lay the blame for the disastrous Franco-Prussian war largely upon "that Spanish woman." She was a Spanish countess with, however, one-fourth American blood. Her maternal grandfather was William Kirkpatrick, consul general at Malaga and a naturalized American born in Scotland. When she married Napoleon he felt called upon to make a speech from the throne justifying what was considered a mésalliance.

That Eugénie played a large part in getting France into a war with the Prussians to preserve the crown for her husband, and still more for her son, is undoubted. French writers, who would have every patriotic reason for blaming Bismarck solely, reluctantly admit it, by inference at least, and impartial foreign statesmen and diplomats of the time and historians since then virtually say it in so many words.

Napoleon's régime tottered on the thin edge of annihilation before the strong republican sentiment, and it became evident that with his death (and his health was very bad) the dynasty would be through. Eugénie thought a successful war against Germany—and, using bad judgment, she believed the army would be easily victorious—would reëstablish Napoleon in popular esteem and make the succession of their son certain.

All neutral observers in Paris as well as the government itself knew the régime could not last much longer. Count Vitzthum, Austrian diplomat at Paris, secretly wrote his chief, Count Friedrich von Beust, at Vienna, that the "opinion is widespread that the government is counting on war as the sole remaining card." Austria at that time was a close ally of France, and Emperor Francis Joseph had every reason to hope that the monarchy would prevail over the republicans. Prince Klemens von Metternich, the great Austrian statesman, also recognized that Napoleon was on the verge of being overthrown by the growing republican movement in a confidential letter to his government in Vienna, in February, 1870.

Comte de Soissons writes of Eugénie's "thirst for power" and how when she failed to keep Napoleon from aiding the Italians in 1859 "she consoled herself by being appointed regent, an honor which she desired ardently." Soissons adds that "she had an inflated idea of her own importance." The Mexican war, he said, "was proof of her disastrous policy of mixing in state affairs."

Empress Eugenie, from a painting of her as a bride.

The Marquis de Rochefort-Lucay, contemporary journalist, declared she "has already taken hold of the regency while the emperor is alive," referring to the period five years before the Franco-Prussian war when he already suffered a serious disease and was "physically and morally used up," citing Soissons again.

Metternich refers to the regency in one of his confidential letters early in 1870: "Regarding the possibility of the emperor's death, she is not afraid to face it. While she is alive there is no fear of irresolution."

Bismarck

Another secret Metternich letter to the Vienna government in July of the same year declares that the "empress hopes Prussia won't yield," and again, "today I found the empress so aroused in favor of war I could not resist joining her slightly." A third letter says, "The empress is younger by ten years at the idea of war."

William Gladstone, the British premier, in a conversation with a diplomat—who declared his belief that not all French cabinet members wanted war, but that the emperor seemed to and the empress was exerting a very bad influence—burst out vehemently at the ruinous political influence of this personally so lovable a lady.

Metternich is said to have had a bad quarter of an hour announcing to the imperial couple Austria's decision not to help France—"and especially to Eugénie."

But the worst indictment of all is perhaps the gentle one of Maurice Paleologue, a member of the French academy. It appears in a book, "The Tragic Empress," in a series of conversations, when the ex-empress was 90 years old, concerning the time when at 75 years of age she made a Paris visit (she died in Madrid at 94).

Paleologue stated his case to Eugénie: "Firstly, the shortcomings of our military organization forbade us to settle our quarrel with Prussia by arms, and, secondly, the diplomatic situation of Europe did not permit us to count on any alliance; thirdly, the war could have been honorably avoided if previous negotiations had been conducted with less boastfulness and cooler temper; fourthly, the emperor ought not have assumed the functions of generalissimo, because he was both morally and physically incapable of exercising them."

The ex-empress replied vigorously to each count, ignoring Paleologue's polite, incredulous interpolations and quiet rebuttal of her arguments. To Paleologue's suggestion that "negotiations must never be opened with defiance" Eugénie burst out: "Withdraw? Temporize? We could not. We should have had the whole country rising against us. They were already taunting us with weakness. For four years our ruthless enemies, the Orleanists, legitimists, and republicans, never wearied flinging it in our faces."

Paleologue then, declaring that France's behavior struck him like some one who has escaped a frightful danger hurling himself back into it, remarked, "Your majesty's rôle is claimed to have been considerable and even decisive," and provoked her into defending herself: "I had long been convinced we were treading a fatal path, that the liberal empire was leading us to revolution. After Sadowa [where the Prussians overwhelmed the Austrians, July 3, 1866] and Mexico [where the French withdrew before the threat of a clash with General Grant's veterans] we could no longer put national pride through a new ordeal. We had to take vengeance. You will object that the empire alone was considered and not France. As God is my witness, I never separated France from the empire in my mind. As my husband's health had become such a source of anxiety, I had first and foremost to concern myself with handing over the power to our son intact, for it was through him that the Napoleonic institutions were to be rejuvenated.

"We had no desire for war; nevertheless, we did not fear it, as our army seemed invincible. When three days later Bismarck slapped our face with his Ems telegram we had no choice save between war and dishonor."

Napoleon III.

Paleologue gently disagreed, and Eugénie trembled with fury. She then voluntarily brought out the accusation that she pressed the emperor to take supreme command despite secret knowledge of his grave condition, in order to "act as regent at the very opening of hostilities."

"I am supposed to have said the emperor will soon give out under the overstrain and his strength will soon collapse. If he is forced to admit physical impotence, that is tantamount to abdication. If he clings to the command it will mean death. In either case the throne will be mine until my son comes of age."

She then proceeded vehemently to deny it in detail and ever having said: "It was I who wanted this war. It is my war."

She blamed President Theirs for the accusation that she exclaimed this to First Secretary Lesourd of the French embassy in Berlin after he had notified Bismarck of the declaration of war, and burst out: "Never did that sacrilegious phrase or any like it come from my lips."

When the storm finally broke she took refuge in the smart western house of Dr. Thomas William Evans, an American dentist, and when she fled Paris for Dieppe and exile it was with the assistance of a carriage and four lent her by Evans.

Dear Miss Tinée: Attention Mr. Wally Rand. I am one of your many fans, Miss Tinée, and a certain article which appeared in your column last Sunday signed by Wally Rand amused me at first, and then I became quite disgusted.

Mr. Rand, I hope you can take it as well as you can dish it out. Any one who is so small and narrow-minded as not to allow another to have an opinion of her own! Perhaps you like vanilla, Mr. Rand; I do not; but if I were to act as you did I should, perhaps, call you a liar and a dumb so-and-so. Since you feel the way you do, perhaps the theaters would allow you to see a picture, and then if it quite suited you, you could pay the small admission afterward.

Thank you, Miss Tinée. You are very welcome, Mr. Rand. Sincerely,

MARION SMITH.

Dear Miss Tinée: This is the first time I've written to your wonderful column, but when a fellow like Wally Rand writes a letter like the one said Wally Rand wrote I just can't sit back and let you take a thing like that on the chin without striking back for you. Ach du lieber, who does he think you are, a master mind? Der kleine hund (too bad I'm not allowed to swear; my mother told me it's not nice), but if he would address another letter inclosing his own address I would gladly punch his little nose for him (providing he is smaller than I).

I don't believe I have seen a better colored-people picture than "Green Pastures," which he calls nonsense. I read your reviews whenever able, and I know that they are admirable. As Booth Tarkington would say, "Dob dab the dibble dabble" to any one like this Wally Rand. If you don't receive any more letters from this side of the fence I shall be very much surprised. Whew! I'm glad that's off my chest.

Now, Miss Tinée, I would like to mention how swell, how really swell Henry Fonda took the part of Frank James in "Jesse James." I don't agree with you on Tyrone Power's mustache, though; I thought it looked fine. By the way, Miss Tinée, no wonder Dick Powell has been neglected in your column. I hope this won't make him feel glad if he reads this, but, was zum teufel, that guy can't act worth a durn. Now I guess I've jumped on people's necks enough for this time, but I'll try to write again soon. STANLEY S.

Dear Miss Tinée: Of all the asinine missiles ever cast the letter by Wally Rand in The Sunday Tribune must take all prizes! It is a pity you aren't supernatural and therefore endowed with the gift of pleasing "all of the people all of the time." If this Wally person doesn't like your viewpoints, why in the name of common sense does he bother to read them? There is just this to be said: I don't always agree with your opinions, and I am free to agree or disagree as the case may be. Certainly there is no cause for being offended just because you are good enough to try to guide the public in general to the good pictures and away from those not so good. At least you are in there working for us, and you can believe me, I and many others appreciate your efforts.

With every wish for your continued success, I remain yours sincerely,

(MRS.) MARIAN WALTHER.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have just finished reading your column of April 16, and after the remark you had in there I can't understand how your column has stayed in The Tribune as long as it has.

For the past year I have noticed your editor's notes, and after reading them they have always left me thinking you terribly sarcastic. Well, your remark to one Wally Rand leaves me thinking you one of the rudest people living.

You certainly have a one-track mind, and you will not take criticism. When any one disagrees with you all you can do is give a sarcastic answer. Never have I seen you let some one tell you anything. Perhaps if you would you wouldn't have a letter like this among your morning mail.

I agree completely with Wally Rand, and I think you owe him an apology. You certainly have proven yourself a poor sport, and your inability to take criticism is very evident. Sincerely,

A DISSATISFIED READER.

Dear Miss Tinée: Hurrah for Wally Rand! His article does look well in print! After seeing "Idiot's Delight" I've decided to see the pictures you give poor criticisms and stay home when you praise a picture.

I've always enjoyed the pictures you thought were terrible, and I consider myself a good critic, too.

Sincerely yours. NANCY.

Inside Italy—What Mussolini Has Done

A Traveler from Abroad Studies the New Roman Empire

Paris, France.

ITALY DOES NOT want war, and Italians do not like Germans. Italy is not in position to endure a long war and will go to almost any extent to prevent a war that would make it a military ally of Germany.

These are among some of the impressions I received on my recent visit to Italy.

Mussolini, from my observations, has done a remarkably fine job in Italy. He is the idol of the working classes and seems also to have the support of the upper classes. Business men of the country are somewhat divided in their opinion of his internal policies, but as a whole the opinion is more favorable than unfavorable. His external policies, and in particular his relations with Germany, have not been so favorably received by the people as a whole.

It is generally recognized that Mussolini has rebuilt Italy morally, mentally, and physically. Those who knew the country fifteen years ago assert that it has been completely transformed and that Mussolini has done more for the Italians in a bare space of fifteen years than ever previously had been done for them in a whole century.

Fifteen years ago there were disorders throughout Italy. A countess whom I know told me that her father, a distinguished general of the World war, had lost complete faith in Italy when he saw people openly insulting any one wearing the Italian uniform. After the war the country had the mental attitude of a defeated nation. Today, however, the Italian people have learned discipline. They have learned how to live better and cleaner lives.

Children of the country are extremely patriotic. School buildings and school equipment are excellent, and education and training are said to be of a high order. Slums gradually are being eliminated and modern hospitals are being built.

There is no unemployment. Italy has sufficient of food, although the workingmen and their families do not have, or cannot afford to have, much meat in their diet. There are no labor disputes. Of more than ordinary interest to me was a sign in the office of a factory in Naples. It read:

> Discipline must be accepted. When not accepted it must be imposed. MUSSOLINI.

Employés entering or leaving the premises read this sign daily with a show of respect rather than one of resentment. Everywhere, especially in Rome and south of Rome, I noted the love and admiration for Mussolini which was spontaneous among the workingmen. A guide and a chauffeur would tell me, "He is one of us."

During my travels in Italy I was accompanied by an American banker and his Italian representative. Through them I learned that business was prosperous in that country. Companies, they told me, were making lots of money in lire. They named two great American corporations which they said were making enormous profits—as much as 70 and 80 per cent on their capital. The difficulties of these companies lie in the exporting of the profits. They are investing them, however, in office buildings and in shares of Italian companies.

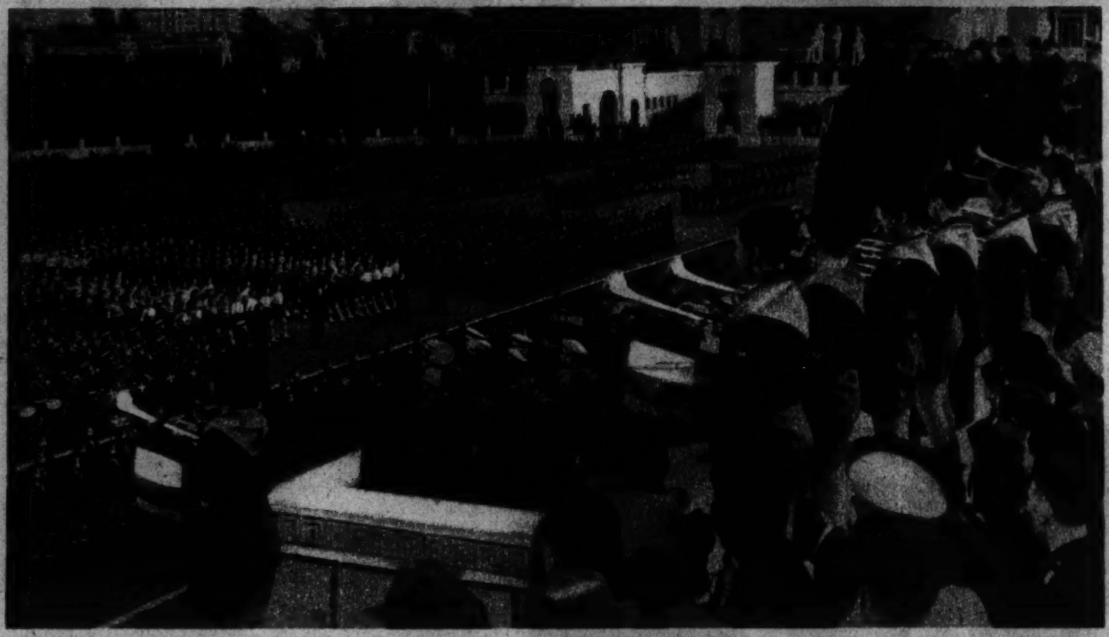
Through information obtained from a business man in Milan I got the impression that income taxes in Italy are lower in rates than those of the United States. The indirect taxes, on the other hand, are higher, because there is a tax upon every sales transaction. The income tax in Italy is determined by negotiation rather than by statement, so there is plenty of opportunity for manipulation. The amount arrived at becomes the annual tax for a period of three years.

The business man in Italy who conducts his business within the boundaries of his country and does not have to export his goods prospers and apparently is satisfied with the system. It is a worry to him, however, that he cannot convert his wealth or profits into something more substantial than the paper currency of his country.

"It is generally recognized that Mussolini has rebuilt Italy morally, mentally, and physically." . . . Italian girl members of national opera ballet on parade in Berlin. (Acme photos.)

"Mussolini does not undertake any move without first consulting the sovereign." . . . Il Duce and King Victor Emmanuel at an army review.



"Children of the country are extremely patriotic." . . . Two thousand boys and girls in exhibition in Mussolini forum honoring visiting notables.

This leads to the crux of the whole matter, which is that Italy is not self-sufficient and that it requires raw materials. Mussolini without doubt is establishing a state of society in Italy that commands admiration. But the question is: Can he support it? And how can he get the necessary foreign credits to do it?

I met an Italian woman of the nobility who was on friendly terms with Mussolini and who not longer ago than last summer had returned to Italy from a trip to America. Signor Mussolini, according to this woman, was eager to know why the opinion of him in America was so unfavorable.

"People criticize me for the wars that I have made, but they don't think of the wars that I have avoided," the woman quoted Mussolini as saying.

She went on to explain the premier's relations with the king. According to her, the two are on friendly terms and Mussolini does not undertake any move without first consulting the sovereign and obtaining his approval. Premier and king have long conferences twice a week. It is the woman's belief that this respect for the king's opinion on the part of Mussolini is an evidence of the latter's cleverness.

Italians are thoroughly loyal to their king. Even my guide, a true Fascist, told me that all Italians trusted their king to control Mussolini or his successor against any acts that would be detrimental to Italy's interests. Before going to Italy I had the impression that the king and Mussolini were not fully in accord. My visit taught me that I had been wrong; that the premier was working in full agreement with the king.

I had an audience with one of the leading Fascists of Rome, a man high in public life. In the course of our conversation he explained a number of points of the governmental policy of his country, including that in respect to its dealing with the Jews. The Italian attitude toward the Jews, he pointed out, is altogether different from that of Germany. Since the war, and especially within the last few years, Italy has had a great influx of Jews. It therefore, according to my informant, became necessary to eliminate the undesirables among this racial group and to prevent a large number of new ones with communistic doctrines from entering the country.

The Italian law on this subject, I was assured, does not affect Jews who were in the country before the war, being applicable only to those who have entered the country since the termination of the war.

If any Jew can prove that he has done something of material advantage to Italy he immediately is classed outside of this restricting law. If he has served in the army, for example, contributed to art or industry, or done something for the betterment of Italian industry or finance he is left free of restrictions. I found in my travels in that country that Jews do continue their business enterprises in Italy.

The Fascist leader whom I interviewed told me that the Italians did not like the Germans. This was his prelude to an explanation of Italy's present position in international affairs. To survive, he said, Italy must have raw products and colonies. These colonies, he went on to tell, were promised to Italy during the war. Since that time, in answer to Italy's demands, France and England have continuously said no. The reply has been unsatisfactory to Italy, and in the opinion of my informant the French policy for years has been a stupid one.

A few years ago France could have liquidated all of the Italian claims, I was told, by either giving up some German mandate or permitting Italy to go into some undeveloped colonies or states such as Ethiopia. When Italy could obtain satisfaction from neither France nor Great Britain it moved into Ethiopia. Then France and England decided to impose sanctions. It was these sanctions that forced Italy into the arms of Germany. The Italians, my authority repeated, do not like the Germans and do not trust them. They look upon Germany as a colossus. It is the belief of the man who thus revealed the Italian distrust and dislike for the Germans that if France could only come to a decision to satisfy Italy a strong combination of Italy, France, and Spain would be in position to restrain Germany from further territorial acquisitions.

His explanation of the Italian attitude was especially interesting in view of subsequent events. Italy is discontented. Its actions, he said, were based not upon aggressiveness but upon a desire to make countries that have possessions collaborate in finding a basis for a true peace, with justice. The Italian conception of justice means some measure of the world's goods, such as raw materials and colonies. The distribution of colonies, the Italians point out, does not correspond with the size and populations of foreign nations.

Italy has claims upon France for certain colonies which were promised her during the war and of which, it contends, it was cheated through the post-war negotiations. My informant intimated that Italy's general claim might be liquidated if France and Great Britain could make it possible for Italy to develop its empire. The Suez canal charges heavy fees on all shipping passing through it, but France and Great Britain are compensated by dividends issued by the canal company. Italy, which is the second largest user of the canal, wants the administrative régime revised so as to allow it a reduction in canal fees or allot it shares in the company. Italy also wants a port as an outlet for Ethiopia and a share in the railroad linking that country with the sea.

While traveling in their country I spoke with many Italians and became thoroughly convinced that the French and the British could have bought Mussolini off in March, immediately after Hitler's conquest of Czecho-Slovakia. While Premier Daladier's speech in reply to Italian demands was approved highly in England, the United States, and France, it served to convince the Italians that through peaceful negotiations their claims on France and Great Britain could not be settled.

This is an illustration of the general proposition that these issues cannot be settled by peaceful means, but only by force. The two dictators, Mussolini and Hitler, seem to be smart enough not to attempt to use force on either France or Great Britain, but only to use it at the proper time against weak nations that are unable to defend themselves.

In Rome and everywhere south of Rome, as I have pointed out, the people are thoroughly in harmony with Fascism. As I went through the north of Italy I found less saluting and more opposition to the régime. In Florence I learned that between 90 and 95 per cent of the people in Rome and south of it were stanch supporters of the régime, that around Florence and other northern regions slightly more than a majority were for the régime, and that in some districts, as that around Venice, the opposition was greater than the support. The farther north one goes the more outspoken do the people become against Mussolini's policy of collaboration with the Germans. They fear the inevitable battle that must occur some day between a powerful Germany and Italy.

I was informed in Florence that a survey of homes already had been made in that region to determine the number of officers that might be accommodated in the event of war. The people of that city also confirmed the statements obtained elsewhere in the country that Italians had a universal dislike for Germans and that Germans held the Italians in no high regard. In all my travels in Italy and Germany, I might mention here, I never have met an Italian with a good word for the Germans or a German with a good word for the Italians.

It is my conclusion that this alliance between Mussolini and Hitler is an unnatural one and that Mussolini would not be supported by the Italian people in any war involving France and Great Britain in which the Italians would have to fight side by side with the Germans.

A story was told to me in Florence that when some Italian officers and their wives were sent to Vienna after Hitler's coup there was noticeable no little ill feeling between the Germans and the Italians. One German officer, according to the story which came to me, said to a woman who was not an Italian: "We Germans do not like the Italians—furthermore, we don't trust them."

The Germans when they went into Austria, I learned, sent a strong force immediately to the Brenner pass.

From all that I heard and all that I saw in Italy I believe Italy does not wish for war. The Italians openly discuss their aversion for the Germans. They also express a dislike for the French. Still, it is my impression that Mussolini does not want war. Those close to him believe he knows that war would mean the collapse of his régime and Italy.

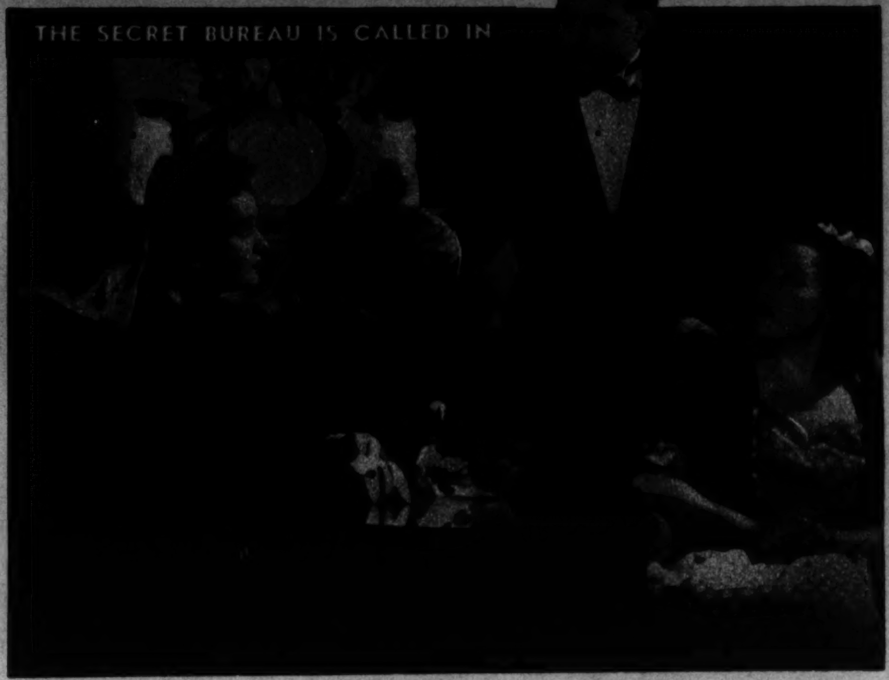
The Return of PETER QUILL

NEXT WEEK • THE ISLE OF TERROR

1 A strange terror seizes the home of Miles Mallory, wealthy aircraft designer. Day and night Mrs. Mallory hears mysterious noises and sees writhing shadows.

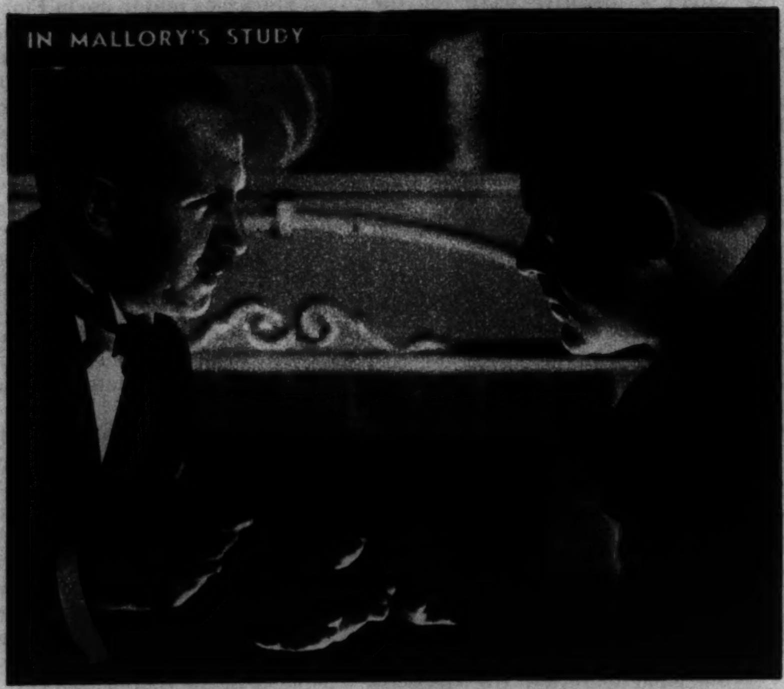


THE SECRET BUREAU IS CALLED IN

2 "I am grateful, Miss Carson and Captain Dorn, for your presence," Mallory says. "I fear this horrible plague is a plot to sabotage my part in America's rearmament program."

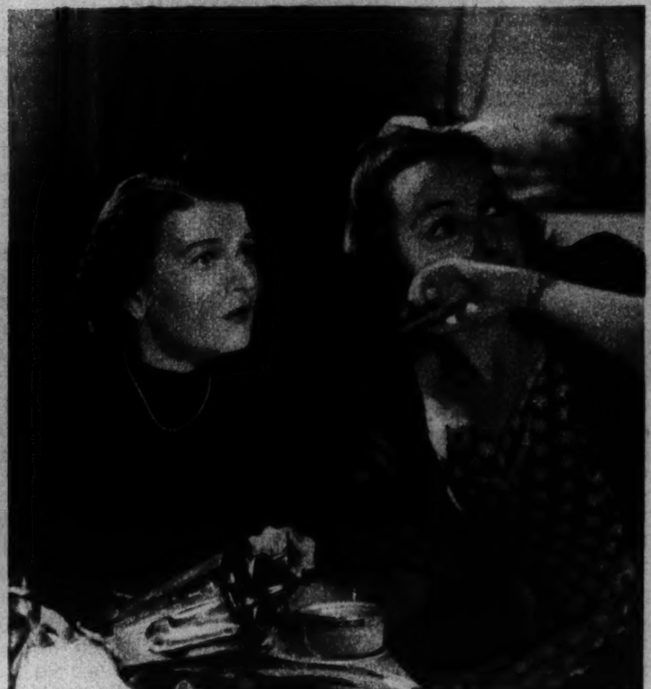
WHILE DORN AND MALLORY CONFER

3 Lorna Mallory confides in Gail: "The shadows are horrible, but they are not the worst. It's the other thing . . . the . . . O! I can't stand it much longer!"



IN MALLORY'S STUDY

4 "I find it difficult to say this, Captain Dorn, but I feel you should know. Mrs. Mallory has not been—ah—in the best of health, shall we say? I rather fear these nameless terrors are . . . hallucinations."



5 But at that moment Gail has horrifying proof of Mrs. Mallory's sanity . . . a headless shadow falls across the room.

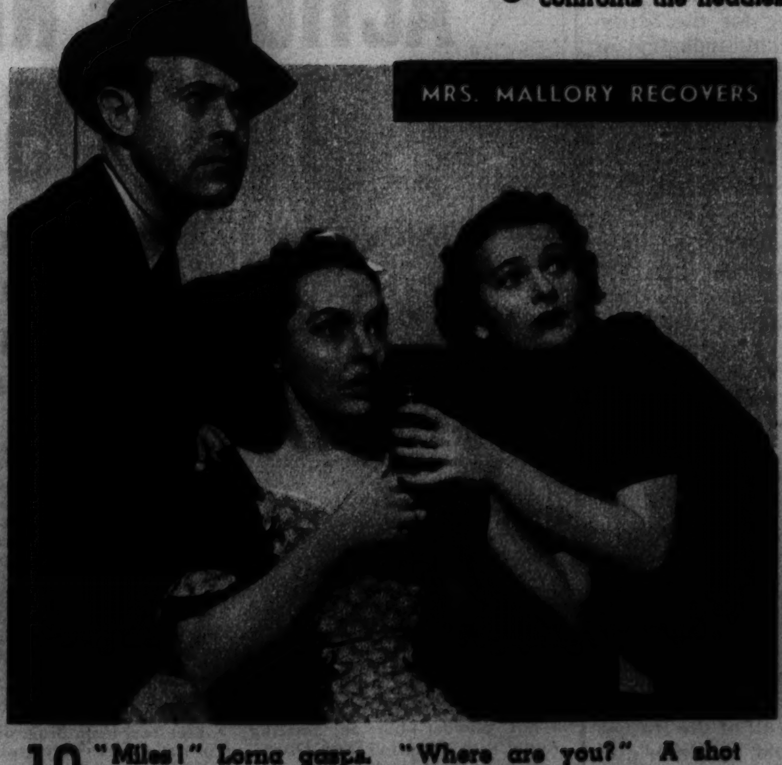
6 "It's here again!" screams Lorna. "The headless man!" Undeterred by bullets from Gail's automatic, the apparition stalks to the door of Mallory's study and locks it. Then it turns to Mrs. Mallory . . .

7 Lifting the unconscious woman, the headless thing moves toward the window. Gail, stunned into inactivity, watches helplessly . . .

PETER QUILL TAKES A HAND

8 But suddenly apparition meets apparition . . . a crash of glass, and a grotesque figure confronts the headless one. As Peter Quill springs into action the headless thing drops Mrs. Mallory and tries to escape.

9 "Get him, Dorn!" shouts Peter Quill. Dorn tears away the black hood. "Good heavens, Quill, it's the spy Raclov! I thought we nabbed him in the night club raid." Raclov speaks: "You did, Dorn, but I got out of that, just like I'll get out of this!"



MRS. MALLORY RECOVERS

10 "Miles!" Lorna gasps. "Where are you?" A shot answers her. "Quick! The study!" shouts Quill. There they find the body of Mallory, the world-famous airplane designer, slain by his own hand. . . . A note is on the table.

But of late I noticed that my wife suspected I was selling plans of military planes to the Red Circle.
I tried to frighten her in every way possible to induce a nervous breakdown and get her out of the way.
Tonight as a last resort,
Raclov was to terrify her,
hoping her weak heart would fail completely. If not, he was to kidnap her.

11 "This note tells the story," Peter Quill says quietly. "Mallory was a victim of his own avarice. The strange shadows that terrified Lorna were made with a shadowscope operated by Raclov. Raclov's bulletproof coat turned aside your bullets, Gail, but not the fire of my thermion gun."

America's R. O. T. C. Builds Character!

A Voluntary Branch of Education

these institutions. Examples of these are the University of Illinois at Champaign, Knox college at Galesburg, Ill., and the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, Mich.

Class MI—Essentially military schools which do not grant academic degrees but which provide advance military training. Culver Military academy at Culver, Ind.; Valley Forge Military academy at Wayne, Pa., and Oklahoma Military academy at Claremore, Okla., represent this class.

The junior R. O. T. C. is divided into two classes, as follows:

Class MS—Essentially military schools of the preparatory class, such as Morgan Park Military academy in Chicago, Northwestern Military and Naval academy at Lake Geneva, Wis., and St. John's Military academy at Delafield, Wis.

Class CS—High schools and other institutions which do not meet the requirements of any of the classes aforementioned.

Graduates of the three classes of the senior division and of class MS of the junior division are eligible to commissions in the Officers' Reserve corps after having completed satisfactorily a six weeks' course in a summer training camp and after having attained the age of 21. Of classes MC and CC a large majority of the graduates naturally are 21 years old or older. Graduates of class MI of the senior division and of class MS generally at the time of completing their courses are of the age of high school graduates and thus have to wait from one to three years before obtaining their reserve commissions. No one is given a reserve commission until he is legally of age.

Official figures of June 30, 1938, from the 1938 annual report of the secretary of war showed a total R. O. T. C. enrollment of 154,523. In the senior division were 93,308 and in the junior division 61,125. Figures published in the Army and Navy Register of March 4 this year disclosed that there were 176,896 enrollees in the R. O. T. C. at the beginning of the 1938-'39 school year, 111,614 in the senior division and 65,282 in the junior division.

These figures represent the authorized enrollment and include for the high schools only students of the three upper grades. High school freshmen who are given military training are not actually carried on the R. O. T. C. rolls, although in the schools themselves they may be regarded as a part of the cadet body.

There are 226 units of the senior R. O. T. C., representing the following branches of service: Infantry, cavalry, field artillery, coast artillery corps, corps of engineers, signal corps, ordnance department, medical corps, and chemical warfare service. In the senior division each branch of the service in any institution represents a unit. A number of institutions therefore have units in multiple. The University of Illinois, for example, has six units, represented by the following branches: Infantry, cavalry, field artillery, coast artillery corps, engineers, and signal corps.

The junior R. O. T. C. is comprised of 139 units. In the high schools only one branch of the service is represented, the infantry.

The 139 junior units represent actually a great many more than that number of schools. The twenty-seven Chicago public high schools which have R. O. T. C. comprise only one unit. Twelve high schools in Detroit make up another unit. St. Mel High school in Chicago is a unit by itself, as are a number of other schools.

The R. O. T. C. is supervised by regular army officers and is divided as to military corps areas. In the 6th corps area, which has headquarters in Chicago, the staf officer in charge of R. O. T. C. affairs is Col. C. A. Thuis (infantry). He is the connecting link between the regular army officers stationed at the various R. O. T. C. units in his area and the corps area commander, Maj. Gen. Stanley H. Ford. In the 6th corps area, which embraces Illinois, Wisconsin, and Michigan, are forty-one R. O. T. C. units, of which nineteen are junior and twenty-two senior units. Total enrollment in the senior division in the area last fall was 9,027. In the junior division the enrollment was 13,530, the high schools having 12,496 R. O. T. C. cadets and the purely military schools 1,034.

Since it is the purpose of this article to deal chiefly with the junior R. O. T. C. and specifically with the high school units in Chicago, we shall discontinue at this point discussion of the senior units, a subject easily providing material sufficient for a separate article.

Within the limits of the city of Chicago are three junior R. O. T. C. units. The Morgan Park Military academy (class MS) constitutes one of these units, St. Mel High school another, and twenty-seven public high schools a third. The public high schools are:

Amundsen, Austin, Bowen, Calumet, Crane, Du Sable, Englewood, Fenger, Foreman, Harrison, Harper, Hirsch, Hyde Park, Kelly, Lake View, Lane, Lindblom, Marshall, Morgan Park (not to be confused with the military academy), Roosevelt, Schurz, Senn, Steinmetz, Sullivan, Tilden, Von Steuben, and Waller.

Target practice is part of the cadets' training.

Cadet corps were instituted in some of the city's public high schools as early as February, 1917. Two commissioned officers and sixteen noncommissioned officers were detailed as instructors and assigned by the war department to the schools here. The cadets were uniformed at the expense of a citizens' uniform committee. Then came the World war, which took away all of the instructors. The corps, however, carried on by the aid of teachers of physical education. Not a long while after the war the board of education applied to the war department for introduction here of a junior unit of the newly created R. O. T. C. The application was approved and the Chicago corps as it is constituted today was established.

Present head of the Chicago public high school unit is Col. William F. Morrison (field artillery), who was assigned to the work here in 1935. His official title is professor of military science and tactics. He has directly under him four commissioned officers and thirty-four enlisted men (sergeants, staf sergeants, and technical sergeants). These are his faculty. The commissioned officers are Maj. John H. Ringe (infantry), Maj. William B. Weston (field artillery), Maj. Joseph L. Lambert (cavalry), and Maj. Richard H. Darrell (cavalry).

The commissioned officers are in charge of the organization work. They correspond to the top executives in a big industrial organization. The enlisted men are instructors at the individual schools. A few of the larger schools have two of these instructors, the remaining schools one each. Some of these instructors have been with the Chicago unit ever since it was instituted under Maj. Frank L. Beals, who now is an assistant superintendent of the Chicago schools. Colonel Morrison works directly under corps area headquarters in all purely military matters and under Major Beals in all matters pertaining strictly to school affairs.

There are 7,612 uniformed cadets in the unit under Colonel Morrison. These are boys carried on the government's R. O. T. C. and are, strictly speaking, members of the corps. In addition there are 1,766 freshmen in the high schools who are being given military training. The training of the freshmen, however, is given at no added expense to the government, and the freshman cadets are not supplied with uniforms.

Membership in the R. O. T. C. is purely voluntary with these high school boys. In order to be admitted to the corps a boy must obtain a parental consent in writing. After his admission he must comply with corps regulations in order to remain a member of this body. As a reward and as a part of governmental aid the war department furnishes each cadet on the rolls with a uniform, supplies him with a rifle for drill purposes, and gives him free military training.

Uniforms provided by the government are issued under bond to the board of education. The care and upkeep of the uniforms are the cadets' responsibility during the school year, but at the end of each school year all uniforms are collected, inspected, dry-cleaned, and reconditioned for reissue at the beginning of the next year. Naturally some uniforms are found to be worn out and are condemned. These are replaced by new ones. The cadet uniform consists of coat, trousers, and overseas cap, all of olive drab wool. Cadets are prohibited from wearing uniforms that are not strictly regulation.

The rifles with which the school cadets drill are of the regulation Springfield type. They are the property of the government and are issued to the board of education under bond. The number on hand in the schools is adequate to give each cadet an opportunity for arms drill. Since the bolts of the rifles have been removed or provided with devices that prevent their operation, and no ammunition for the weapons is permitted to be brought into the schools, there is absolutely no danger of gun accidents involving these high-powered rifles.

For schools which maintain indoor rifle ranges the government provides small target rifles of .22 caliber. By the use of these the boys are taught how to shoot straight and how to handle loaded guns. Target practice, of course, is under the eyes of a military instructor.

The government supplies the cadets with no camping or kitchen equipment, uniforms and rifles constituting the major part of government property at the schools.

Of all the twenty-seven Chicago public high schools Lane has by far the largest organization of uniformed cadets, its outfit totaling about 950. Lane in addition has 117 freshmen taking military training. These boys, upper classmen and freshmen, constitute three battalions, which make up one regiment.

Schurz, with about 500 cadets, has a regiment of two battalions. Schools with smaller uniformed groups have a battalion of four companies each or one of three companies each. The highest ranking cadet officer at a school is a lieutenant colonel. This depends on the size of the cadet body. At schools with battalions only the highest ranking cadet officer is a major. Lane has one lieutenant colonel and four majors. Cadet officers in the unit include also captains and first and second lieutenants. The total of cadet officers is about 600, and the whole of the cadet bodies of the twenty-seven schools is termed a corps.

In addition to the cadet officers at the individual schools there are the corps staf officers. These are selected by competitive examination from among the officers of the schools. Highest ranking officer of the corps staf is a colonel, and on the staf are two lieutenant colonels, four majors, and four captains. Staf officers theoretically are appointed for one year each, but in practice they mostly are chosen from the senior class. Appointed in the spring, the senior officer's term expires with his graduation in June.

The regular army sergeant in charge at each school bears the title of military instructor. It is he who gives orders to the cadet officers. It is he also who instructs classes on military subjects. The cadet who is a member of the Chicago public high school unit is required to wear his uniform at school two days out of every week. These are the military inspection days at the school. Military instruction, however, is given five days a week.

The course of instruction covers four full years, although, as previously pointed out, freshmen are taught at no added expense to the government and are not officially carried on the R. O. T. C. rolls. The course includes the following subjects: Military fundamentals, leadership, weapons, and combat training. Military fundamentals embrace the study of military organization, discipline, sanitation, first aid and hygiene, military history, map making, the obligations of citizenship, and like subjects. Leadership takes in drill and command and physical training. Weapons include the study of the characteristics of the infantry weapon and rifle marksmanship. Combat training covers combat principles of the rifle squad and section, scouting and patroling, and musketry.

Cadets enrolled in the public high school R. O. T. C. may be assigned to band duty, in which musical instruction is conducted by instructors from the school system's department of music. The cadet joining a band or drum and bugle corps, however, must take certain military subjects prescribed by the R. O. T. C. In other words, he cannot devote all of his R. O. T. C. time to music. The number of boys assigned to musical organizations is strictly limited and depends upon the R. O. T. C. enrollment of the school. The number of bandsmen at Lane, for example, as authorized by Colonel Morrison is sixty-five. In schools with a smaller number of cadets the number of bandsmen naturally is proportionately smaller. The government supplies uniforms for the musicians but does not supply instruments or musical instruction.

The R. O. T. C. setup at St. Mel High school is basically the same as at the public high schools, although at the first-named the freshmen as well as the upper classmen are uniformed, and the cadets wear their uniforms five days a week instead of only two days, as is the case in the public high schools. The uniforms for the freshmen are supplied by the school itself.

There are 750 cadets at St. Mel, 525 upper classmen and 225 freshmen. This is the entire student body, as St. Mel is 100 per cent military. One may raise the question here as to how we reconcile the compulsory military training at this school with the statement near the beginning of the article that membership in the Chicago high school R. O. T. C. units is strictly voluntary. The explanation lies in the fact that St. Mel is only one of a number of Catholic high schools in the city. Any Catholic parent objecting to military training for his son may send the boy to a nonmilitary school. This also holds true with the Catholic boy who does not want military training. He can choose a nonmilitary school. There is no rule in the Chicago Catholic school system compelling any boy to attend St. Mel. So in effect military training in the church school system is as purely voluntary as it is in the public school system.

The professor of military science and tactics of St. Mel, as at all other units, is a regular army officer. He is Capt. George W. Busbey (cavalry), and as as-

NERVOUSNESS IN DOGS easily prevented! 4-generation feeding study shows way

230 pedigreed dogs have thrived on exclusive Pard-and-water ration! Not one case of nervousness, listlessness, excess shedding, dietary skin irritation.

● You've seen "jittery" dogs—dogs that are excitable, or addicted to barking spells.

Such victims of "nerves" occur frequently in the dog world. And you know that they are not the companions they should be.

Now, from a 4½-year feeding study at Swift's Research Kennels, comes a clue as to how you can prevent your dog from becoming nervous. 230 dogs, representing 4 consecutive generations, have participated in this study. All of them have been fed exclusively on Pard and water. And in not one instance has a dog been troubled with such common ailments as nervousness, excessive shedding, listlessness, or dietary skin irritation! In every case the record of weight and growth has been in accord with the standard for the breed.

Take advantage of these scientific findings. Put your dog on an exclusive diet of Pard!

The Snakes That Are Poisonous

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

IT WAS ONLY a scratch, a mere pricking of the skin of a finger, as might have been done with a pin. But in this case it was not a pin or a needle or any other relatively harmless object, but a fang of a Gaboon viper, one of the deadliest of poisonous snakes.

It was an accident, of course. To the uninformed it might seem to have been a trifling accident, yet only through the employment of the most heroic of measures (assisted by a kindly act of Providence) was it prevented from being stark tragedy.

R. Marlin Perkins, curator of reptiles of the St. Louis zoo, on the morning of the last day of the year 1928 had occasion in the course of his duties to handle a Gaboon viper, one of the inmates of the zoo. Inadvertently he permitted a hand to brush the reptile's head. Instantly he drew the hand back, although not quickly enough to keep one of the snake's fangs from scratching a finger. Mr. Perkins, familiar with the potency of snake venom, knew that he was in for trouble.

Almost immediately the finger began swelling. Excruciating pains shot up his arm. His head began to ache. The victim of the accident and a veterinarian of the zoo took turns sucking the wound to draw out the poison. Dizziness soon overtook Mr. Perkins. Within ten minutes after the accident he was given in the affected arm a hypodermic injection of antivenin, or snake-bite serum, of the type used to counteract the poison of American snakes. Cupping, or suction by mechanical means, also was resorted to in an effort to draw out the venom.

The highly poisonous king cobra, or hamadryad.

Soon the arm became badly swollen and the finger which had been scratched by the reptile's fang turned a deep purple, almost black. Fainter and slower grew the pulse, and faster and faster the respiration. In addition to the obviously frightful aspects of the case, the shock of the poison made the victim's suffering terrible. He literally had to fight for his breath. Within an hour and ten minutes he was unconscious.

For a while his pulse and respiration were scarcely discernible. In the hospital to which he had been taken physicians thought that he was dying. But they did not relax in their efforts to save his life. Strychnine was administered to stimulate his heart. Snake-bite serum of the type employed to counteract cobra poison then was injected into his system. In fact, during this struggle to save Mr. Perkins from death three different antivenins were administered to him in four different shots.

So great was the victim's loss of blood—this snake's poison being strongly of the kind that breaks up the blood corpuscles and attacks the lining of the blood vessels, permitting the blood to seep into the tissues of the body—that it was decided as a final resort to give him a blood transfusion. The transfusion, completed about seven hours after the accident, brought noticeable improvement in the patient's condition. Gradually he rallied and in a few hours was out of danger. But for months after he suffered from the devastating effects of the poison.

Fortunately, the only place outside of Africa where one would encounter a Gaboon viper would be in a zoo. There are no snakes so poisonous as this one in the area around Chicago. In actuality, in the territory immediately surrounding Chicago there is only one species that is poisonous, a relatively small snake, which, because its supply of venom is not nearly so plentiful as that of larger snakes, is not considered so dangerous as they. In this respect it might be made clear here that the danger from a snake bite depends a great deal upon the amount of venom injected by the snake, upon the condition of the person bitten—whether his heart is normal or diseased—and upon the size of the person bitten. A small child might much more readily succumb to a snake bite, for example, than a full-grown man.

Of the eighteen different species of snakes in the territory around and adjacent to Chicago the only species that is poisonous is the massasauga rattlesnake, one of the forms of which is indigenous to this area. The ratio of poisonous snakes to nonpoisonous in this region, however, is not one to seventeen, but rather one to several thousand, as the small rattlesnakes that inhabit a few restricted locations in this area are extremely rare.

Occasionally there is a rattlesnake scare in one of our forest preserves. Six years ago sixteen of the massasauga rattlers were captured and more than a score were killed in this particular preserve, which is located in the Wheeling area. In the tamarack bogs which lie back of the Indiana sand dunes these rattlesnakes occasionally are found. But so far as is known there have been no records of fatal bites from this species of snake in Chicagoland.

In the whole of the United States there are five main types of poisonous snakes. The rattlesnakes, of which there are twenty-six forms in this country, including species and subspecies, represent two of these types, the genera Crotalus and Sistrurus. Our particular massasauga rattlesnake belongs to the last-named genus. The third group includes the copperheads and water moccasins, which are closely related, although of quite dissimilar habits, the last-named being aquatic. The fourth and fifth types are represented by the coral snakes.

The closest to Chicago that copperheads can be found is within a belt lying about a hundred miles south of the city. These snakes, even within this belt, are restricted to certain favorable localities where the terrain is rough and the vegetation plentiful and thick. Water moccasins are said to be abundant in the extreme southern end of Illinois, ranging as far north as Jackson county. One type of coral snake is common as far north as Arkansas and Tennessee, while the other type is restricted to Arizona.

In the western part of Illinois and Wisconsin, along the Mississippi river, the timber or banded rattlesnake, a reptile reaching a maximum of six feet in length, still is found. This is a member of the same genus as the larger rattlesnakes of the south and southwest and is highly dangerous from the fact that its two poison glands contain a sizable amount of venom. According to Dr. H. K. Gloyd, director of the Chicago Academy of Sciences, there were timber rattlesnakes in the Chicago area about eighty years ago, the latest record of their presence in this area being for the year 1855. It also is believed that copperheads once were to be found in this region.

No one knows how many snakes there are in the world. To the scientists, however, are known more than 2,000 different species. And of these only about 350 are poisonous. In Australia alone there are more poisonous species than nonpoisonous, but in certain parts of the world, such as Panama and regions of Brazil, poisonous snakes outnumber the harmless ones because of the fact that the individuals of the poisonous species are more numerous than those of the nonpoisonous.

The approximately 350 species of venomous snakes can be divided in four main groups, as follows:

1. Cobras and coral snakes.
2. Poisonous sea snakes.
3. Vipers.
4. Pit vipers.

Fixed, short poison fangs are characteristic of the first two groups. In the last two groups the fangs are long, hinged, and movable. The fangs of a poisonous snake, which are two in number, are nothing more than highly specialized teeth in the front of the upper jaw. Each fang is perforated like a hypodermic needle, and each connects by means of a duct with a poison gland. The poison in the gland generally is a clear straw-colored liquid. It varies with the various types of snakes.

In the two groups comprising the cobras, coral snakes, and sea snakes the poison is characterized by a predominance of a neurotoxic agent, which causes paralysis, general prostration, and difficulty in breathing from its action on the nerves and nerve centers of the man or beast bitten. Venom of the snakes of the two groups made up of vipers and pit vipers is characterized by a predominance of a hemolytic agent, which has a tendency to break up the red corpuscles and to attack the arteries and capillaries of the circulatory system, allowing the victim's blood to escape into the tissues of the body. In each type of venom, however, may be found both the neurotoxic and the hemolytic agents, the proportion of one to the other depending upon the species of snake in question.

The cobras and coral snakes of the world are represented by about 160 known species, of which the most frequently mentioned in literature is the king cobra, or hamadryad, of southeastern Asia, a terrifying reptile that is highly poisonous and may reach a maximum length of eighteen feet. The king cobra, which feeds entirely upon other snakes, is provided with an extremely potent venom, although the maximum size of its poison glands does not equal the maximum size of the poison glands of the largest rattlesnake. Its poison, it is believed, is somewhat more potent than that of the rattlesnake.

More widespread and numerous than the king cobra is the common or spectacled cobra, that ranges through Asia from Persia to the Philippines. In India snakes of this kind are said to be responsible for more than 5,000 human deaths annually. In Africa there is still another cobra group which includes the haje (Egyptian cobra or asp) and the spitting cobra. In addition there is a form allied to the spitting cobra which is not a true cobra, but which is an even more deadly spitter of venom than the spitting cobra. This is the ringhals, or spyslange. These reptiles which spit their venom at their enemies are capable of expelling it a distance of six or eight feet. The venom, which flies out in the form of droplets rather than as a mist or spray, is essentially dangerous when it enters the eyes. How the snakes spit their poison still is a mystery.

Water moccasin, a venomous aquatic snake.

From available historical accounts it is believed that the haje or asp was the serpent employed by Cleopatra in committing suicide after the death of Mark Antony and after she had failed to make an impression on Antony's conqueror, Octavius. Some authorities, however, are of the opinion that the snake that killed the seductive Egyptian queen was the horned viper.

Included in the cobra-coral snake group is the mamba, an African reptile that reaches a maximum length of ten or twelve feet. So far as actual experiments have shown, this snake's venom is the most powerful of all. Only the largest and most venomous of the poisonous sea snakes may possibly be as deadly as the mamba, although there have been no experiments to prove or disprove this possibility. There is a report of a human being dying in less than a minute after having been bitten by a black mamba.

A considerable number of poisonous snakes in Australia belong to the cobra and coral snake group, many species of which have no common names. In Africa there is a large banded water cobra that is distinctly apart from the other African cobras. The coral snakes are the only relatives of the cobras that are found in the new world. In Africa and Australia are small types of snakes resembling the coral snakes.

The krait of India, publicized by Kipling, is a relative of the cobras. It is a very poisonous snake, although it is mild-mannered and will stand for a great deal of familiarity before it decides to bite. It always has been thought to be a relatively small snake, because Kipling so described it, but actually there are some of its group that frequently attain a length of six feet.

Cobras are characterized by their ability to dilate the neck laterally to form a broad disk or hood, but many snakes of their group, including the coral snakes, cannot do this.

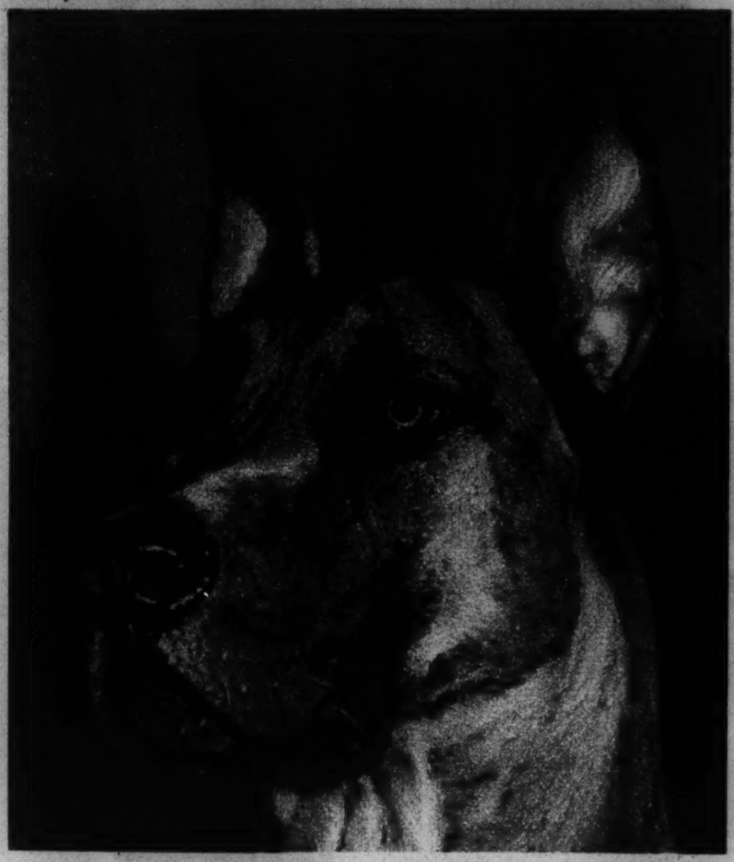
Mostly About Dogs

By BOB BECKER

It's Cleanup Season for Dogs, Too



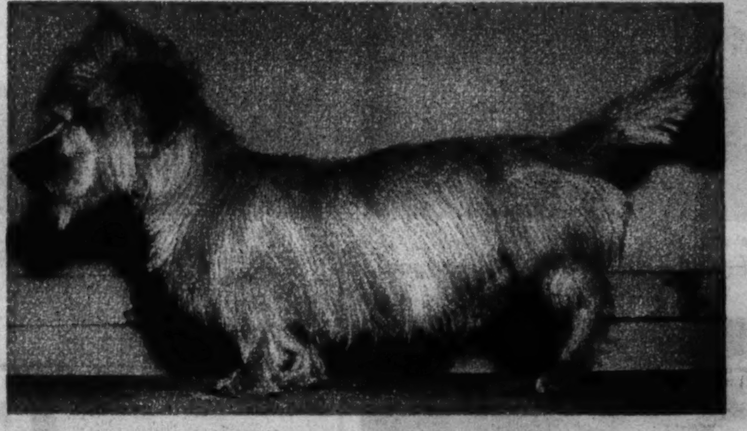
Although he's only nine months old, this Great Dane, Tiger Baron von Krumdik, was judged the best working dog in a puppy match.

THE ARRIVAL of spring is a reminder to all of us in the northern tier of states that it's time to clean up our yards, work on our lawns, and maybe do a little extra cleaning and painting around the home. The wise dog owner also includes his pet in this general cleanup movement.

We have an opportunity to see many dogs that are kept as pets. The thing that constantly amazes us is the number of owners who will spend no end of time teaching their pets tricks and will spend money on all kinds of good looking blankets, leashes, and playthings for their pets, yet never give their time or money to the things that a dog needs especially at this season of the year.

First on the list is attention to the dog's coat. Practically all of the pets with long or fairly long hair naturally grew pretty heavy coats during the cold months. Now it's time for these dogs to shed this coat and grow a new and lighter spring coat. If owners want to do something for their pets here is the chance. All dogs that are shedding their old winter coats can use plenty of brushing and combing and an occasional warm bath accompanied by vigorous massaging of the skin. Such a warm bath loosens the old dead hair and thus enables to dog to get rid of it quickly. Cocker spaniels, springer spaniels, and other breeds with similar coats especially need this skin and coat treatment.

The spring cleanup time routine that we have for our dogs includes not only a skin and coat treatment which makes them healthier, more comfortable, and better looking, but it also includes a cleaning of their teeth and a shortening of their nails. For example, here is what we did for our Sealyham recently: His hair was too long, which gave him a rough and ragged appearance. Anyway, with warmer days ahead we want him to have less coat. So we went to the "barber shop." After a haircut he was given a bath, which made him feel better and look better. Now he has little if any dead hair on his body, with consequent less irritation to his skin.



This Dandie Dinmont terrier, Beau of Athlea, was best of breed at a recent all-breed dog show. It's owned by Miss Leona E. Stillwagon. The Dandie Dinmont is one of our oldest terrier breeds, although not well known in the United States. (Tribune photos.)

The next step in the spring cleanup called for attention to his nails. They were getting too long, a common condition among dogs kept in the home much of the time. So the terrier was given a manicure. When a pet's nails are too long they scratch floors. The final job in our spring cleanup routine called for a checkup of his ears. Here is another point of dog care all too frequently neglected, a fact that was brought home to us just a few days ago when we saw a house dog (a terrier) in a friend's home. This little terrier was constantly pawing at its ears. The dog was giving every hint it could to the owner that it needed a veterinarian's attention.

Inasmuch as many dogs kept as house pets get much fairly soft food in their diets, it's not unusual for them to need attention to their teeth. There are some dogs that develop considerable amounts of tartar on their teeth, another reason for taking the pet to the veterinarian. If the tartar isn't removed the pet is going to get into trouble.

A great favorite in America during the gay nineties, the pug dog is again winning friends. The dog pictured is Champion Gin Fiss, owned by Edna Hillgamyer.

Poland's Air Strength

By WAYNE THOMIS

Pilots and ground crews of new Buffalo twin-engined bombers.

(Acme photos.)

A squadron of single-seater training planes.

POLAND'S air force—now one of the best in Europe—had its beginning in 1919 in a French café where a rowdy group of young American fighting pilots gathered to drink while waiting to return to the United States. One of this number, Cedric C. Fauntleroy of Chicago, heard how desperately the Polish legions were battling the Red Russian hordes that were pressing westward on them from the Ukraine.

That war had started about the time the fighting ended in central Europe, and Fauntleroy was able to enlist twelve other Americans for service with the Poles. With the aid of the French government the contingent was shipped across Germany in a Red Cross train. Once in Poland, the flyers were equipped with German Albatross and Fokker airplanes and placed under command of a former Austrian air corps flyer, Col. Ludomil Rayski, who had returned to his homeland after a distinguished career fighting the Allies.

The Americans became the famous Kosciusko flying squadron and remained in the service of the Poles until in 1921, when the Russian invasion was halted on every front. The Polish high command gave to the Americans and to subsequently organized Polish air squadrons a large share of the credit for winning the war. The exploits of the airmen convinced the Polish generals that the airplane was an effective war weapon, and the lesson never has been forgotten.

Today Colonel Rayski has become Brigadier General Rayski and is chief of the air corps. Through his efforts and the support of the army Poland has organized a half dozen governmentally subsidized aircraft and engine factories, three flight training centers, and has maintained a strong corps of fighting pilots whose skill compares favorably with that of any airmen in the world. The latest equipment of the Polish air force also is regarded as comparable with the best military planes of any other nation.

Polish planes pictured in this article were built in Polish factories to designs of Polish aircraft engineers.

Most effective of these machines is the P-27, built by the state aircraft factory (P. L. Z.) at Ocicie, near Warsaw. It is a twin-engined medium bomber built to the formula that has become nearly standard throughout the world—midwing, all-metal monoplane. It has a retractile undercarriage, each leg of which carries two small wheels. The motors are Bristol Pegasus or French Gnome-Rhone fourteen-cylinder radials developing between 1,000 and 1,200 horsepower for takeoff.

With the Bristol engines the bomber has a top speed at 12,000 feet of 273 miles an hour, and with the slightly smaller although more powerful French engines its speed at 14,000 feet is 286 miles an hour. With a 4,800-pound bomb load the cruising range is 930 miles. With a 3,850-pound load the range is increased to 1,615 miles. The plane carries a crew of four and is armed with three machine guns, one firing from the nose and two others firing backward.

This is an unusually efficient plane, for it lands at less than sixty miles an hour when loaded to its maximum gross weight of 18,700 pounds. Part of this slow-landing performance is due to Handley-Page automatic slots installed along the entire leading edges of the wings and to split flaps that extend from the ailerons inward to the fuselage. The bomb racks are arranged to carry any sizes of projectiles. They will hold twenty of the 110-pound bombs, or two of the 3,000-pound each type. Intermediate sizes can be carried in comparable quantities. This machine is known as the Buffalo type—a designation as yet unexplained.

Closeup of gunner in transparent nose of Buffalo bomber.

Poland's single-seat fighter planes also were built by the P. L. Z. plant. Those currently in service are admittedly obsolete, being high-wing, externally braced monoplanes with fixed landing gear. A newer and later type of low-wing monoplane fighter with retractile undercarriage and an in-line motor has just been delivered to the air corps for service test. This newest fighter, called the Wolf type, still is considered a military secret and neither photographs nor information concerning it have been released.

The P. L. Z. P-24 fighters have top speed with Gnome-Rhone motor of 900 horsepower of 267 miles an hour at 15,000 feet. They have a range of 450 miles and cruising duration at reduced throttle of three hours.

These single-seaters are armed either with two 20-mm. (about .80-caliber) Oerlikon quick-firing cannon, or four 7.7-mm. machine guns that are the equivalent of the light .30-caliber machine gun used in the United States military services. The plane weighs 4,200 pounds when loaded, considerably less than the latest single-seaters of this country.

The Polish reconnaissance machine is the P. L. Z.-43, a single-engined plane that looks much like the Northrop A-17 attack planes of the air corps. It also has the fourteen-cylinder two-row Gnome-Rhone motor of 900 horsepower and a fixed undercarriage. It is a low-wing monoplane carrying a crew of three. Top speed is 226 miles an hour at 13,000 feet.

Polish training schools are at Deblin, Warsaw, and Bydgoszcz. The three air corps wings are at these same stations. Aircraft factories other than at Ocicie are at Lublin and at Biala Podlaska. There are some 600 pilots and 500 first-line fighting planes in the corps.

America's R. O. T. C.

sistants he has a staf sergeant detailed from the army and a retired master sergeant hired by the school. The school is supplied by the government with uniforms and rifles just as are the public high schools. There are enough rifles so that every boy required to carry one is thus supplied. The military curriculum of St. Mel is the same as that of the public high schools, although its 100 per cent R. O. T. C. enrollment permits more emphasis on some parts of the course.

Cadets of St. Mel are organized in a regiment of three battalions under a cadet colonel. Students of the three upper classes form two of the battalions, and the freshmen make up the third. The school has a cadet band of fifty pieces and a cadet drum and bugle corps of fifty pieces.

Each year shortly before the end of the school term in the spring the high school R. O. T. C. units of Chicago stage a grand review or a parade in which all participate. In most recent years this annual get-together has taken the form of a parade. The next one is scheduled for June 2.

There are other occasions, however, when the cadets may appear together, such as on holidays. All appearances in public by the uniformed schoolboys have to have the sanction of school authorities.

The government supplies each school with a national flag. School colors are provided from outside sources. Each year the various regiments and battalions are inspected by army officers detailed for the purpose and are rated as regards excellence. The army officers who take part in this federal inspection are chosen from among those who have had no hand in the training of the school cadets and thus are interested no more in one regiment or battalion than another.

The Chicago Tribune each year awards two sets of colors (national and school flags) to the groups with the two highest ratings. These awards are only to the R. O. T. C. high schools within the city.

But in addition The Tribune twice annually awards medals to the cadets who have distinguished themselves in the opinion of their military instructors. The Tribune medals are distributed on the basis of one to every fifty cadets enrolled, the medals going not only to cadet officers but to noncommissioned officers and privates as well, and also to freshmen who are being given military instruction but who in the strictest sense are not R. O. T. C. members.

The Tribune medals, which number about 500 a year, are distributed among thirty-four schools. These are the twenty-seven Chicago public high schools that have R. O. T. C., St. Mel, three public high schools of Gary, Ind.; one of Evanston, one of Waukegan, and one of Joliet.

The three Gary schools are not in the 6th corps area, but in the 5th corps area, which embraces Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio, and West Virginia. The Evanston Township High school cadet body is not a part of the R. O. T. C., but rather falls under a separate classification of so-called 55 C schools, from the fact that these schools are provided with certain forms of government aid under section 55 C of the national defense act. In the 6th corps area other schools under the 55 C classification are the Glenwood Manual Training school of Glenwood, Ill., and the Roosevelt Military academy of Aledo, Ill. The country's total number of cadet enrollees in the 55 C schools, according to last fall's figure, is 9,861.

In addition to The Tribune, various other patriotic organizations and groups provide awards in the form of medals semi-annually to Chicago R. O. T. C. cadets. These awards all are authorized by Colonel Morrison—and they must be earned.

It is obvious in considering the quality of instruction that the high school boy who is a member of the R. O. T .C. is provided with a sound foundation of military subjects. This is not of such advanced type as that provided for the R. O. T. C. member of the senior division, but it is not intended to be.

Military instruction in high schools has a definite aim that is separate and apart from any remote idea of turning the boy into a soldier. High school R. O. T. C. courses are given purely upon the basis of their educational value. Education in this sense is preparation for life and leadership. Educators recognize that discipline is a part of education, as are promptness and team work. For the R. O. T. C. boy these virtues are stressed in his instruction. They are of inestimable value in civil life.

The high school cadet learns directness of speech. He can be picked out from among other boys because of this advantage. He learns to be courteous. His military instruction destroys slovenliness and instils in him the idea of cleanliness and orderliness both in mind and in body.

The cadet acquires self-respect, overcomes timidity, and gradually absorbs the qualities of leadership. He cannot give orders unless he has learned how to receive them. This all leads to good citizenship, an asset to civil government.

"The finest thing that a boy learns in the R. O. T. C. is how to work with others," says Colonel Morrison. "As his instruction progresses and he rises to be a noncommissioned officer or a commissioned officer he receives real training in leadership. He learns how to handle his kind.

"There are 600 commissioned officers and 1,900 noncommissioned officers in our unit, and they all are getting training in leadership. Even the cadet private gets his opportunity to display ability. He learns discipline and respect for authority, improves his bearing and personal appearance, and quickly comes to realize the value of politeness to every one.

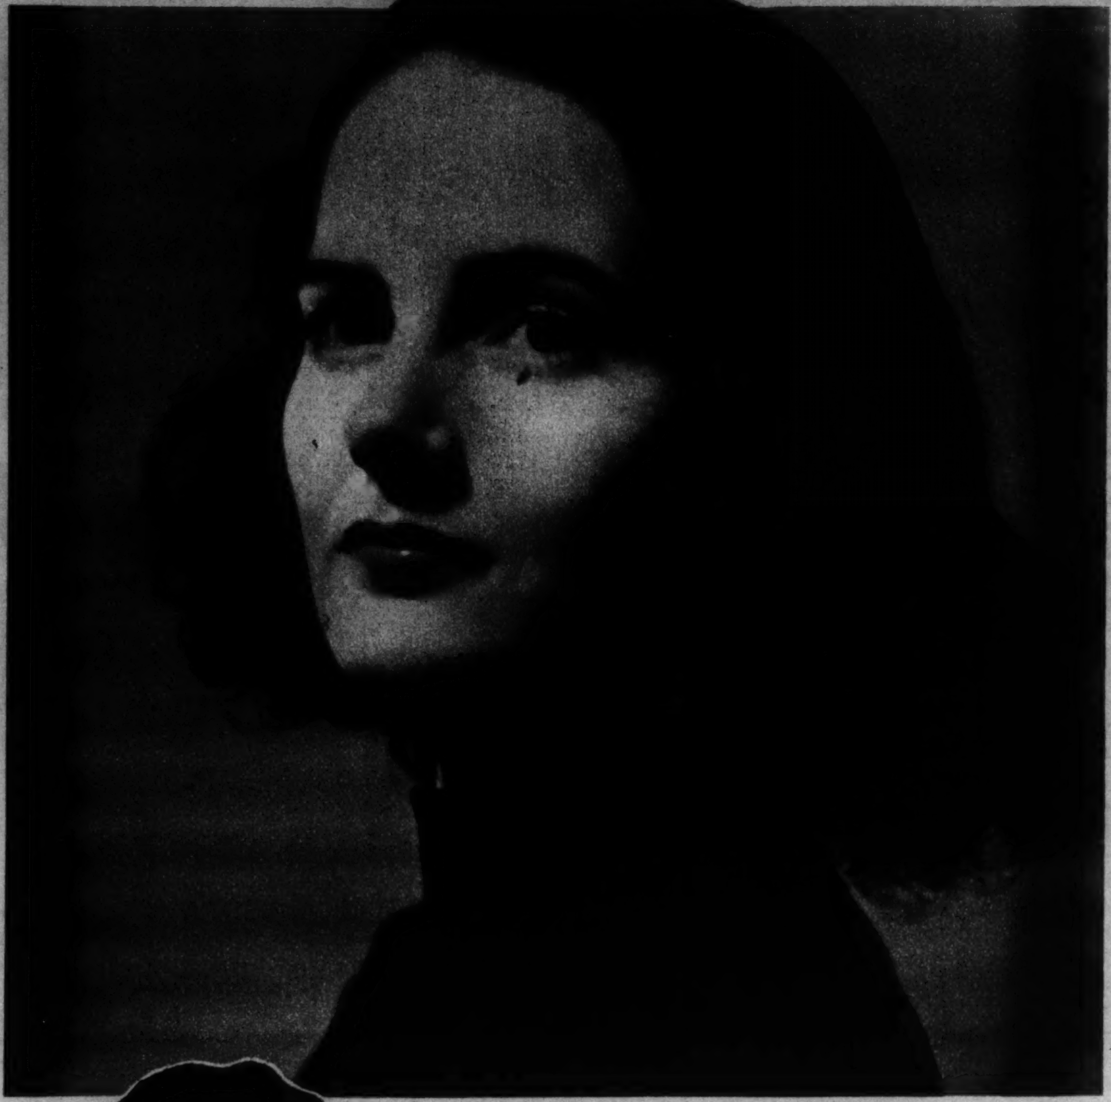
"R. O. T. C. instruction not only is of great value to the boys themselves but to the nation as well, for it provides first-class men for all walks of life. The instruction is particularly good for those boys who wish to enroll in the senior R. O. T. C."

Said General Ford, the 6th corps area commander, in a recent address over W-G-N on the occasion of the first annual tribute to the R. O. T. C.:

"The Reserve Officers' Training corps . . . constitutes today the hope and faith of our country for its prosperity, wealth, and security in the future. Higher education has for its purpose the training of men for positions of leadership and responsibility in war as well as in peace."

For first-hand knowledge of the R. O. T. C. and what it has done for Chicago high school boys the reader is advised to resort to personal observation. Let him turn out on June 2 to see the boys parade in their next annual get-together.

Hair Conditioning Rules the Permanent Waves



1 If your eye doesn't, your fingers can tell you almost exactly how receptive your hair will be to a new permanent. Healthy hair stretches and springs back; dry, brittle hair breaks when you pull it.

By ELEANOR NANGLE

THE BEAUTY experts are pretty well agreed now that for the last several years women have been sacrificing hair health on the altar of hair beauty. This is not meant as any reflection on the cult or the technique of hair grooming—but there's every reason to suspect that women's very preoccupation with hair fashions has made them lose perspective on the importance of scalp health. We haven't seen the scalp for the waves, so to speak.

There is entirely too much devitalized hair to be seen these days. The woman whose hair is utterly lusterless and unmanageable knows it; so does the beauty operator whose permanent wave failures are coming too fast for comfort. Both are now in complete agreement on the need for hair and scalp reconditioning, because future waves will be failures if the devitalization is unchecked. Healthy, elastic hair is the best form of permanent wave insurance we've ever heard of.

Behind scenes in the beauty industry experiments on preparations or methods that will restore elasticity to brittle hair have been going on night and day. And it's beginning to appear that we're getting somewhere!

The manufacturers of one shampoo are pleased as Punch with their laboratory's findings on a pre-permanent treatment, and at a recent trade show beauticians who saw the noble experiment demonstrated were a little wild with excitement over it. It's extremely simple and appears to do wonders. With our own hot little hands we pulled hair strands to see how effectively stretch was restored to hair that had previously been so brittle it would break almost at a touch.

The shampoo is applied generously to the dry hair, but is not massaged into the scalp. This done, you're popped under the steamer until the operator's finger tests show that the hair will stretch like a rubber band. When every hitherto brittle hair strand is showing the proper amount of healthy bounce the shampoo proper is given. This shampoo is used rather differently than others. Small amounts of warm water are added and scalp massage is vigorous; lather is removed in handfuls and water added until no more lather forms. Rinsing follows and the hair is dried just as it usually is before a wave.

The scientific explanation of the restoration of elasticity by this simple treatment we can't give you; it baffles us completely. But the results were more than a little astonishing. Steaming time was usually reduced considerably, and hair that was distinctly difficult, of lifeless texture and sickening brittleness, took a wave as though it had never been waved before. All you spring permanent shoppers should take note.

2 A new pre-permanent treatment to restore elasticity begins with the application of a special shampoo to the unmoistened hair strands.

(Tribune Studio photos.)

3 At right: When the hair is well soaked it is steamed in until it has sufficient elasticity to be subjected successfully to heat and winding.

4 The shampoo involves vigorous scalp massage and complete hair and scalp cleansing, followed by thorough rinsing.

5 The hair is now well prepared for the permanent. It has far more stretch and spring than it had before. Less heat will be necessary, and the hair strands will not break readily.

6 It's all over. No fuzziness to stamp the wave as a failure; no dried-out look. Instead, lots of natural luster and the wide, soft indentations that mark the successful permanent.

Biscuits Become Versatile

Old Standby Does New Service

By MARY MEADE

HERE ARE two new variations of the baking powder biscuit. One is an orange roll, suitable for any nice party meal; the other is a sausage "shortcake," to be served as a main luncheon dish, with a topping of cheese sauce.

Make your own biscuit foundation or use a prepared mix. Either way you'll be happy over what comes out of the oven.

And the best part about both kinds of biscuit is the twinkling-time in which they may be prepared.

SAUSAGE SHORTCAKES

(Serves four)

1 pound bulk sausage
2 cups prepared biscuit mix
⅝ cup milk
½ pound American cheese
⅓ cup milk

Make small patties of the sausage meat and fry them. Blend biscuit mix and ⅝ cup milk. Roll to a fourth inch in thickness. Cut with a 2½-inch biscuit cutter. On half the biscuits place sausage patties. Cover with remaining biscuits and press edges together with the tines of a fork. Prick top of each shortcake with a fork. Bake in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees) for fifteen to twenty minutes. Serve with cheese sauce topping.

For topping melt the cheese slowly in the top of a double boiler. Add milk gradually, stirring until the sauce is smooth. Serve at once.

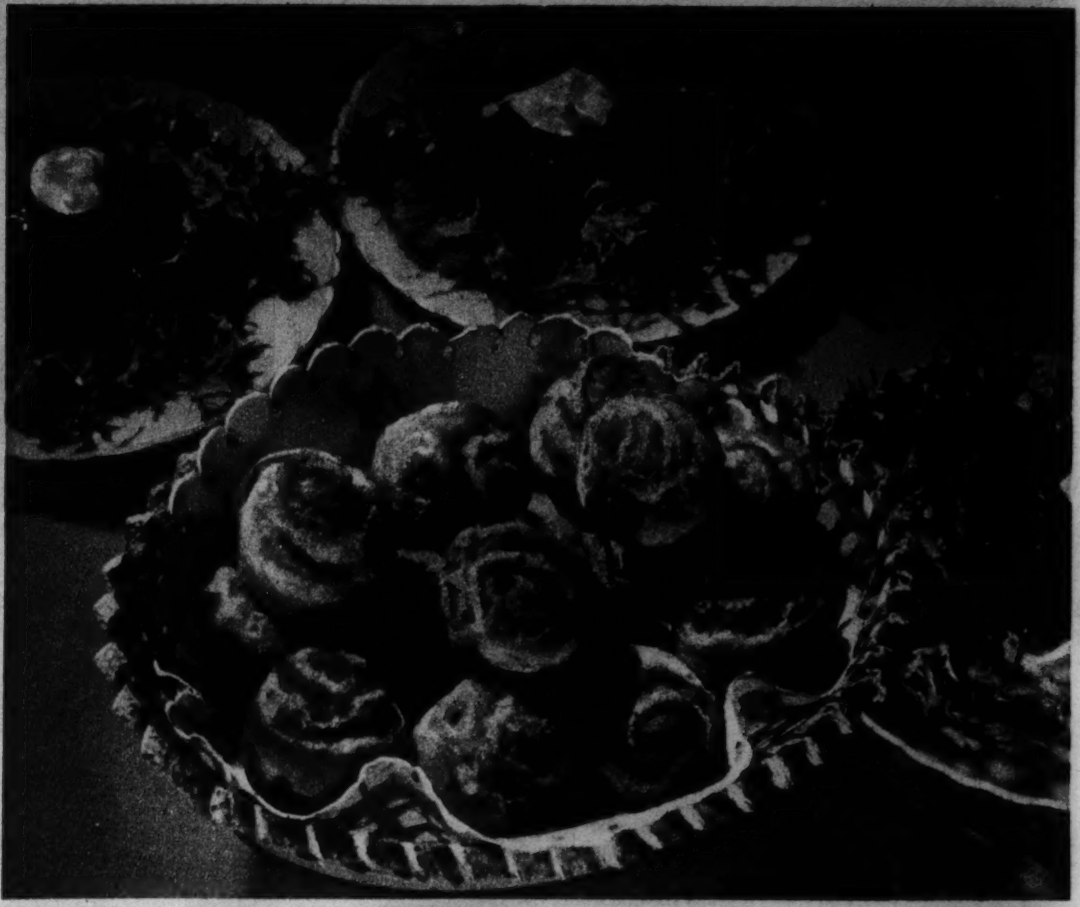
QUICK ORANGE ROLLS

(1½ dozen small)

2 cups sifted flour
2 tablespoons sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup shortening
1 egg
½ cup orange juice

Orange sugar spread: ½ cup sugar, grated rind of ½ orange.

Sift flour, sugar, baking powder, and salt together. Cut or rub in the shortening. Beat egg, add orange juice, and add to dry ingredients. Blend with a fork until dry ingredients are moist. Turn out on a lightly floured board, knead gently for thirty seconds, and roll out into a rectangular sheet a fourth inch thick. Brush with melted butter, sprinkle with orange sugar, and roll jelly roll fashion. Cut into one-inch slices. Put each slice cut side down into a greased muffin cup. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees) for fifteen minutes. Serve hot. Orange sugar may be stored in a tightly covered jar to be used as desired. The sugar should be thoroughly mixed with orange rind.



Don't these orange rolls look good? They're simple to make, too.

A sausage is hiding in the middle of each of these biscuits.

AT THE PEAK OF Health!

"Try Saraka —the modern laxative with exercising action"

"Exercising action" is the reason why Saraka* has helped so many people to come out on top in their struggle for better intestinal health. You know how outdoor sport exercises your body. Saraka tones up the intestinal muscles by giving them internal exercise.

"Exercising action" (see scientific explanation below) is the reason why we are able to say "Saraka is not a habit-forming laxative." Since this action tends to strengthen the intestinal muscles, many users find that they are gradually able to cut down their dose.

Another thing you'll like about Saraka's exercising action is this: The results are not violent or unpleasant. In most cases, they do not resemble diarrhea. There is no embarrassing urgency. No feeling of weakness the day after taking. "It's very thorough," many users report, "but you have none of the disagreeable sensations that usually go with taking a laxative."

Saraka is a new laxative—but already many thousands of men and women are taking it on their doctors' prescriptions. Ask your own doctor about Saraka. Get his expert opinion on its "exercising action." You will find this modern laxative at your druggist's. Or mail the coupon below for a free trial-size tin. See for yourself how pleasant Saraka is to take. And how pleasant after taking.

*Two ingredients are responsible for "exercising action." First is bassorin (sap of an East Indian tree) in the form of tiny granules which expand into smooth BULK. This extra bulk encourages lazy intestinal muscles to get busy — helps make them stronger workers for your better health. The second ingredient is specially-treated cortex frangula which mildly stimulates the intestines to keep the bulk in motion. So you have a two-fold, balanced action— Bulk Plus Motility

THOUSANDS NOW "ALKALIZE" WHILE THEY SLEEP

If You Over-Indulge take "Phillips'" at Bedtime to wake up with a smile—no sign of acid stomach

Try This Way—See How Clear Your Head Feels Next Day

Next time you eat too much—smoke too much—or drink unwisely—do as thousands now do to wake up feeling like a million—that is, alkalize while you sleep.

What you do is take 2 tablespoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water—AT BEDTIME.

While you sleep, this wonderful alkalizer will be sweetening your stomach . . . easing the upset-feeling and nausea . . . helping to bring back a "normal" feeling. By morning you feel great.

Then—when you wake—take two more tablespoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia with the juice of a whole orange.

Try this way. See how clear your head feels next day. Notice the absence of dullness and "depression" due to excess stomach acidity.

But—when you buy, make sure you get the Real Article—now either in liquid or handy tablets. Never ask for "milk of magnesia" alone—always ask for "Phillips'" Milk of Magnesia—the kind many doctors endorse.

NOW, CORN IN TEMPTING "BUBBLES" TO GIVE YOU:-

Something NEW for Breakfast!

Looks Different, Tastes Different... Contains 4 Added Food-Elements not combined in any other well-known Corn Cereal! (AND READ HOW IT STAYS CRISP IN MILK OR CREAM!)

A FEW YEARS AGO the largest millers in America started out deliberately to see if they could give you something really NEW for breakfast . . . Something that would taste different, look different . . . And have more all-round nourishment than any other well-known corn cereal.

And—today—as a result—we offer you corn KIX. It is different. It looks different. It tastes different. And it's going like wild-fire wherever we've introduced it!

Corn KIX comes in bubbles. Airy, dainty bubbles, tempting and delicate. Bubbles that don't get all soaked in the bottom of your dish. In fact, scientific tests actually prove they stay crisp longer than flat flake cereals do. They're made to stay crisper!

But here's still better news! We've added four food-elements to KIX.

We Consulted Nutrition Authorities! Before making corn KIX we consulted important nutrition authorities. Then we fortified it with four food-elements not combined in any other corn cereal, to the best of our knowledge.

We added Vitamin B. That's the vitamin needed to help promote appetite and the health of the nerves.

Then we "sprayed" corn KIX with Vitamin D. That's the vitamin needed for the bones and teeth.

Next, we added Calcium and Phosphorus, two minerals vitally needed for bodily development.

Thus KIX helps balance the diet. Helps combat certain common dietary deficiencies when served daily. Get a package today. KIX is made by General Mills, Inc., Minneapolis.

"TASTES AS GOOD AS IT LOOKS!"

"Mm-m! Corn KIX is ever so much better than any cereal I ever tasted before. Mummy says it's good for me, too . . . I'm going to eat it every morning from now on. I like to eat it plain out of the box too—between meals—because it's so crunchy!"—This little girl's statement is typical of thousands everywhere!

When Nature needs help try LEMON with SODA

TAKEN first thing daily on arising or the last thing every night, it's beneficial in two ways. It has a natural, gentle laxative effect for most people, hence, aids elimination.

Second, it helps keep the system normally alkaline, and adds the additional protection of vitamin C found abundantly in lemon juice.

1. Squeeze juice of one Sunkist lemon into tall glass half full of water. 2. Put half teaspoonful of bicarbonate soda in another glass. 3. Pour back and forth rapidly. 4. Drink when foaming subsides.

It is non-habit forming, non-irritating. Try it 10 days. See if you don't benefit.

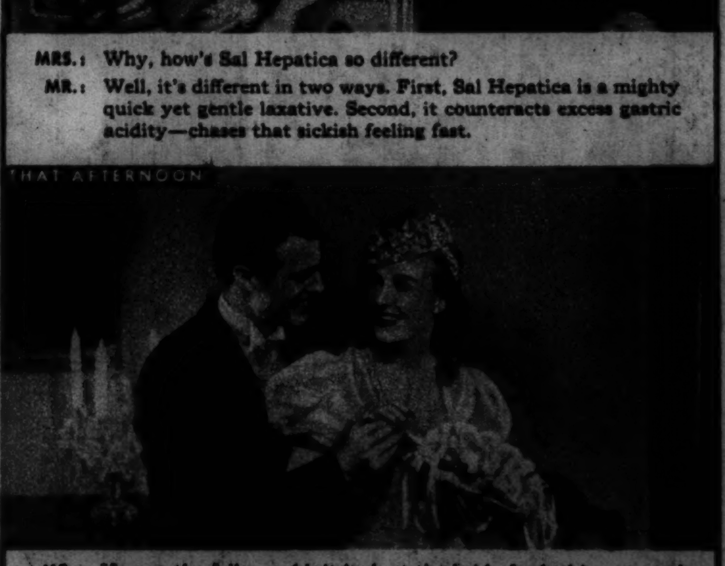
Stage a quicker come-back—take Sal Hepatica

MRS.: Isn't this just like me? The day I'm to be matron of honor at a big wedding, I wake up with the worst logy headache. Even a laxative won't clear my head in time.

MR.: I know one that will—Sal Hepatica.

MRS.: Why, how's Sal Hepatica so different?

MR.: Well, it's different in two ways. First, Sal Hepatica is a mighty quick yet gentle laxative. Second, it counteracts excess gastric acidity—chases that sickish feeling fast.



MR.: Honey, the folks couldn't look at the bride for looking at you! You look like a million dollars!

MRS.: I feel like a million dollars—thanks to you and your glass of sparkling Sal Hepatica. It certainly put the old sparkle back in me!

FLAVORED WITH MALT, SUGAR AND SALT
THE ORIGINAL HAS THIS SIGNATURE—
W.K. Kellogg

MADE BY KELLOGG COMPANY
WEATHER-PROOF WRAP
(U.S. PATENT NO. 1824

EXCLUSIVE NEW "WEATHER-PROOF WRAP" NOW BRINGS YOU AN ENTIRELY NEW FLAVOR SENSATION IN KELLOGG'S CORN FLAKES!

Listen to THE CIRCLE, a new idea in radio entertainment, Sunday nights, NBC stations

Moisture is the enemy of cereal freshness! Every woman knows that dampness and exposure to air can rob a ready-to-eat cereal of its flavor and freshness—make it limp and flat-tasting. Unless it's effectively protected against the weather on the way from the maker to you, a cereal can quickly lose its original crispness and taste. You know from experience that this sometimes happens!

For years Kellogg has been experimenting. In 1920, Kellogg introduced the original "wax-tite inner wrap" to guard the famous flavor of Kellogg's Corn Flakes. It was highly effective! But still Kellogg was not satisfied. Countless experiments and tests have been constantly in progress to find a still better wrap!

Kellogg's
CORN FLAKES

Greatest improvement in 20 years! Now, Kellogg introduces the sensational new "WEATHER-PROOF WRAP." Made of a newly-discovered material up to ten times more effective than ordinary cereal wrappers in keeping moisture out and flavor in! The only inner container heat-sealed at both top and bottom!

MY! LOOK AT NANCY DIGGING IN!
NO WONDER! I NEVER TASTED ANY CEREAL SO FRESH AND CRISP!

Super-fresh in the "WEATHER-PROOF WRAP." Once you've tasted Kellogg's toasted Corn Flakes in the new "Weather-Proof Wrap"—exclusive with Kellogg—you'll never again be satisfied with any cereal packed the ordinary way! It's an entirely new flavor sensation. These famous, golden-brown corn flakes now reach you at the very peak of their goodness . . . crisp, tender and more delicious than ever! So delicious that they're eaten up fast—instead of wastefully remaining on your pantry shelf. Order a package of Kellogg's Corn Flakes tomorrow . . . enjoy them frequently for breakfast, for lunch, for a light, bedtime snack.
